Chinese Form Fresh Battle Lines Along Creek Banks

Foreigners Help Needy Refugees

British Announce They Will Return Fire of Any Attackers.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Oct. 28.—Shanghai's defenders fought today with their backs to the Soochow Creek on the border of the International Settlement.

Across the stream, at barricades on the south bank, United States Marines watched the shifting battle-front under orders to shoot in self-defense at any airplane attacking them or noncombatants.

Admiral Harry Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, authorized the protective orders when the Chinese retreat on the northern edge of the International Settlement brought intense fighting close to the foreign zone.

British Plan to Shoot Back.

In London, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told a cheering House of Commons Britain had informed Japan British soldiers henceforth "always" would retaliate with fire against any attack on a British post.

The foreign secretary asserted that the Japanese air attack on British positions in Shanghai on October 24, when one soldier was killed, was "inexcusable." He declared the British troops were "entirely justified" in shooting at the warplane. Eden disclosed the government had accepted Japan's apology for the air attack.

Official quarters announced Great Britain had no intention of evacuating her nationals from Shanghai's International Settlement.

Japanese planes strafed Chinese troops retreating from Chapei and one, British authorities said, opened fire with machine guns on British outposts near Jessfield Park. The British said they answered the fire and believed they struck the Japanese plane.

Further upstream, to the west of the International Settlement, the Chinese were intrenched on the south side of the creek, defending a narrow strip of the native city between the stream and the foreign area.

Flames Cover Retreat.

The Chinese dug in on their new line after withdrawing from historic Chapei, seared by miles of flame from fires started yesterday when the defense collapsed.

The conflagration was caused both by Chinese leaving fires to cover their retreat and by Japanese shells and incendiary bombs.

In Tokyo, the Japanese war office officially placed Japanese casualties in the war with China at 9,640 slain, as of October 24. No figures for wounded were given.

(Officials said their records showed that 5,173 soldiers had been killed on the Shanghai front and that the campaign in North China had cost 4,467 lives.

(The war office also estimated total Chinese losses on all fronts in the conflict had reached 425,000 dead and wounded with 25,000 dead around Shanghai.)

Uncontrolled fire, whipped by a southerly wind, stretched from near Kiangwaw, north of the International Settlement, south through Chapei to the edge of the foreign zone and west for an unknown number of miles.

In one area where the flames jumped the creek 150 buildings were burned.

Jealous Suitor Held in Slaying Of Va. Widow

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 27.—Authorities provided a jealousy motive tonight for the slaying of Mrs. Mattie Crawford Douglas, 31, a widow of only four weeks, shot in the head today as she stood in the rain beside her automobile talking with a man believed to have been one of her suitors.

An employe of the State highway department, Eugene Batten, 30, of Charlottesville, was being held in the county jail here after confessing the slaying to Deputy Sheriff Abbot Smith, according to the officer.

Batten Calls for Widow.

Davis told authorities he and Mrs. Douglas were putting up preserves at the Georgetown home when Batten called and told her to accompany him in her car. Davis and his brother, Roy, went along.

Batten drove for about two miles without saying a word, Davis related. Then he stopped the car at the intersection of the Georgetown road and the Washington highway, about 100 yards from the Spencer filling station.

Batten commanded the widow to get out of the car. She complied without comment. He followed her to the rear of the car where, Davis said, he heard Batten cry out:

"I want to kill you!"

Davis said at this point he got out of the car and ran to Batten, who was holding a shotgun belonging to the widow in his hand, exclaiming:

Fails to See Shooting.

Davis said he was taking off his coat as he was getting out of the car and that he didn't see Batten shoot. The shot was fired, he said, before he reached the rear of the machine.

Mrs. Douglas, widely known in the county for her beauty, died without making a plea for her life, Davis said. The charge from the gun blasted away most of her head.

Davis, who weighs 200, pounds told authorities he had seen Batten with the shotgun but thought nothing of it until he heard Batten utter the alleged desire to slay.

Batten, according to Davis' story,

Jupe Pluvius Halts Rain for Sham Battle Between Sailors and Marines; North Carolina Keel Laid at Brooklyn.

Although a lashing rain washed away nearly half the program, it did not deter 135,160 persons, the bulk of them boys and girls, from making the Navy Day pilgrimage to the Navy Yard yesterday.

Meanwhile, other ceremonies were taking place throughout the Nation to the keynote of peace "by all honorable means" set by President Roosevelt. In the Brooklyn, N. Y., Navy Yard they laid the keel of the new 35,000-ton super dreadnaught, North Carolina, which will cost $60,000,000 and will be the most powerful vessel afloat.

In Washington it was the worst Navy Day weather since the custom of holding open house was adopted 15 years ago.

But by way of compensation the rain enhanced the drama of the big, final spectacle—the sham battle between marines and sailors on the rain-soaked receiving station recreation field.

As one after another of the outdoor events was canceled, the question of whether there would be a battle was undecided until the last moment. The marines reported themselves willing to fight anywhere in any weather and the sail-

3 of 4 Missing Algic Seamen Sailing for U. S.

Face Arrest in New York by G-Men on Charge of Mutiny Plot.

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 27.—Three of the four sailors listed as "deserters" from the S. S. Algic on her ill-starred voyage to South America have been found.

They are working their way home aboard the S. S. West Selene, which sailed from Santos, Brazil, and is due in New York on November 8, where they face arrest by the Department of Justice.

The men are Clegg Lowder, James O. Lampkin and Robert Stewart. Like the 14 members of the Algic crew who are in jail here, they are charged in a Federal warrant with violating the mutiny laws by conspiring to deprive Capt. Joseph Gainard of his command while the vessel was at Montevideo, Uruguay.

The Algic, with a new crew and a new staff of officers, cleared from here today for Charleston, S. C., where she is to take on a cargo of lumber and, after stops at Savannah and Jacksonville, point for Buenos Aires and Montevideo—the same route of her last voyage, which was marked by a murder, a drowning, four desertions and three sit-down strikes.

Capt. John Gainard, skipper of the Algic on that trip, as well as his officers, are remaining behind

D.C. Realty Man Seized for Ohio Check Fraud

W. R. Parmelee Collapses at Arlington Home; Is Under Guard.

William R. Parmelee, president of the Toledo Guaranty Corporation, of Toledo, Ohio, and head of Parmelee, Inc., with offices in the Woodward Building, was arrested yesterday by Sheriff Howard B. Fields, of Arlington County, on six warrants issued in Toledo, charging Parmelee with "unlawfully" drawing checks." He collapsed when charges were read.

Claims aggregating $500,000 are filed against Parmelee's corporation in bankruptcy proceedings pending in Toledo. The organization is under investigation by the Ohio State securities division, the United States attorney's office there and the Post-office Department.

The arrest was made at the country home on Glebe road, Livingston Heights, which Parmelee occupied with his wife and daughter. Parmelee, on September 21 leased the house for a year from its owner, Frank Upman, an architect with offices at 808 Seventeenth street northwest.

Parmelee was attended by a physician, who reported he was suffering from shock and heart disease. Sheriff Fields permitted Parmelee to remain at home under guard.

Parmelee told the sheriff he would fight extardition.

Parmelee had lived in Toledo for five years and said that previously he had lived in Cleveland for 18 years. He claimed to own real estate in Miami, Fla., and sawmills and a lumber tract in West Virginia.

The Toledo Guaranty Corporation did a varied business, including the handling of financial claims and real estate developments

The realty concern known as Parmelee, Inc., was ostensibly engaged in the development of the Henderson Farm, a tract of several hundred acres on Lee Boulevard near East Falls Church. Some work had been done in clearing the land but no building had begun.

Riot Halts Landing of Japanese Mission at San Francisco Dock

San Francisco, Oct. 27 (U.P.).—Police and anti-Japanese demonstrators fought on the San Francisco Embarcadero tonight as a Japanese mission, sent to explain the empire's position in the undeclared war with China, arrived here.

Six men were arrested when they tried to break through reinforced police lines to enter Pier 25, where the Japanese party debarked from the N. Y. K. line's Tatsuta Maru.

The fighting climaxed a 90-minute demonstration by a crowd of at least 600, one-third of them Chinese, which delayed the departure from the ship of the notable Japanese — industrialists, publicists, statesmen—sent to the United States and Europe on the "educative mission."

Shouting, screaming, booing, catcalling, the demonstrators surged around the pavement outside the pier, blocking the automobile exit.

Blows were exchanged before police took six demonstrators to jail. Then more than 400 longshoremen who had been unloading the vessel, quit work for 15 minutes as a protest against "Japan's activities in China."

The Japanese delegation remained aboard until quiet was restored almost two hours after the vessel docked.

In the party were Kojiro Matsukata, one of Japan's foremost industrialists; Vice Admiral Takuo Godo, former minister of commerce and industry; Kitichiro Okura, jr., an industrialist; Hitosi Ashida, diplomat, and Yoso Nomura, head of the Yokohama Rotary Club.

Labor Talks Deadlocked, Off for Week

C. I. O. Rejects A. F. L. Proposal That It Dissolve.

Lewis Spokesmen Say Green Plan Means Their 'Surrender.'

By William V. Neusly.

Labor's peace conference was in a warlike deadlock last night, near collapse, with the American Federation of Labor warning that unless the Committee for Industrial Organization took a more helpful attitude no progress could be expected.

After three days of talk without accomplishment, the negotiating committees of the two union giants were in recess until next Thursday morning.

The third day of the peace conference, however, had brought these depressing developments:

A. F. L. Delegates Angered.

The A. F. of L. submitted its own proposals for peace, in effect rejecting the C. I. O. suggestions of the previous day, and demanding that the C. I. O. be immediately dissolved.

Quickly, the C. I. O. pronounced its opponents' reunion plan "unacceptable" as calling for "abject surrender," being merely a reaffirmation of former policy and a rejection of the principle of industrial organization in mass production and other industries.

A. F. of L. negotiators were angered upon learning that the C. I. O. groups had issued a press statement rejecting the A. F. of L. proposals, without the knowledge of the federationists, and declared that "such procedure seriously jeopardizes the possibility of success."

A. F. L. Offers Program.

Growing tension through the day reached a climax last night when George M. Harrison, leader of the federation peace committee, issued a statement severely criticizing the opposition's tactics in the conference, scoffing at the C. I. O. membership claims, and declaring "we have not received any help from the representatives of the C. I. O. in composing the existing differences." It declared the John L. Lewis organization must show "complete willingness" to approach the problems at issue "in a constructive spirit" if progress is to be made.

The day opened with presentation of the federation peace program which provided:

1. That the 12 C. I. O. unions which had been chartered originally by the A. F. of L. return to

Came Home Late, Girl, 17, Chained 2 Days in Coal Bin

Boston, Oct. 27 (A.P.).—Bound with chains about her ankles, a 17-year-old girl was found by police today in her Hyde Park home. Main Highways Flooded in W. Va.

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 27 (A.P.).—Streams swollen by almost unbroken three-day rainfall spread over two main West Virginia highways tonight to block traffic, and other rivers rose steadily.

U. S. Route 50 was blocked in the eastern Panhandle at Junction, and 2 miles west of Romney by Mills Creek, and at Weston the West Fork River surged up at the rate of a foot an hour to halt U. S. Route 19 traffic.

The road commission said the Shenandoah and Potomac rivers, in the eastern Panhandle, were rising steadily.

Reserve Board Alters Stock Market Policy; Boosts Shorts' Margin

Selling Requirement Is Increased to 50 Pct.; Buying Cut to 40.

New Regulations Take Effect Nov. 1

Move's Object Believed to Stabilize Prices After 'Orgy.'

By Robert C. Albright.

Abandoning its "hands off the market" policy, the Federal Reserve Board last night imposed a 50 per cent margin requirement on short sales of stock and reduced margins on stock buying from 55 to 40 per cent.

The new regulations, effective November 1, were announced without official interpretation of the altered policy, and without explanation of the probable effect on the stock market.

They appeared aimed at stabilizing and bolstering stock prices which have moved irregularly since last week's one-day selling spree caused official concern lest the damage spread to industry and employment.

First Margin Curb.

It was the first time the board has ever imposed any margin requirement on short selling, although a 10-point margin is independently required by the New York Stock Exchange.

Action followed reports of extensive short selling in last week's severe dip although the Securities and Exchange Commission, which closely studied all transactions, declined to name any "scapegoat."

The board is understood to have been working in close co-operation with the Securities and Exchange Commission but to have acted entirely on its own responsibility, without conferring with stock exchange officials.

Conferred With Roosevelt.

On Tuesday, Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the Maritime Commission, former SEC head, had conferred with the President at Hyde Park, presumably on the stock market situation.

The stiff 50 per cent margin imposed on short sales on and after November 1, will not require those now having short accounts to "cover" or "margin up." But on the first of next month short accounts having less than 50 per cent margin will become "restricted" and the 50 per cent requirement will apply on all new short commitments.

Some observers believed the board was moving from a more or less fixed to a flexible market policy in the future, adaptable to changes in the stock market situation.

Interest in Prices.

It appeared that the board was taking a definite interest in stock prices, as well as credit requirements, which in the past have been its dominating gauge.

Informed persons in Washington said the immediate effect of the 15 per cent slash in stock purchase margin, and the 50 per cent short selling loan restriction should be a leavening influence on stock prices. Lacking official explanation, it appeared that the move was designed for this purpose, taking into account the possible beneficial effect on commerce and agriculture.

Lowering of the existing 55 per cent Federal Reserve margin on stock purchases has been demanded for weeks by Wall street broker interests, who have blamed much of the recent stock price recession on

Path Is Opened For Farm Aid To 6 Industries

Inclusion of Dairymen in 'Granary' Plan Is Surprise.

The House Agriculture Committee yesterday opened a tentative path for six major farm industries, including dairying and rice, to share in the Administration-proposed "ever-normal granary" and surplus control program.

Five sub-committees were appointed by Chairman Marvin Jones to study ways and means of applying surplus control measures to specific farm commodities.

Sub-committees were directed to work out individual programs for tobacco, wheat, corn and cotton, in addition to dairy products and rice.

Another meeting of the full Agriculture Committee was called for tomorrow as the House group entered a race with the Senate Agriculture Committee, now in the field, to work out a comprehensive farm

Voice Recorded in Wax by Bell 56 Years Ago Heard as Original Graphophone Is Unsealed

"I am a graphophone and my mother was a phonograph," chanted a cracked falsetto voice in the Smithsonian Institution yesterday afternoon. The unseemly bit of nonsense shattered solemnity which until then had marked ceremonial opening of three boxes, checked at the Smithsonian back in 1881 by Alexander Graham Bell.

The voice issued from the original crude "graphophone" invented by Bell 56 years ago. He stored the machine, together with two "photophones," an earlier invention, to assure himself proof of the priority of his patents should litigation arise later.

Whether the voice was that of the scientist himself, who saw in his plan a chance to have a posthumous laugh at the expense of priority, no one ever will know. The sounds were so distorted that identification was impossible.

"That's not father," declared Bell's daughter, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, when the voice stopped.

"But it's just like something he would say," insisted her sister, Mrs. David Fairchild.

The recorded message (the text of which Bell had carefully written out and pasted below the cylinder) began with a couple of trilled r's. It continued with "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamed of in our philosophy." (Hamlet actually said "your phil-

Roosevelt Sets Low Rate Base For Bonneville

3½ Pct. Interest, 40 Years for Repaying Cost to Afford 'Yardstick.'

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 27.—President Roosevelt took the first step today toward the goal of one of his principal power advisers—a uniform system of rates for all Federal electricity.

J. D. Ross, administrator of the Bonneville, Oreg., power dam project, announced that Mr. Roosevelt had approved a 3½ per cent interest rate and 40-year amortization plan for Bonneville.

On that basis, taken in connection with the number of kilowatts produced by the dam, Ross will determine rates to be charged for Bonneville power. The dam's steady running capacity is 430,000 kilowatts.

The basis, which Ross described as a "yardstick" for all Federal power projects, will be applied to that part of the cost of Bonneville that is charged against production of current. The Federal Power Commission, he said, is now breaking down the more than $50,000,000 the Government is spending at Bonneville into two items—power and navigation.

When the power development cost is determined, he disclosed, the Federal Treasury wil be paid 3½ per cent interest annually on that sum and plans be made to repay the capital cost over 40 years.

Ross said he hoped for, and proposed to the President, that the Bonneville basis be used on all Federal power developments.

"Strictly Financial Basis."

The Bonneville administrator, who has just resigned from the Securities Commission, said that would be placing all the Government's projects, including TVA, Boulder and Grand Coulee, on "a strictly financial basis," and at the same time would insure against discrimination for or against any region.

Boulder has a 4 per cent interest rate. There is no fixed interest charge for TVA. None has been fixed yet for Grand Coulee, which, like Bonneville, is on the Columbia River.

Another proposal that Ross made was the immediate joining of Bonneville and Grand Coulee by a power distribution line.

Bonneville is nearer ready to commence selling its power than Coulee, and Ross said the connecting line would mean simultaneous and even development of both regions.

Ross, former head of Seattle's municipal electric system, explained to newsmen that in making his proposals he was "taking for granted that everything for power is to be paid back."

"Uncle Sam can do anything, with his money coming back. He can go on to bigger things," he said.

With interest and amortization now fixed, Ross said he would commence a study of the effect of taxation on power rates. Private companies must pay taxes. The Federal projects do not.

Another caller on the President today was Lawrence W. Robert, jr., of Atlanta, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

He arranged to have Mr. Roosevelt meet with Governors of nine Southeastern States at Warm Springs, Ga., on the day after Thanksgiving.

German Officials Assail Schacht for Saying He Quit

Berlin, Oct. 27 (AP).—German officials in private conversation today made it no secret that they consider Dr. Hjalmar Schacht an undisciplined person for divulging that he had ceased to be economics minister on October 25.

For him to give out the news before its approval by the highest quarters and regular organs established for that purpose was termed a lack of Nazi manners.

So far as the German public is concerned, Schacht still is economics minister. Even his own announcement that he had quit did not cause the government's press departments to issue a communique. Foreign correspondents were assured, however, that by Thursday night at the latest Schacht's status in the Nazi scheme of things would be clarified by an official announcement.

Radios Every Mile Proposed to Guide Planes in Rockies

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 27 (U.P.).—President Roosevelt's interest was attracted today to a new electrical system being developed with the hope of preventing many airline crashes.

The invention, explained by J. D. Ross, Bonneville Dam administrator, consisted of installation of a single electric line along selected valley routes in mountain areas to operate short wave radio broadcasts at intervals of about a mile.

The small, automatic stations would broadcast their "beams" straight into the air, enabling a pilot to follow a safe, direct course through the mountains with almost no possibility of becoming lost. Ross said cost of the system would be about $750 a mile.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA had the fourth highest per cent of collections on home mortgage loans in the United States in September, the Home Owners Loan Corporation announced last night. Only Nevada, Wyoming and Washington State exceeded the District, Charles A. Jones, general manager, said. Collections here were 113 per cent of the amount due while average collections for all States in September were well above those for the same period in 1936, payments averaging 96.3 per cent of amounts due this year, as against 88.9 per cent last September.

Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, professes considerable trepidation at submitting himself to questioning by newspapermen. Meeting reporters for the first time after assuming the undersecretaryship, he asked them to "please be easy with me." That his feeling of dread has not disappeared was indicated when, due to Secretary Cordell Hull's recent visit to Canada, he conducted the weekly press conferences. When one such session developed few queries, and rather innocuous ones at that, Welles greeted the closing "Thank you, Mr. Secretary" with signs of relief. "That was an easy one," he commented.

Trade climbed 7 per cent in 1,300 wholesale stores in September, as compared with the same month last year, Secretary of Commerce Roper announced yesterday. During the same period, returns from 10,000 retail merchants showed a 5 per cent increase over sales for the same period last year.

THE NEW freight rates on a selected list of heavy commodities are tentatively scheduled to increase on November 10, the Interstate Commerce Commission said yesterday. The date, railroad tariff experts added, depends upon the ability of carriers to get new schedules filed with the commission by November 5.

The increases, granted by the ICC last week are expected to yield carriers $47,500,000 annually in additional revenue.

Secretary Roper reported yesterday the Nation sold $63,000,000 more in foreign markets than it bought during September. Exports for the month aggregated $296,729,000, an increase of $78,000,000 over the same month a year ago. At $233,361,000, imports were up $18,000,000 over September, 1936.

VIRGINIA AND TENNESSEE were granted $81,178 and $76,329 respectively by the Social Security Board yesterday for the expansion of their State employment services to carry on administration of unemployment compensation laws the Board announced. Florida received $52,836 to administer its unemployment compensation agency from October 1 to December 31, while Alabama received $219,166 for public assistance to aged and $57,750 for assistance to dependent children.

Field Mass Slated Sunday at Graves Of Jesuit Settlers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 27.—Old Brent Cemetery at Aquia, Stafford County, 16 miles north of here, where rest the bones of eight Spanish Jesuit priests who established a settlement there in 1571, will be the scene of the eighth annual Catholic field mass Sunday at 11 a. m.

The Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, Coadjutor Bishop of Richmond, will deliver the sermon, and the Rev. Francis J. Byrne, S. T. D., diocesan supuerintendent of schools, will celebrate mass.

The event this year will mark the discharging of the debt assumed by the historical committee of the Catholic Women's Club of Richmond to erect, at a cost of $7,500, the great bronze crucifix on the nearby Richmond-Washington highway. Voluntary contributions from 23 States paid off the debt.

Coolidge Foundation Plans Annual Concert

The Eliabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation will present its annual founder's day concert Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the chamber music auditorium at the Library of Congress. William Kroll, Nikolai Berezovski, Nicolas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb, constituting the Coolidge Quartti, will play Rossini's quartet No. 3 in B flat, Malipiero's "Cantari alla Madrigalesca," and Beethoven's quartet in E flat, opus 127. In an intermission in the program, a medal given annually by the foundation for eminent services to chamber music will be awarded.

Members of the Coolidge Quartet recently returned from Mexico City, where they took part in the Pan American music festival sponsored by Mrs. Coolidg. They also appeartd individually as soloists with the Symphonic Orchestra of Mexico.

The circuit court jury sentenced him to five years in State prison.

'Elixir' Fatalities Are Raised to 57

Chicago, Oct. 27 (AP).—Deaths attributed by the American Medical Association to an elixir of sulfanilamide reached 57 tonight.

The total was an increase of six for the day. Dr. P. M. Leech, secretary of pharmacy and chemistry for the association, said the latest verified elixir deaths occurred at Collins and Magee, Miss.; Swainsboro and Dahlonega, Ga.; Wichita Falls, Tex., and Arab, Ala. Dr. Leech said that probably only five or six more deaths would be verified as resulting from the elixir. The Federal Food and Drug Administration has confiscated virtually all of the drug.

Pair Silent for Year, Now in Divorce Court

Omaha, Nebr., Oct. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Lillian Phillips, of Omaha, seeking a divorce from her husband, Herbert, testified in district court today they lived together for a year without speaking to each other.

They ate their meals in silence, sat and read evenings in the same room without a word being said and listened to the radio without comment, Mrs. Phillips stated. They were married in 1932.

Hull Defends Trade Pacts as Farmers' Boon

Assails Capper in Letter for Plan to Conduct 'Grass Roots' Drive.

By the United Press.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull tonight, in a 3,000-word, sharply phrased letter to Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, defended the Administration's reciprocal trade treaty program as a boon to the farmer and assailed Capper for proposing to conduct a "grass roots" campaign against it.

Trade treaties negotiated thus far, Hull wrote Capper, a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, have brought real benefits to the farmer and "the program deserves the ardent support of American agriculture." He added—obviously alluding to Capper's impending campaign—that the farmers were being deceived and misled by misinformation, "half-truths with misleading implications" and "complete untruths concerning the whole situation."

Cites Statistics.

Hull cited trade statistics and import and export figures, together with grain and other agriculture products prices during the past year, to prove that the treaties had helped, not injured, the farmer.

"It hardly needs to be recited that as a general proposition agriculture stands to gain far more by a liberal commercial policy and to lose far more by a high tariff than any other elements of our population," he said. "The price of the bulk of what the farmer produces is governed by world prices and no amount of tariff can increase his return.

Buying Is Protected.

"What the farmer buys, on the other hand, is protected and, more often than not, the cost is higher as a result of import duties than it otherwise would be.

"The trade-agreements program, by lowering excessive duties in exchange for concessions by other countries, is designed to lessen this discrepancy. Opponents of the program, whether intentionally or otherwise, are in effect advocating the perpetuation of a long-standing policy of tariff discrimination against the farmer."

Those who continue to advocate higher import duties to protect the farmer, Hull said, "seem to forget the terrible experience that we had with excessive tariffs only a few short years ago. The misery and confusion that befell our people in the years prior to 1933 were felt by none more acutely than the farmer. The Smoot-Hawley tariff, which was protectionism run amuck, ushered in the most disastrous period in the history of American agriculture."

Miss Roche Out Of Treasury to Head FuelFirm

'Little Cabinet' Position to Be Left Open in Case She May Return.

By the Associated Press.

Josephine Roche, first woman member of the "little cabinet" and one of the Government's best-known welfare workers, will quit her position as Assistant Treasury Secretary November 1 to become president of the Rocky Mountain Fuel Co. at Denver.

The Treasury, announcing the resignation, said her position would be left unfilled in hope she would be able to return later.

Miss Roche, 50, was named Assistant Secretary by President Roosevelt in November, 1934.

She has been in charge of the Treasury's public health and other welfare activities and has served as chairman of the interdepartmental committee for co-ordination of Federal welfare services.

She relinquished presidency of the fuel company to accept the Treasury appointment, but retained a controlling interest in the concern. After Paul Peabody, company president, died in September, she decided to return to the concern.

A native of Neligh, Nebr., Miss Roche once served as an organizer for the Colorado Progressive Party. She was associated with the United States Children's Bureau from 1923 to 1925.

Anti-Catholic Charge Hurled At LaGuardia

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 27.—A Democratic speaker tonight accused Fusionist Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of "championing" a city official who had expressed "unfathomable hatred and contempt" for Catholics, as the New York mayoral campaign moved toward an angry end.

While Samuel Untermeyer, prominent Jewish lawyer and partisan of the Democratic candidate, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, was thus denouncing LaGuardia, the mayor was charging that Tammany Hall had "raided the public treasury in a desperate effort to pay off political henchmen before the election" of November 2.

LaGuardia Charges "Pay Off."

Mahoney men sought to recapture the atmosphere of a day long gone—the day of red fire in the streets—by parading tonight in the Bronx with torchlights and flares.

Untermyer, in a radio address, called LaGuardia a municipal "Mussolini dictator," and asserted he had refused to remove a physician in the city employ whom a report of a special aldermanic investigating committee had found guilty of a "blasphemous indictment of Catholicism and Catholics in general."

Meanwhile, LaGuardia declared that Tammany had made a "pay off" amounting to $739,694 to "27 Tammany district leaders, 3 former Tammany leaders, 233 Tammany county committeemen and many others."

Farley Held "Biting Dust."

The "Tammany aristocracy," he added, was "paid off" through Democratic board of estimate salary additions to the city budget for "useless exempt positions," and restoration by that board of salaries which he had sought to "cut . . . to a reasonable point."

Entry into the campaign on behalf of Mahoney of Postmaster General James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, brought forth sharp criticism by the American Federation of Labor Nonpartisan Committee for LaGuardia and by Maurice P. Davidson, chairman of the Progressive Party, which also is backing the mayor.

"LaGuardia," said Davidson, "is the New Deal as far as New York is concerned. . . . It is a stupefying and scandalous spectacle to see 'Boss' Farley join with Gov. Lehman and Senator Wagner in biting the dust before the Tammany wigwam * * *."

Houston Will Speak.

D. C. Co-operative To Open Station

The Consumers' Co-operative has opened its second business venture in the District of Columbia, a filling station at Twenty-first street and Virginia avenue.

William T. Brown, former president of the local group, will manage the station. He is also manager of the grocery operated by the co-operative at 1434 Wisconsin avenue. "Consume, Inc." is the business name used for both ventures.

The co-operative has approximately 250 full-fledged members in the District, Brown said, and 200 who are "gradually joining." When savings on their purchases amount to as much as $5, the members automatically become "part owners" of the enterprises and share in any profits, he said.

Cotton Processing Levy Faces Fight

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—A determination to make a last-ditch fight against any effort to restore the processing tax on cotton was voiced by Dr. Claudius T. Murchison today at the eleventh annual meeting of the Cotton-Textile Institute.

Dr. Murchison, president of the institute, told the assembled cotton mill executives that their industry was complicated by both international and domestic problems.

He said a "great uncertainty" still surrounded the question of Government regulation of business, and expressed impatience with talk of boycotting Japan. The Japanese, he said, were adhering scrupulously to an agreement not to dump their product in the United States market.

Slippery Roads Claim 2 Lives; Many Injured

D. C. Woman Dies After Car Is Hit by Truck on Mountain Curve.

Steady rainfall which greased Washington streets and nearby highways and hampered motorists' visibility was blamed yesterday for a wave of traffic accidents that claimed two lives, critically injured several and brought lesser hurts to many.

Mrs. Marian Johnson, 56, of 2233 Mount View place southeast, died of a fractured skull two hours after the car driven by her husband, Joseph, was struck by a truck 3 miles east of Middletown, Md., near Frederick. The victim succumbed in Frederick City Hospital.

Her husband, who is 68, suffered a fractured leg, cuts and bruises. Mrs. George W. Mechen, 12 Adams street northwest, escaped with rib fractures.

William Lester Coon, of Dallas, Tex., reported by authorities to be the truck driver, was unhurt. He was jailed without bail by Justice O. Fred Ridenour, of Middletown, pending an inquest Friday. His truck was descending a mountain road when it met the Johnson car head-on at a curve, sending it crashing into a stone wall.

Dies of Shock.

Mrs. Emma C. Stacy, 78, of Silver Spring, Md., died of shock when the auto in which she was a passenger was in collision with a truck near Front Royal, Va.

Dr. D. M. Kippa, Warren County coroner, said there were no cuts or bruises on Mrs. Stacy's body. Earle E. Stacy, her son and the driver, and his wife escaped with minor bruises.

Mrs. Stacy, widow of Cephas N. Stacy, had just completed settlement of her husband's Virginia estate and was returning home when the fatal crash occurred. She is survived by five children, Miss Mary A. Stacy, Arthur A. and Earle E. Stacy, all of Washington; Neale Stacy, of Springfield, Mass., and W. B. Stacy, Amelia, Va.

Two Trucks Collide.

In critical condition at Georgetown Hospital last night was Roy D. Smith, 431 Fourth street northwest, suffering a skull fracture and internal injuries as the result of an accident involving two trucks on North Washington boulevard and North McKinley road, Highland Park, Va.

According to police, Smith was at the wheel of a grocery delivery truck and James Morris, of Louisa, Va., was driving a truck loaded with lumber. The latter was released under $500 bond pending outcome of Smith's injuries.

Elmer Gravette, 14-year-old colored youth, of 2614 I street northwest, was knocked from his bicycle on Pennsylvania avenue near the White House. He was treated for head cuts and bruises at Emergency Hospital and released.

Struck down by an automobile on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard last night at Riverdale, Md., Dorothy Watson, 17, of 14 Carroll avenue, Hyattsville, narrowly missed being run over by a second car as she lay unconscious on the road.

Carolyn T. Hardy, 19, University of Maryland coed, who was driving the first car, said the girl darted into the street and ran into the side of the automobile. E. C. Corkhill, of Berwyn Heights, Md., brought his car to a stop several feet from the girl's prostrate body. He took her to Casualty Hospital, where an X-ray was to be taken to determine the extent of head injuries.

Girl Denies Father Set Home on Fire

Media, Pa., Oct. 27 (AP).—Modishly garbed Ruth Knight, 25, came to the defense of her father, Albert R. Knight, in Delaware County Court today and supported his denial that he had nothing to do with a fire that started in the basement of the Knight home last May 28.

The State has charged the former oil company executive with attempted murder and arson, contending he set the fire in an attempt to collect $100,000 insurance on the lives of Ruth and her two sisters, Susan, 20, and Mary, 17.

Miss Knight testified she knew her father was not in the cellar the day before the fire. Knight has asserted repeatedly he was in Washington engaged on special work for the Treasury Department that day.

McLaglen Brother Seized in Extortion

Los Angeles, Oct. 27 (AP).—Leopold McLaglen, 48, brother of Victor McLaglen, film star, was held in jail tonight while police investigated charges brought against him by Phillip Chancellor, millionaire Beverly Hills sportsman.

McLaglen was booked on suspicion of subornation of perjury and suspicion of soliciting commission of a crime after Chancellor told police McLaglen was to supply him with material on various military intelligence systems for use in writing a book.

"He brought me the information," Chancellor said, "but it was no good for a book or anything else. I told him it was no good and that he was fired. He threatened me and demanded $20,000."

Father of Ross Will Help Son In Death Trial

Hires Counsel for Youth Accused of Slaying Davidson.

Walter J. Ross, Aberdeen, Md., farmer, yesterday came to the aid of his son, Walter L. Ross, a Marine Corps private, who for a week has been in the Alexandria, Va., Jail, after confessing, according to the Virginia State police, that he murdered Elmer J. Davidson, Washington attorney, October 3 near Triangle, Va.

The father retained Frank P. Moncure, of Stafford County, Va., and C. W. Shaw, of Henry County, to defend his son.

The defense counsel after a conference yesterday with young Ross immediately applied to Appellate Court Judge F. W. Coleman for an order transferring their client to Stafford County. Judge Coleman reserved decision.

At the same time Moncure announced that Ross was only 17 years old, instead of 19, as he claimed when he enlisted in the Marine Corps last January.

Moncure stated that if Ross was indicted by the Stafford County grand jury, which convenes November 8, the defense would waive preliminary hearing and be ready for trial "within a reasonable time."

It was learned yesterday that the elder Ross had obtained an interview with his son Tuesday, after a three-hour wait. The interview was granted after Ross' father appealed to Judge William P. Wools, of Alexandria. Judge Wools said unless the interview was granted by 6 p. m. he would issue a writ of habeas corpus.

Meningitis Victim Survives Relapse

Use of sulfanilamide in the case of Janet Trenis, 22-year-old college student suffering from cerebro-spinal meningitis, was discontinued temporarily yesterday after it was announced she had rallied from a relapse.

Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, physician in charge, said constant use of the potent drg might prove dangerous and ordered injections of sulfanilamide suspended for 24 hours. He will continue use of the drug sometime today, he said.

U. S. Accepts Horton Bequest Of Relics for Lee's Mansion

China, Prints, Engravings and Furniture Will Be Used in Further Rehabilitation of Home in Arlington Cemetery.

The Secretaries of War and Interior have jointly accepted the bequest of the late Gen. William Edward Horton which will permit further restoration of the Lee Mansion in Arlington Cemetery, it was announced yesterday. The bequest comprises a valuable collection of house furnishings, including Lowestoft china, Bohemian and Waterford glassware, silverware, prints and engravings and many pieces of Chippendale furniture.

Also included are furnishings for the bedroom of Gen. and Mrs. Robert E. Lee and for the room occupied by Gen. Lafayette when he visited the Custis family.

The collection was presented to the War Department, which administered the mansion before it was transferred to the National Park Service. Gen. Horton died September, 1935, but many of the furnishings had been lent by him after the rehabilitation of the mansion was authorized by Congress in 1929.

The name originally given to the Mansion by its builder, George Washington Parke Custis, adopted son of George Washington, was "Arlington House." It became the home of Gen. Lee after his marriage to Miss Mary Ann Randolph Custis. The Arlington estate was bequeathed to Mrs. Lee during her life and afterward to her eldest son, namesake of the builder.

The will of George Washington Parke Custis also provided that "the Mount Vernon plate, together with every article which I possess relating to Washington and that came from Mount Vernon is to remain at Arlington House with my daughter . . . and at her death to go to George Washington Custis Lee and to descend from him entire and intact to my latest posterity."

However, when Arlington was occupied by Federal troops in the Civil War the Mount Vernon heirlooms were sent by Gen. McDowell to the Patent Office for safekeeping. Other valuable heirlooms had disappeared after Mrs. Lee's hurried removal of her household from Arlington. After the war the articles which had been salvaged were restored to George Washington Custis Lee. Some were later returned to Mount Vernon; others are in the National Museum.

Gen. Horton, one of numerous Northern and Southerners deeply interested in the Lee Mansion, served in the World War as chief quartermaster of the advance section of the American Expeditionary Force. In Spanish-American War he was adjutant general on the staff of Gen. Hawkins and is said to have been the only officer of the staff not killed or wounded during the storming of San Juan Hill. His grave is at Arlington National Cemetery.

Daughter of Aide To Farley Ignores 46-Mi. Speed Case

Miss Laura S. Purdum, of Hyattsville, daughter of Smith W. Purdum, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, failed to appear in police court yesterday to answer a charge of speeding.

Policeman George M. Patton, District "safety" officer, who said he arrested the young woman driving 46 miles an hour in a 22 mile zone on Michigan avenue northeast, was refused papers in the case when he sought them from an assistant in the office of the corporation counsel.

The assistant, Patton said, put the papers in his desk, explaining he was acting on "the boss' orders" and that the case had been continued for a week. Identity of the "boss" was not disclosed.

Miss Purdum had been released without bail to appear in court at telephoned request of a Maryland policeman who said he would vouch for her family.

Engineer Warns Boats From Eastern Branch

Maj. W. D. Luplow, Army engineer for the District of Columbia, yesterday warned boat owners that dredging operations are about to begin in the channel of the Eastern Branch, between the Anacostia Bridge and Fourteenth street southeast.

Cautioning the removal of all watercraft, Maj. Luplow said black and white buoys are being placed around the locations where the work is to be performed, and pointed out that boats which interfere with the dredging operations will be moved by the Government at the owners' risk.

D. C. Widow's Slayer Faces Electric Chair

Counsel Will Ask New Trial for Doomed McAfee.

William (Major) McAfee, 61-year-old colored janitor, was found guilty of first-degree murder in the death of Mrs. Henrietta Anderson, in District Court late yesterday. Under District law the jury's report automatically fixes the death penalty.

McAfee, who testified he often consumed eight half-pints of liquor a day without feeling any ill effects, grinned at the jury's pronouncement. Apparently he did not realize the import of the verdict until his attorney, Robert L. Miller, told him he would make every effort to save him from the electric chair and apply for a new trial.

Miller said that within three days he expects to argue a motion for a new trial. Should that fail, he said he has recourse to the Court of Appeals and then, as a last chance, an appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

McAfee was convicted of slaying the 36-year-old widow with a furnace shaker. He is said to have struck her repeatedly over the head with the shaker until she had been beaten lifeless. The attack occurred August 22 in Mrs. Anderson's apartment at 1633 L street northwest.

In arguing the case to the jury, Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray made light of McAfee's contention he was so drunk at the time of the slaying he did not know what he was doing. He pointed out that shortly afterward, the janitor went to the basement, cleaned the shaker, and removed all visible bloodstains from his hands and clothing. That, he argued, showed the man knew what he was doing.

Mother of Three Children.

In giving the jury its instructions, Justice Jesse C. Adkins said there could be four verdicts, not guilty, manslaughter, second degree murder and first degree murder. He emphasized it was the jury's duty to weigh the import of the "confession" made by McAfee, and to consider also what merit there was in his story from the stand that he was too drunk at the time of the slaying to know what he was doing.

Mrs. Anderson, the mother of three children, was employed as a clerk in the Veterans' Bureau at the time of the slaying.

Scores were injured. The accident occurred between Yokohama and Kangawa, the Domei, Japanese News Agency said.

'Flying Car' Steals the Show As Auto Exhibit Opens in N.Y.

'Arrowbile' Has 38-Foot Wing Which Can Be Detached in 8 Minutes; Travels 110 M. P. H. in Air, 55 on Ground; Costs $2,500.

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 27.—The thirty-eighth annual automobile show opened today in the Grand Central Palace with "Putting the World on Wheels" as the theme, but aviation crept in through the side door.

The million-dollar assembly of 250 new 1938 models was viewed by thousands during the opening day, but tonight chief interest appeared to center on (a) a car that can fly as well as purr along the highways, (b) luxurious and radically streamlined trailers running up to $8,000, and (c) a powerful low-slung French car that has a top speed of 125 miles an hour.

The influence of aviation was everywhere—the glittering chromium grilles tapering to a finely streamlined nose; air conditioning, gradually becoming a necessity in quickly changing climates; elimination of jars for smooth-as-silk driving; increase in power and miles per gallon, and elimination of all unnecessary weight.

"The sky is no longer the limit in automobiles," said Jerry Phillips, demonstration pilot, who flew the "arrowbile" from Santa Monica, Calif., detached the 38-foot wing and drove right up to the palace on Lexington avenue. "If traffic got heavy, I flew, if the weather got bad, I cruised along the highways."

Crowds flocked around the Arrowbile, which looked like a huge bat with a wooden propeller behind. The machine costs $2,500, has a top speed of 110 miles in the air, 55 on the ground. The wings can be detached in eight minutes.

Tokyo Claims Chinese War Fought in Self-Defense Against Communists.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Oct. 27.—Japan formally rejected an invitation today to attend the Brussels Nine-Power Conference, declaring the meeting was inspired by the League of Nations and would "put serious obstacles in the path of a just and proper solution" of the Far Eastern situation.

The refusal to confer with other signatories of the 1922 Washington Treaty guaranteeing China's territorial integrity was handed by Japanese Foreign Minister Koki Hirota to Baron Albert de Bassompierre, Belgian Ambassador.

Hirota previously had received Imperial sanction for the reply. After making Japan's decision known in a lengthy, informal statement accompanying the refusal, he summoned United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew and British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie to explain the nation's attitude to them.

Claim Communism Spreads.

The statement reiterated Japan's contention that she was fighting in self-defense, that the Nine-Power Treaty was obsolete because of spreading communism in China and that the League of Nations should not interfere.

Although the Belgian government's invitation did not refer to the League of Nations, the statement declared the meeting was called after a league resolution suggesting it and Japan "cannot but conclude that the convocation of the conference is linked to the resolution."

"The Assembly of the League of Nations have even gone to the length of assuring China of moral support and of recommending that its members abstain from any action which might weaken China's power of resistance and add difficulties to the present conflict and also to study how they might individually aid China."

Direct Talks Urged.

Therefore, it argued, the League has reflected "on the honor of Japan" and has created circumstances against a "realistic solution of the conflict" by the conference to be held in Brussels next Wednesday, November 3.

The meeting was postponed from its original date, October 30, because of the Belgian internal situation created by the resignation of Premier Paul van Zeeland and his cabinet.

The issue, the statement declared, can be solved "only through direct negotiations between the two powers on whom fall the common burden of responsibility for the stability of east Asia."

Mediation Hopes Fall.

Paris, Oct. 27 (AP).—Japan's refusal to attend the Nine-Power Conference at Brussels today dashed cold water on the hopes prevailing in the French and United States delegations that Japan had reached the point where she would welcome mediation of the conflict in China. The news was received here about the same time the American delegation, headed by Norman H. Davas, Ambassador at Large, landed at Le Havre. The delegation remained in Paris tonight and planned to go to Brussels tomorrow.

Suicide Squads Pay With Lives For Safe Retreat of Chinese

Desperate Groups Man Shell Holes and Fight Advancing Japanese Until They Are Overwhelmed and Cut Down.

By Arundel Keane.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai, Oct. 27.—I made my way through Shanghai's "dustbin of death" today—the smoking, roaring inferno of Chapei—and saw for myself the Chinese "suicide squads" giving their lives to cover their comrade's retreat.

Tall, stoical men, wearing on their breasts the tattered insignia of the suicide brigade, sauntered into the face of certain death, tossing in their lives as calmly as they would throw bamboo "fan-tan" sticks on a gambling table.

They hadn't a chance of coming back alive. They went out in little squads with machine guns and rifles, to burrow into wrecked buildings or shell craters and spit bullets at advancing columns until the Japanese should swarm over and engulf them.

"We die here," a Chinese corporal told me, as he and his comrades gathered up light gun equipment and started on a jog down a narrow street, choked with dust of exploding shells.

Behind them the men of the Chinese eighty-eighth division were being pushed backward along a thin line of retreat west of Soochow Creek. Any moment they might bulge over into the foreign zone and then the hell of war would break loose for us as well as the Chinese.

We received word at the United Press headquarters that 500 "eighty-eighters" had barricaded themselves in a "godown"—a Chinese warehouse—determined to die to the last man rather than retreat.

They telephoned Mayor O. K. Yui, asking for 500 pounds of salt and sugar and 50,000 hardcakes, and said they hoped to last out a week, when they believed the tide of war would turn.

"If it doesn't, you won't see us again," the leader said.

I went out to see this heroic stand, literally crawling through shell-pitted alleys and hugging walls until I was a half block inside Chapei.

I ducked down a fire-lined street and made my way to a point near Haichong and Tatung roads. Hand grenades were exploding near me and I knew I as within a short distance of a pitched battle, probably between Japanese and a sniper's nest.

I saw a small column of Japanese bluejackets, moving double-time up the street, and I followed. They had located the snipers by the explosion of grenades, and the column suddenly formed into machine-gun units and began to blaze away at a building.

I discovered to my horror the sniper's nest was across the street from where I crouched, clinging to the scanty shelter of an overhanging wall.

Bullets rattled along the streets as the Japanese mechanically sprayed the nest.

Nearby was an open door of a building, from which smoke was gushing, and I decided fire was easier to face than bullets.

Duce to Throw Force in Spain If Parley Fails

By the United Press.

Rome, Oct. 27.—Premier Mussolini prepared tonight, on the eve of the fifteenth anniversary of his "march on Rome" establishing Fascism, to plunge into the Spanish civil war on a grand scale if the London nonintervention negotiations collapse, it was learned on excellent authority.

While 100,000 Black Shirts poured into Rome in 53 columns that tramped through the streets throughout the night, Il Duce conferred with his subordinates on stern measures to cope with any situation arising from a decision by Russia and France to resume "liberty of action" in Spain.

Concentration at Madrid.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 27 (U.P.).—Insurgeent Generalissimo Francisco Franco is concentrating a great force of men and munitions near Navalcarnero, southwest of Madrid, in preparation for simultaneous attacks on the besieged city and the loyalist Aragon front, frontier dispatches indicated tonight.

Franco decided on the simultaneous drives, it was said, to prevent the government from concentrating all its reserves on either front.

"Hood" Sent to Majorca.

London, Oct. 27 (AP).—Britain dispatched the mighty battle cruiser Hood to Majorca today to keep an eye on the strategic Balearic Islands.

The move came as Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden tried to keep the nonintervention subcommittee on the road to removal of foreign volunteers from Spain.

Majorca, largest of the islands, has been in the hands of Spanish Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco for a year and it has been reported an Italian air base already is well established there. A reported Italian threat to dominate the whole Balearic group has made a potentially dangerous offshoot of the Spanish civil war.

Meanwhile, off the north Spanish coast, British destroyers searched the waters of the Bay of Biscay to ascertain the fate of the British steamer Stanray, reported attacked by a Spanish insurgent trawler.

Lloyd's reported all British warships within wireless range were asked to assist the steamer after it was fired upon and halted 3½ miles off Aviles, Asturian port.

The re-drafted British plan for evacuating foreign volunteers from Spain was in the hands of the governments represented on the nonintervention subcommittee for study.

The plan envisages besides the withdrawal of foreign soldiers from the Spanish armies the granting of belligerent rights to the warring parties and restoration of land and sea control of nonintervention.

Delegates on the subcommittee, which will meet again Friday, submitted the plan to their home capitals without recommending it.

Paris, Oct. 27 (AP).—France followed up her protests to the Spanish government and Spanish insurgents against raids on French shipping in the Mediterranean today with an order stationing a warship permanently at Minorca, strategic Balearic Island.

had little effect on the Chinese trench diggers.

An unconfirmed report said the Japanese attempted to cross the Shanghai-Hangchow Railroad bridge spanning the creek, but met a storm of Chinese machine gun bullets and withdrew.

Foreign observers, however, predicted a new battle in that area was imminent.

About 35,000 refugees from the embattled districts in the northern and western parts of the city streamed into the International Settlement yesterday. Authorities prepared for a further avalanche of fleeing humanity today.

Relief Given Thousands.

Among the refugees yesterday, they said, were 350 civilian men, women and children wounded by Japanese aerial machine gun attacks on the countryside outside Shanghai.

British and American relief workers opened a huge camp to provide whatever relief was possible for the refugees. Thousands already were receiving food and shelter in the camp, on the west side of Shanghai.

A Chinese headquarters communique declared the withdrawal from Kiangwan and Chapei was for strategic purposes and was carried out with a minimum of losses to the Chinese troops. The defense army, it said, fell back to strong positions outside the range of Japanese naval guns in the Whangpoo River.

Evidence that the withdrawal was accomplished in an orderly manner was seen in the lack of supplies, dead and wounded left behind.

"Suicide" Column Stays On.

Vast sheets of flame shot toward the sky creating heat so intense it was felt throughout the city. All Shanghai was threatened, but thousands watched the awesome sight from south of the creek, braving the peril of stray bullets and shell fragments which continued to fall in the International Settlement.

Because of the dangers to the western portion of the area, Clarence E. Gauss, United States Consul General, advised American residents to be ready to evacuate if necessary. The British Consul General took similar precautions.

British troops guarding a railroad bridge over Soochcow Creek fell back to a safer post near Jessfield Park. They reported that a Japanese airplane had machine-gunned approximately 100 refugees crossing the bridge, killing 10 and wounding 25.

A Chinese "dare-to-die" detachment of from 200 to 300 men remained in Chapei, directly across from the sector patrolled by United States Marines, to resist the Japanese to the last bullet. The Chinese lieutenant in command rejected a British offer of refuge in the International Settlement provided his soldiers would lay down their arms.

Chiang Appeals to U. S.

Nanking (Thursday), Oct. 28 (AP).—Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, China's supreme military and civil authority, declared today it was the "responsibility" of the United States and Great Britain to uphold the Nine-Power Pact.

"Japan must be stopped in her mad aggression and imperialism before it is too late," he declared.

"It is also the duty of the United States and England to protect the freedom of the seas, not permitting a Japanese blockade of the China coast, which is detrimental to the trade of those countries," he said.

"American business in China is going to the dogs, because the United States Government permits Japan to maintain an illegal blockade of the China coast, violating international law.

The British and American fleets should exercise their customary duty of keeping commerce free on the entire Pacific."

The generalissimo charged that Japan "not only invaded China and violated the Nine-Power Pact, but also infringed on the rights and privileges of the United States and other powers."

Peiping, Oct. 27 (AP).—Japan's North China army tonight reported that three mechanized columns had thrust their way through Niangtzekwan Pass after a severe battle, in which at least 10,000 Chinese were slain, and had captured Pingting, important city in Shansi Province.

Japanese said the victory brought their troops advancing along the Cheng-Tai Railroad from Hopeh Province, to within 65 miles of Taiyuanfu, capital of Shansi.

The fall of Pingting culminated three days of hard fighting along a 20-mile front in the Tassingham Mountains.

Pingting lies on a flat plain, rich with coal and iron mines, across which the Japanese said they expected to be able to drive quickly to Taiyuanfu.

Maj. Gen. Seiichi Kita, chief of Japanese military missions in China who has been handling political affairs in North China, asserted:

"Whatever government is established in North China will be founded only upon the real desires of the Chinese people."

Kita declared the new government would concern only North China at first but might take in the whole nation later if that should become possible.

U. S. Receives Tokyo Apology For Shooting

Japan Promises to Prevent Recurrence of Firing on American Party.

By the Associated Press.

The United States has received an apology from Japan, the State Department said last night, for the action of a Japanese military plane in firing upon a party of Americans who were horseback riding at Shanghai on October 24.

None of the three American men and two American women who were in the party was injured, although two horses were killed.

The Japanese government said it was taking measures to prevent a recurrence and promised to deal "appropriately" with those responsible.

Saito Disavows Designs.

Meanwhile, Hirosi Saito, Japanese Ambassador, said in a radio speech last night that Japan has no designs on Chinese territory, but is determined to stamp out anti-Japanese sentiment in China.

"The present conflict has been forced upon Japan, and Japan wants to end it as quickly as possible," he asserted. "She wants to end it in a way so decisive that a situation like the present can never recur.

Blames War Lords.

"Our only objective therefore is a genuine change of heart on the part of those in power at Nanking. We insist that the organized campaign to stir up hate against Japan be discontinued and that the central government renounce the union with communism which was solemnized at Sian a year ago. . . .

"The great mass of Chinese people have not been affected by the anti-Japanese poison distilled for the past 12 or more years by Communist agitators, selfish war lords and ambitious politicians. With China's millions, Japan has no quarrel—nor have those millions anything to fear from Japan."

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. Then poisons may start nagging backache, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv

20 Americans Win $1,800,000 In Sweepstakes

Cumberland, Md., Woman Holds Single Ticket Worth $50,000.

Dublin, Oct. 27 (AP).—Twenty Americans won $1,800,000 in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes today by holding tickets on the three winning horses in the Cesarewitch Stakes at Newmarket, England.

More than 2,500,000 Americans held tickets costing them approximately $6,250,000. For this outlay they received a total of $3,829,890, including today's winnings and $2,029,890 won last week when the tickets were drawn.

Six Americans won $150,000 each as owners of tickets on Punch, winner of the Cesarewitch race; eight held $75,000 tickets to Fet, second-place winner, and six won $50,000 each on Solar Bear, third.

Sale of tickets in the present drawing brought the sweepstakes organization 2,695,155 pounds sterling ($13,475,000).

Since it was started seven years ago, the Sweepstakes—the world's largest lottery—has brought more than 50,000,000 pounds sterling ($250,000,000) into this country—40 per cent to remain.

During this period Irish hospitals have been enriched by 11,612,047 pounds sterling ($58,000,000) and prize money in 22 draws has totaled 38,617,782 pounds ($193,000,000). Of the 71,539 prize winners, half have been Americans.

Among the holders of $50,000 tickets is Mrs. V. C. Powell, 811 Mount Royal avenue, Cumberland, Md.

Market 'Wonder' Accused of Theft

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—A grand larceny indictment against Harold Russell Ryder, now 41 years old but once the "boy wonder of Wall Street," was found by the New York County grand jury today.

According to Assistant District Attorney Vincent Impelliteri, Ryder, arrested while on parole from Sing Sing Penitentiary, had procured about $300,000 from 83 persons in stock dealings since 1933.

Ryder was sent to Sing Sing in 1931 for three to ten years when he pleaded guilty to an indictment charging theft of $90,000 in connection with the $3,000,000 failure of Woody & Co., a brokerage concern in which he was a partner.

Second Divorce Given To Wife of J. M. Kent

Los Angeles, Oct. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Lilian D. Kent won her second divorce in five years today from J. M. Kent, founder and former president of the Richfield Oil Co. She divorced him in 1933 and won a property settlement reported to have been $250,000. After promising "reform," he induced her to remarry him November 22, 1934, she said.

"He told me he had remarried me to get everything away from me and put the children and myself out in the gutter," Mrs. Kent testified today.

The Nation's safest trucking companies—including a Washington concern—were awarded honors yesterday in the third truck fleet safety contest sponsored by the American Trucking Associations, Inc., here.

The most impressive record for the year ended July 31 was established by the Indianapolis, Ind., branch of the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co. The firm's 32 drivers covered 1,085,161 miles without an accident.

A total of 1,485 trucking concerns participated in the contest. Honorable mention went to the Powell Transportation Co., of this city.

Other nearby winners included Vermillion Brothers, Elkridge, Md.; Spear & Spear, Moundsville, W. Va., and John L. Campbell, Lovingston, Va.

Young Broker Dies, Shot by Robber in Wanamaker Store

Philadelphia, Oct. 27 (AP).—C. Morgan Knight, a young broker, who tried to stop a robber fleeing from the Wanamaker department store, died from the gunshot wound he received in the abdomen Monday as the robber rushed down a stairway from the cashiers' cage on the eighth floor.

The robber, captured a block away from the store, gave his name as Albert W. Gregg, 32, of Milwaukee.

Police said tonight they were investigating the possibility the prisoner may have had some connection with the kidnaping of Charles Mattson, 10, of Tacoma, Wash. They said that Gregg, with two days' growth of beard, resembled published sketches of the man supposed to have kidnaped the Mattson boy, who was found dead January 10.

Gannett Urges 'Tax Relief' for Profit Sharers

Holds Government Should Encourage Concerns Aiding Employes.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Frank E. Gannett, publisher, proposed today that the Government offer "tax relief" as an incentive to companies which distribute profits to their employes.

Addressing the convention of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries, the publisher of the Gannett group of newspapers said:

"Instead of taxing companies for not distributing all their profits to stockholders, I would give tax relief to those companies that distributed profits to their employes."

Gannett said the Roosevelt Administration's policy restricts business, instead of encouraging it to increase production and make larger profits to be "shared with employes and consumers."

He advocated the publication of annual or semiannual reports by corporations on the number of men they employ and their wages and working hours.

"Certainly it is just as desirable that facts about return to labor shall be known as those about return to capital," he asserted.

He also suggested that having a representative of labor on the board of directors of any corporation would be helpful in promoting better relations between management and employes.

"I am sure many corporations are sincerely interested in their workers, but efforts to give labor the fullest possible return are in vain if the worker is skeptical," he said.

Ickes Occupying Neutral Corner in Big Apple 'Battle'

Secretary Ickes yesterday waltzed away from the issue of the Big Apple that is causing such a controversial minuet among the Interior Department Recreation Association in which the Secretary ranks as honorary president.

He had no statement to make, his office announced, as the I. D. R. A. Big Apple problem nears its showdown tomorrow night. The Secretary's associates said he did not dance the Big Apple and wished to be neutral. The fact that the Secretary does not dance the Big Apple is not significant, as far as the controversy goes, it was made clear.

The anti-Big Applers and the Big Applers come to the issue tomorrow night when the I. D. R. A. hurls its Halloween dance. The organization's official publication has ruled the Big Apple from the floor. The only apple to figure will be the apples in the apple bobbing, it was announced. A rift of some proportion occurred in the membership following the dictum.

Actually the I. D. R. A.—which calls the Big Apple obscene—never has put up with the Big Apple. A group attempted it on the I. D. R. A.'s first social occasion. A shocked group of Anti-Big Applers immediately started waltzing and flanked the Big Applers off the floor. This was first evidence of the Anti-Apple feeling. Now the membership, which numbers some 900, are split to the core. The issue, and any outcome from it, will be set to music tomorrow night.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Playing Safe.

It cannot be repeated too often that the most important step you can take in the play of the cards is to keep the objective in mind. As declarer, you must note the number of tricks called for in your contract and must prepare primarily to make precisely that number of tricks. As defender, you must keep in mind the number of tricks needed to defeat the contract. Any play for a greater number of tricks must be rejected if it jeopardizes your chances for your true objective. Note the application of this simple rule in today's hand.

West's overcall of one diamond cannot be recommended. It was a lucky thing for him that his partner had an excellent rescue suit. While it is true that he found out what suit to lead against the logical three notrump contract, he also notified declarer of the position of the diamonds.

West opened the seven of spades; dummy played the Queen, East, the King, and South the Ace. South led the Jack of diamonds and West covered with the King. Declarer won with dummy's ace and finessed a club. West properly refused to win this trick and South next led a low diamond and finessed dummy's nine-spot. East discarding a low spade. Thinking the club finesse "proved," declarer led another club from the dummy and finessed the Jack. This time West won with the King and returned the suit.

Dummy now had the lead for the last time with the Queen of clubs, and declarer hastened to cash the Queen of diamonds. Now, a low spade was led from the dummy and East won with the Jack.

At this point East was at the cross-roads. His side had already won a club and a spade and, with three tricks more needed to defeat the contract, East was tempted to lead a heart through declarer's probable King, in an attempt to give his partner two heart tricks and his high diamond. But a more careful analysis indicated that such a lead was not only unnecessary, but also dangerous. East could safely allow declarer to make his tricks, after which South would be compelled to lead away from his heart holding. Any advantage which could come from a heart lead by East would derive equally from a heart lead by South; therefore, East rejected the tempting heart shift in favor of a spade return.

South won with the ten of spades and cashed his Ace of clubs. But, now, the forced heart lead permitted the opponents to take the remaining three tricks.

Had South led a heart at the critical point, South could have played the Jack and established the King of hearts as his ninth trick.

Line Is 'Unsafe,' Rail Tells I. C. C.

By the Associated Press.

The Virginia Central Railway, Richmond, Va., told the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday, in support of its application for authority to abandon all its line except 1 mile from Fredericksburg to West Fredericksburg, it can neither operate at a profit nor operate safely.

In a brief the railway said it is owned by an insolvent estate and is losing from $40,000 to $50,000 a year.

It added public safety requires the Virginia Central be allowed to stop trains before winter weather.

Ruhland Finds Milk Rule Cut Infant Deaths

Baby Mortality Reduced by 60 Pct. Since Turn of the Century.

Infant mortality in the country has been reduced 60 per cent by more rigid control of milk, District Health Officer George C. Ruhland told members of the Association of Dairy, Food and Drug Officials, whose annual conference opened yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel.

Statistics were based on infant mortality since beginning of the century, he said.

Representatives from States taking part in the conference were commended for their work by Ruhland.

Poor conditions which existed prior to passage of the national food and drug act in 1906 were related by Harry Kluster, chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture and Markets, of Madison Wis., and president of the association.

No longer is the reading public swamped with patent medicine advertisements which were so cleverly written that readers believed they had the ailments described and would purchase the medicine as a "cure-all," Kluster stated.

Later in the day, wives of members visited the Pan American, D. A. R. and Red Cross buildings under guidance of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley.

Gasoline Stations Will Get Numbers Of Ransom Money

In a determined move to trap the kidnapers of Charles S. Ross, retired Chicago manufacturer, the Federal Bureau of Investigation announced yesterday that lists of ransom bill numbers will be distributed to thousands of filling stations throughout the country.

Prompted by a belief that Ross' abductors may attempt to purchase gasoline with some of the $50,000 ransom money, Federal authorities authorized the distribution to strategically located filling stations along heavily traveled highways.

Ross, 72, has been missing since September 25, when three gunmen forced him into a car on the outskirts of Chicago. His failure to appear after the ransom was paid brought fears that he met death at the hands of his kidnapers.

Decision to supply filling stations with numbers of the ransom bills was believed to have resulted directly from an incident during the Lindbergh investigation. An alert station attendant in the Bronx, N. Y., was instrumental in "spotting" Bruno Richard Hauptmann in 1934.

Mathematical Reasoning

A note to war veterans—preferentially viewed by the Government—is sounded by Charles R. Anderson, chairman, Board of Appeals and Review, Civil Service Commission. His remarks, quite revealing, were made at a recent convention of veterans in Columbus, Ohio, and are quoted by the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada News Letter.

Anderson said that veterans' preference works a hardship on qualified women applicants and other non-veterans. "Carried still further, if my reasoning is correct, as the list of veteran eligibles continues to increase—in the same ratio that it has been increasing for the last few years—if appointments were to go to them automatically, there would in time be no place open for your sister or your daughter.

"No son of a World War Veteran, however worthy, would have an opportunity for public service because all places would be filled by veterans," he stated. "This is merely advanced as a purely mathematical proposition. We would have a Government of, for and by veterans, instead of by the people as a whole. Obviously, that would not be good public policy."

He estimated, "conservatively," that at this time nearly 35 per cent of the male employes in the executive branch of the Federal Government are veterans. The former service population of the country is approximately 5 per cent of the total adult population and in 1936 veterans received slightly more than 25 per cent of the total appointments to the Federal classified service, he stated.

He made it clear, however, that the Civil Service Commission is continuing to "do all in its power to safeguard the rights of veterans."

Children's Bureau Translates Happiness Bulletin to Spanish

Popular Work in Child Training to Be Distributed in Latin-American Nations and to Families in Southwest States.

Little Americans can now be happy in two languages—English and Spanish.

Yielding to an insistent demand from the "Spanish-speaking States," the Children's Bureau has translated its most popular bulletin into words understandable in the land of senoritas and guitars.

"Are You Training Your Child to Be Happy?" a series of 12 lessons in child management, can be purchased now by parents who ask for a copy of "Esta Ud Educando a Su Nino a Ser Feliz."

Almost 500,000 copies of the booklet have been distributed in its English version. The Children's Bureau attributes its popularity to "the greatly increased public interest in mental hygiene and child training."

The Spanish bulletin comes directly as the result of a request from the chairman of the Spanish-speaking parent-teacher associations of the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers.

"It will meet the demands not only from Texas, however, but also from other States—such as New Mexico, California and Arizona—and from Puerto Rico and the Latin-American countries," the bureau declared yesterday when announcing the translation.

U. S. Imposes 50 Pct. Stock Margin Curb

this and restrictive S. E. C. regulations.

Only last week when the market shot downward at the most furious pace in recent years, the board was besieged with requests to cut the 55 per cent long trading margin, and impose margins for the first time on short selling.

Lowering of the 55 per cent margin on stock purchases was hailed with enthusiasm in Wall Street, where the step had been urged for some time. In connection with the new 50 per cent margin on short sales, it was the board's most significant change in recent years.

Imposition of the short-sales margin restriction was ordered only after the Federal Reserve Board's legal staff had determined that authority was specifically contained in the securities act.

Gloom gradually had settled over the stock market in the last two months. This had been attributed to no one factor, but to the cumulative effect of moderate business recessions, increased budget deficits, special session prospects, surplus crops and what Wall Street regarded as restrictive SEC regulations.

The hindering effect of Federal regulations and the need for lowering of margin requirements had been pointed out ten days ago by Winthrop W. Aldrich, board chairman of the Chase National Bank.

The Federal Government kept "hands off," and stock prices continued to slide in one of the steepest declines since 1929. And then on October 19 the market went wild, one-day gyrations sending prices down as much as 13 points and moving 7,287,990 shares of stock—the twelfth largest volume of trading in the history of the exchange.

Action Withheld.

Although the securities and exchange commission watched closely the fluctuations, and concern was manifest along the official Washington front, the SEC and the Federal Reserve Board refrained from comment or action. This apparent aloofness continued as the market improved irregularly after the one-day drop.

Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, called for lowering of stock purchase margins, and [illegible] margins on short selling. But Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, one of the Federal Reserve ac. "fathers," said the board should keep its hands out of the market and confine its attention to commerce and industry.

Fears were expressed for the psychological effect on business activity, and official steps were taken to alleviate business fears. The President predicted a balanced Federal budget in the next fiscal year, and high Administration officials called for modification of business taxes, especially, easing of taxes [illegible] and capital gains.

But last night's action by the Federal Reserve Board was the first direct hand any Federal agency had taken in the stock market situation. Washington officialdom and members of Congress were noncommittal on the likely success of the move.

Senator Glass said he did not know "whether it will do any good or not; I don't know anything about it." He repeated that excessive regulation "is what's wrong with this country."

Chairman Douglas of the S. E. C. said he hadn't had "time to think about it—the idea is just a new one to me and I haven't had time to form any opinions."

The board departed from usual publicity procedure in issuing no formal explanation of its action, aside from the text of the resolution amending its regulations. Observers were left to conclude that the board was adjusting its credit policies to conform with the changed market picture, in an effort to avert an adverse affect upon business and agriculture, its chief concerns.

Loans Increased.

Loans made by brokers and dealers, or by banks to customers for stock purchases were increased from the old 45 per cent limitation to 60 per cent, leaving the remaining 40 per cent of the current market value of the purchased stock to be put up in cash margin by the customer.

This will open up a differential of 15 per cent credit in long margin accounts to be applied toward new purchases.

The same 15 per cent differential was preserved in smaller margins required in loans by one broker to another and from banks to brokers. Margins in these so-called "omnibus accounts" were reduced from 40 to 25 per cent, as of November 1.

Since February, 1936, 55 per cent margins had been required by the board in purchase of some stocks, first under the old statutory formula sliding scale, ranging from 25 to 55 per cent. On April 1, 1936, a flat 55 per cent cash margin was required by the board on brokers' loans to customers, and on May 1, of last year, the same flat 55 per cent margin was imposed on bank loans. They had continued constant since, with increasing complaints from investors.

Smithsonian Ends 56-Year-Old Bell Mystery

osophy," but everyone was too excited yesterday to mind the discrepancy.)

Then came the concluding cryptic comment on the genealogy of the graphophone.

Master of ceremonies for the occasion was T. H. Beard, vice president of the Dictaphone Co., whose products are lineal descendants of Bell's machines. He explained to the audience that Bell was the first to devise a means of recording and transmitting sound without wires. The patent for this photophone, which sends out sound by means of a light ray, would be used for talking motion pictures had it not expired in 1897, Beard said.

Those who lent a hand in prying open the boxes included Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian; Dr. Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society; Bell's two daughters and Alexander Graham Bell Grosvenor, the inventor's 10-year-old great-grandson.

When Bell deposited the packages at the Smithsonian, he specified they should be opened only with the consent of himself, his cousin, Chichester Bell, or his coworker, Charles Sumner Tainter. Tainter, only one of the trio now alive, recently requested Beard to arrange for the opening.

Tainter, Mrs. Grosvenor and Mrs. Fairchild have asked the Smithsonian to place the graphophone among its permanent exhibits as the first talking machine to record the human voice on wax.

In one of the packages were editions of the New York Herald and the National Republic, a Washintgon publication, both of which contained stories about Garfield's assassination. One piece of apparatus was packed in a box which originally contained shoe blacking.

Margin Ruling Widely Hailed In Wall Street

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 27.—Action of the Federal Reserve Board on stock margin requirements was hailed enthusiastically in Wall Street tonight as a step "in the right direction" calculated to go far in restoring confidence to brokers and traders who have been shaken up badly following a $25,000,000,000 washout in stock values.

Ten days ago Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, made a vigorous plea for Federal intervention into the badly tangled affairs of securities markets, the efficiency of which, he said, had been "impaired" by the drastic break in prices.

Theodore D. Carlson, partner of the stock exchange firm of Benjamin & Ferguson, said:

"As far as this rule goes, it is an improvement over the old one, and I think it should help the local market.

"If, following this action, the promise of tax revision begins to appear, it could make a complete change in the unsatisfactory character of the market."

Psychological Effect.

Dr. Lionel D. Edie, prominent economist, said the action "probably will have a wholesome psychological effect on the stock market. It is significant mainly in that it signifies the willingness of Government officials to recognize a situation which has been the subject of much discussion among stock brokers and traders."

Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, declined to comment on the board's ruling on the ground that he had had no opportunity to study the text of the ruling.

The exchange head, however, took a definite stand against "excessive" Federal regulations in his annual report released in August. The exchange recently has instituted an investigation into short selling activities to determine their influence in the recent collapse of values. The results of this inquiry are expected to be made public soon.

Logical Reversal.

Holding a cut in margin requirements on the buying side was a logical reversal of the Federal Reserve move of March, 1936, when stocks were climbing, a parade of bankers, brokers and economists insisted tonight it would be a major influence in halting the market decline and restoring investor and trade confidence.

The practical result, they said, would be to enlarge substantially the potential buying power of margin traders.

More surprising to some close followers of Washington credit control policies was the jacking up of margins on the selling side.

Previously it had been the contention of various authorities that margins on short sales was not a proper subject of Federal Reserve concern because the effect of margin trading on the short side was not to expand the outstanding volume of credit.

It was recalled during the recent market break that a strong demand for jacking up of margins against bear transactions was advocated in Washington by Representative O'Connor, head of the powerful House Rules Committee.

Critics argued the result of the present margin was to put a penalty on buying and a premium on short selling in short-term speculative operations.

Path Cleared for 6 Industries To Take Part in 'Granary' Plan

Inclusion of Dairy Products Comes as a Surprise; 5 Sub-committees Named to Map Surplus Control Program.

program before the special session convenes November 15.

The odds were on Jones, with the close co-operation of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, to win in routing the new farm bill to an initial House showdown.

Inclusion of dairy products, left out of the farm bill pending when Congress adjourned, came as a surprise. Rice also had been only tentatively mentioned as likely to be included.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the sub-committee named to consider a tobacco program already has before it a bill worked out by representatives of tobacco sections last session.

The proposed tobacco program empowers the Secretary of Agriculture to proclaim a surplus in any given type of tobacco, whenever the stock on hand reaches a specified percentage. Marketing quotas for the next year would then be prescribed, and submitted to a referendum of the tobacco growers. If two-thirds or more of these approved it, the control quotas would be invoked and a tax of 50 per cent imposed on all tobacco sold in excess of quotas.

Representative Harold D. Cooley (Democrat), North Carolina, suggested that this tobacco plan be used as a model for the other commodities, but Chairman Jones thought it might not conform to the individual problems of other produce.

Meanwhile, M. Clifford Townsend, of Indiana, disclosed that representatives of Government, agriculture, business and labor from 13 corn belt States will meet in Indianapolis November 8 to hear an address by Secretary Wallace.

Gov. Townsend told Associated Press the meeting was called to discover "legislative sentiment" and said Wallace would make "the most important utterance from the Administration prior to the coming session of Congress."

Two features of the proposed ever-normal granary program remained undetermined as the House Agriculture Committee met yesterday—the type of taxes to be imposed to support the new program, and the extent of compulsory control sought. A fight on both features appeared inevitable in House and Senate.

Only 11 members of the committee (not a quorum), were present.

Sub-committees named by Jones were:

Tobacco—Representatives Mitchell (Democrat), Tennessee; Flannagan (Democrat), Virginia); Cooley (Democrat), North Carolina; Kinzer (Republican), Pennsylvania.

Montague's Pay Not Million but $20,000—Crosby

Hollywood, Oct. 27 (AP).—John Montague is coming back to the scene of his unconventional golfing triumphs to play some more golf—but not for a million dollars, it seems.

Montague, who under his true name of Laverne Moore, was freed yesterday in Elizabethtown, N. Y., of a seven-year-old robbery charge, is returning to Hollywood to fulfill the terms of a contract with Everett Crosby, Bing's brother. It was reported yesterday the contract called for $1,000,000.

"How's he going to make that million dollars?" skeptics asked Larry Crosby, associated with his brother in an agency business.

"Million dollars!" gasped Larry. "He's going to make a couple of shorts, showing how he plays golf, but they won't bring in more than $20,000. There's a deal on for some magazine stuff, pictures and life stories. I guess he'll go on Bing's radio program. He'll probably get a thousand or so for that."

Fliers Home From D. C. Safe in Forced Landing

The Art Of Politics.

Postmaster General Farley's speech in behalf of Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Tammany candidate for Mayor of New York, ran true to form. Indeed, The Post suggested only last Monday that Mr. Farley should add a touch of characteristic finesse to Mr. Mahoney's crude appeal for votes in exchange for Federal benefits. And the New Deal's master political strategist did precisely that.

Mr. Mahoney made the grave mistake of being candid. He asked for support on the assumption that the Government in Washington would turn over to him during the next four years no less than $500,000,000, to be spent on projects of his selection. Sunny Jim must have groaned when he read so ingenuous a statement. At any rate, he took it upon himself to set the record straight.

Under the New Deal, said Mr. Farley, almost $500,000,000 of Federal money already has been spent in New York for parks, schools, bridges, tunnels, highways, etc. But for that generosity the inhabitants of Gotham have only Federal officials to thank. "It would not have made any difference," he insisted, "whether the Mayor of New York City was a Democrat or Republican."

Moreover, Mr. Farley wants New Yorkers to believe that the Administration "does not play politics with relief." "It holds itself above and beyond any such consideration." He went on to point out, however, that the New Deal will have many benefits to distribute during the next few years—housing subsidies, relief funds, unemployment compensation and the like. To maintain his "citadel of economic protection" the party for which he speaks must have the support of the people.

Of course, Mr. Farley would not mix politics and relief. But when people go to the polls he wants them to know what ticket carries the smiling visage of Santa Claus. He doesn't fall in with the idea that Mr. Mahoney could obtain more Federal largesse than Mayor LaGuardia. But he does want New York to elect the Tammany candidate and incidentally show its gratitude to the New Deal.

As to the type of administration New York City could expect with Tammany Hall again in the saddle, Mr. Farley is silent.

Washington's Relief Problem.

With the approach of winter it becomes imperative to find some means of aiding Washington's jobless employables. For several months earlier in the year this problem was bandied about from one agency to another without making any progress toward solution. Throughout the summer it was neglected. Now it has once more been raised by the Board of Public Welfare, in such a way as to demand action.

Many cities have found it necessary to extend relief activities this year, despite the fact that employment has increased in most parts of the country. That is a logical result of the curtailment of WPA activities. As the Federal Government withdraws from this field a larger responsibility falls upon the States and local communities. It is of the utmost importance that they meet this urgent obligation without any attempt at evasion.

For the most part local governments have been able to adjust themselves to the new situation without great difficulty. But the hands of Washington's municipal authorities are tied. They see a widening gap between the contracting WPA program and the number of employables in need of relief. They have no funds to ease the situation. So the Capital acquires the disgraceful reputation of being the only city in the country which makes no provision for public relief of able men without jobs.

The Board of Public Welfare has asked for $1,225,000 to meet this need in the fiscal year 1939. Even if this should be granted, no part of it would be available until next July. In the meantime a considerable number of Washington families lack food, clothing and shelter.

Possibly the Commissioners have been less vigorous than they should have been in seeking a remedy. But the fact remains that their appeal for a supplementary relief appropriation during the last session of Congress met with no response from the Budget Bureau, which sits as a sort of overlord of District finances despite its lack of responsibility for the consequences. Under these conditions, the local government is stymied. Jobless men and women can starve without any agency having authority to assist them.

The implications of this impasse run deep. They point to the acute need for making the District's impotent municipal government effective. But families in dire circumstances cannot wait while governments are reorganized. Emergency measures are clearly in order. When Congress reassembles on November 15 it should be confronted by the evidence of its own neglect. And the initiative in that move will have to come from the community itself.

Unfortunately, the Commissioners cannot carry their case directly to Congress. They must await action, if any, from the Budget Bureau. But the problem could be carried to the White House. The Commissioners should not hesitate to take that course if it becomes necessary. Likewise, it is their responsibility to ascertain the exact extent of need among jobless employables and to present a definite program for their relief.

Inauguration of some positive measure cannot be longer delayed without suggesting lack of confidence in the Board of Public Welfare, which has properly emphasized the plight of the jobless employables as one of the city's most pressing problems.

A Significant Resignation.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht has made so many abortive attempts to withdraw from German official life that current reports as to acceptance of his resignation as minister of economics permit skepticism. However, there is no doubt that he has remained in office to date chiefly because of the unwillingness of the Fuehrer to dispense with his services. Herr Hitler's confidence in Dr. Schacht's financial ability is so great that he has tolerated from him a criticism of Nazi policies that would have cost a lesser man at least his official head.

On the other hand, Dr. Schacht has been gradually deprived of power to keep control over his own program, while the headstrong Gen. Goering has assumed complete command of the Four Year Plan designed to make Germany economically self-sufficient. Dr. Schacht has made no secret of his belief that this arbitrary program of forced industrial expansion can only lead to the financial and economic ruin of his country. He has also repeatedly called for national saving as an alternative to inflationary devices for financing the government's needs.

In a recent address, indeed, the minister of economics attacked those persons who "believe that the banknote printing press has lost its terrors merely because, thanks to foreign exchange control, the results are not daily visible in the dollar exchange." Undoubtedly, Dr. Schacht's own skill has contributed to the delusion of financial impregnability and thereby indirectly encouraged rash spending. That is one of the penalties men often pay for wandering from the path of financial orthodoxy even when such aberrations seem justified by unusual conditions.

Pleading economic necessity, Dr. Schacht has built up an elaborate system of exchange control which has put German industry into a straitjacket in its dealings with the outside world. It was admittedly his hope that with the revival of world trade these controls would be relaxed, so that Germany might again be able to buy more freely in world markets instead of relying upon expensive and inferior domestic substitutes for needed foreign raw materials and foodstuffs.

With Dr. Schacht at the head of the ministry of economics, there has been a natural tendency to discount the significance of his warnings of disaster. But his withdrawal will give added emphasis to his protests against the policies now being followed, especially if he also severs his connection with the Reichsbank. He is an ambitious man whose past record indicates that he would not voluntarily abandon any vessel in his charge as long as he had hopes of bringing it safely into port. Now Gen. Goering has taken the helm, sailing a dangerous course with the confidence born of ignorance.

Dr. Schacht's resignation comes at a time when Germany is outwardly prosperous, to judge from the evidence afforded by industrial indices and employment statistics. But nobody knows the superficiality of these signs better than the retiring leader. Active employment does not mean higher living standards when men and capital are being conscripted to forge unproductive implements of destruction and to produce expensive substitutes for needed imports.

For a time the German people may be tricked into believing that they are better off because of the Four Year Plan. But as the process of attrition is aggravated by uneconomic exploitation of the country's scanty resources they will undoubtedly become aware of the real situation. When that day comes there will be demand for a scapegoat. Dr. Schacht, who never acts on impulse, has doubtless figured that he will then be far happier as a private citizen.

Comrade Tom Sawyer.

"The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" has just been ordered removed from the schools and public libraries in the State of Rio de Janeiro because, in the exalted opinion of the Brazilian authorities, it is subversive and communistic literature.

Can this be our Tom they are talking about? Can this be the young entrepreneur of decidedly capitalist leanings and a gift for exploitation who managed to make the chore of whitewashing a fence the royal road to unearned wealth?

We don't know how it sounds in Portuguese but as written by Mark Twain the language of the book makes Tom out to be an economic royalist of the most acquisitive variety. Thus:—

> When the middle of the afternoon came, from being a poor, poverty-stricken boy in the morning, Tom was literally rolling in wealth. He had, besides the things I have mentioned, twelve marbles, part of a jew's-harp, a piece of blue-bottle glass to look through, a spool cannon, a key that wouldn't unlock anything, a fragment of chalk, a glass stopper of a decanter, a tin soldier, a couple of tadpoles, six firecrackers, a kitten with only one eye, a brass doorknob, a dog collar—but no dog—the handle of a knife, four pieces of orange peel, and a dilapidated old window-sash. He had had a nice, good idle time all the while—plenty of company—and the fence had three coats of whitewash on it! If he hadn't run out of whitewash, he would have bankrupted every boy in the village.

And how about that treasure hunt which Tom and Huckleberry Finn conducted and which netted them over twelve thousand pre-Roosevelt dollars, an income of a gold dollar each week-day and every other Sunday, an entrance into society and even a daily bath?

In Russia Tom and Huck might be saluted as Stakhanovites for displaying such enterprise. But it is more likely they would be branded as right deviationists or bourgeois exploiters. Communists don't have the sense of humor to appreciate Tom Sawyer. And in that, at least, Brazil seems communistically inclined.

The Treaty Is Still Binding.

It is probably no mere accident that Japan's refusal to participate in the forthcoming conference of the Nine-Power Treaty signatories, at Brussels, was delayed until it could be made to coincide with news of the Chinese retreat at Shanghai.

A large part of this key city is now in the hands of the Japanese, after 74 days of furious and continuous fighting. Presumably Tokyo reckons that the battle of Shanghai is over, or soon will be, and that nothing but mopping up operations are left before they can announce undisputed possession of China's greatest port.

The gains made at Shanghai, coupled with the advance of their armies in the north, have doubtless convinced the Japanese warlords that Chinese resistance is beginning to crumble. Thus there is, from the aggressor's viewpoint, no reason for participation in a mediatory conference where his representatives would inevitably be on the defensive, and might be maneuvered into an awkward and dangerous position.

To be sure, the other powers can now go ahead without worrying about the obstructionist tactics which Japan would of course have employed at Brussels. Yet Japan is not without friends and advocates in the nine-power group. Italy is very likely to play the game of the Tokyo government, at least to the extent of blocking any action which could be regarded as detrimental in principle to Mussolini's policy of intervention in Spain.

It is quite possible, however, that the Japanese government is exaggerating the importance of its gains, both at Shanghai and in North China. In the latter area the Japanese lines are so greatly extended as to make many of their positions precarious. And around Shanghai much still remains to be done before the tenacious Chinese resistance is effectively crushed. The fact that Chiang Kai-shek's troops managed to execute a very orderly retreat, to previously prepared entrenchments, appears to contradict the Japanese belief that victory is assured.

In the meantime Japan's economic and financial position becomes increasingly precarious. Her gold reserve is steadily diminishing and Japanese belts are being tightened. Her susceptibility to boycotts or sanctions, and her successful destruction of her best Asiatic market, become increasingly apparent.

Moreover, Japan's attempt to justify her refusal to participate in the Brussels conference must be rejected as an utterly indefensible argument. The Nine-Power Treaty has not become "obsolete" merely because one of the contracting parties finds it convenient to violate its pledges. Until definitely set aside by the joint action of all the signatories the pact continues to be binding, both on Japan and on the other eight powers.

In view of the immorality of the Japanese attitude it is more than ever incumbent on these other nations to take a strong stand against treaty-smashing tactics, and to do so regardless of which way the military pendulum swings in the Far East.

Correction.

The Post regrets that an editorial entitled "Strange Move At The FCC," appearing in the issue of October 21, conveyed an inaccurate impression of the circumstances under which Commissioner Payne was disqualified from sitting in the current disbarment proceedings.

In a release to the press dated October 19 Mr. Payne said that the majority members of the commission had denied him an opportunity to make a statement in court. That release was relied upon without qualification in the editorial referred to.

Actually, Chairman McNinch asked Commissioner Payne if he "desired to file any motion, affidavit, answer or other paper or procedure in his own behalf," to be represented by counsel or to present any evidence in the issue. Mr. Payne answered each question in the negative. He maintained that the commission was without authority to disqualify him.

It was after the majority had decided to grant the motion to disqualify Mr. Payne that he was, according to his version, denied the privilege of making a statement in court on the ground that it "did not belong in the record."

Use Of Vocal Cords.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent interesting and scholarly article by Ray C. B. Brown, music editor of The Post, an item appears which is news. As noted, Sir Milsom Rees, distinguished London throat specialist, makes the astonishing statement before his colleagues that the vocal cords were not placed in the human throat for the purpose of singing.

The very universality of singing, the evolution of the singing voice, from crudeness to limpid beauty, agility, extent, as developed by the old Italian school, would show that singing has found its distinctive place and an adequate and sympathetic organ of production.

Hence the mystification of the statement advanced by Sir Milsom Rees.

Early communication of the primitive will suggest use of the vocal cords like any other animal by grunts, groans, chattering (monkeys once, we are told). Man became upright (at least in posture). Intelligence grew. Language evolved. Idealism developed. Prosaic speech was inadequate. Nature sounds attracted, the cadence of the wind, bird calls. Man imitated and found fluctuations of pitch in his own voice. Melody evolved, so man sang, and sang with vocal cords, with ever larger sweep of interest and popularity.

The ancients used crude songs in festival, war, religion. During the Middle Ages the wandering minstrels and troubadors impressed through folksong and songs of romance. Later, opera, oratorio, the lied appeared in definite form, giving dignity to an admired art. And now the whole world sings.

Naturally, with all the world singing, a delicate organ would suffer some abuse. Sir Milsom Rees, in his profession, deals with such derelicts, those who have used their voices unwisely. There is room for discouragement. And yet, if he is a lover of music he will probably have heard the great singers of his time, and will know also the historical names of superlative artists that have come down to us from earlier years and left an impression by the glory of voice and imagination.

So with all deference to an eminent authority it would seem that the vocal cords, until we find something better, are admirably adapted for the production of the voice in singing.

American Sweepstakes?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a constant subscriber, I hope you will find time to read this note and print it.

I wish to state that I heartily indorse the remarks made by a certain Persian rug dealer in Washington who happened to be lucky enough to win an Irish Sweepstakes prize.

His remarks were, "Why should we not have one in America, so that we too can alleviate pain and build hospitals also?" Infantile paralysis, what a terrible scourge for our children! How nobly our sincere President is fighting it. Why not help him?

Why not give him a sweepstakes (with millions to fight it); why not call it the "F. D. R." Foundation and reach every crippled, starved child in the United States?

Discipline On American Ships.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All persons not wedded to the forces which make for disorder which have been unleashed upon the country will agree with what was said by Boake Carter last night in discussing the deplorable condition in the American merchant marine. As he says, the Algic is but a symbol of lack of discipline and disloyalty. But why devote ourselves to the symptom rather than to the disease which will devour the representative institutions of this country—is now devouring them with avidity and gusto—unless it is cured?

Unless discipline and loyalty are observed and inculcated from above they will never be found in the lower units. While Mr. Carter made no mention of it, he is doubtless fully aware of the fact that only yesterday Congress was being urged to enact measures well known by its proponents to be of doubtful constitutionality, and when this effort was not wholly successful, a flank attack was made upon the independence of the judiciary—the only sure safeguard that the people have that their rulers will be required to observe the limitations upon their delegated powers. We still continue in the shadow of these threatening clouds.

The Pinafore group still scampers about the decks of the Ship of State, set the sails in landlubber fashion, and assure us that there will be no storms. But to revert to the merchant marine: I quote from the letter of a friend who made a trip to and from the Orient on American vessels during the past summer. "Never again do I want to travel on an American line . . . Just one little incident after another—and we never leave a port without half the crew being 'poured in' dead drunk—at Yokohama they stood on the dock drinking and smashing empty bottles on the side of the ship until the gangplank was raised, and at Honolulu we were delayed in sailing an hour while they blew the warning whistle every 15 minutes trying to round up the missing drunks, and finally sailed leaving three of them behind."

It still remains, as one old sea dog put it only the other day, "There is more security with a good crew on a poor ship than with a poor crew on a good ship."

Get the right crew on the Ship of State and the lesser evils in the American merchant marine and elsewhere under the American flag will promptly begin to heal themselves.

HARRISON TILGHMAN.
Easton, Md., Oct. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is easy to sit in a comfortable office or home and denounce the high crime of mutiny at sea with a demand for its archaic remedy, to "throw the mutineers in irons!"

But men do not rashly risk the desperate hazards of mutiny unless they have something to mutiny about. As a reminder of what a hell afloat a freighter can be, it might be well to reread Robert Louis Stevenson's passages in "The Wrecker On the Bucko Mate," whose race is by no means extinct.

If investigations are in order, is there any reason why the conduct of the ship's officers should not be investigated as well as that of the crew?

And then it might be well to extend the inquiry into the inner politics of the Maritime Commission and the business backgrounds of its members.

Murals At The Zoo.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the interest of the animal world, how many of the throngs viewing the new animal quarters at the Zoo have been appallingly impressed with their artificiality? However cleverly executed and attractive these mural decorations may appear to the human eye the animals are not deceived.

Such artificiality is more congruous and better suited to artificial animals—serving the same purpose for the curious gaze of the public while eliminating the cruelty of confinement of the innocent prisoners accustomed to the freedom of open spaces or jungles for which they were intended by Nature.

Here these hapless animals, accustomed to the freedom of their natural environment, are doomed to serve a life term of imprisonment for no crime committed, to pace to and fro endlessly, uncomprehending, ever hoping again to experience the freedom of which man has deprived them. And in some of these new quarters they are even deprived of catching a glimpse of the sky outside and the surrounding trees and Nature.

It is like patining the cells where human prisoners are confined to simulate the scenes of their particular environment.

Such interior decorations may serve their purpose to enhance the quarters of specimens such as fish, crustacea, reptiles, all of which are supplied with their natural element—namely water, and deprived only of space, which they perhaps do not realize.

Therefore, the hippopotami and rhinoceri may be comfortable and happy enough to a certain extent, but that cannot be said where the sagacious pachyderm is concerned.

A zoo is a merciless as well as uncalled for and costly institution at best, at anytime. Many of the animals were better off in their old quarters, the new ones being a needless and extravagant waste so long as they do not mean any improvement for the animals.

Love, War And Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: More press writers like Pegler are needed to expose New Deal double dealing. It is great the way he lays bare Administration deceit, chicanery and cunning.

The President is always looking for scapegoats on whom to lay the blame for Administration folly. He calls them "enemies of democracy," but the real enemies are in his own camp of which he is chief. If the Nation survives the New Deal it can survive anything.

By subsidizing large voting groups with public funds in order to perpetuate itself in power the Administration has just about probed the depths of folly. It would seem that even an elementary sense of decency would forbid that sort of thing, but it is said that all is fair in love and war (I would take the negative side of that proposition) and so it would be in politics, only more so.

Railroad Rates.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your recent editorial "Correcting a Costly Mistake," you criticize the I. C. C. for denying relief to the railroads until they are reduced to desperate circumstances. For my part I can't see any "relief" in raising freight rates $47,000,000, against a wage raise of $60,000,000.

However, let us all cheer up, because with Government ownership of railroads now inevitable, our dear Government will save a lot of money buying the securities of insolvent roads. DISGUSTED.

The Post Impressionist

Reliable Jones.

WE HEARD him long before we reached Glen Echo. It was a still night and his thunderous chant echoed and reverberated through the wooded hills.

At first there were no words . . . just a jumbled singsong, rising and falling in a strange, compelling rhythm. But as we came closer, driving slowly along the dark, narrow highway, we could hear the words.

"I'se six feet tall an' I'se a gamblin' man an' I'll watch yore car for jest two bits an' it's safe with Reliable Jones."

There was a ribbon of cars ahead, moving slowly, and we could see Reliable Jones.

He stood by the side of the road, an ebony giant, and he used a great stick to point the way into his parking concession, twirling it like a drum major's baton.

It was early evening and vast vacant spaces yawned in the free parking areas outside the amusement park, but not many of the cars went to the free parking spaces because they stopped to see Reliable Jones.

He stood grinning there in the dark, with his white teeth flashing in his black face, and he put on a show that was worth the two bits he charged for watching your car.

"I'se big an' strong an' I'll watch yore car an' it'll be hyar when you-all comes back 'cause don't nobody monkey roun' with Ol' Reliable Jones."

His baton twirled as the chant went up and Reliable Jones leaped and twisted and turned in a strange jungle dance and the vacant spaces in his small lot filled up as cars turned in that could have parked free up ahead.

We followed the crowd into his lot and we didn't leave right away but sat in the car and watched Reliable Jones.

The night echoed with his rich African voice and his tattered pants flapped and the muscles rippled under his shirt as he gyrated in front of his lot.

"I'se big an' strong an' I'se six foot tall an' I'll watch yor car fo' jest two bits . . ."

It was fascinating and we stayed a long while watching Reliable Jones.

Then we got out of the car and walked along the side of the highway, moving with the crowd into the park.

It was a warm night and a lot of people had come to Glen Echo to get away from Washington's heat, and the sideshows and concessions in the park all were crowded.

We walked past the swimming pool and the dance hall and across to the midway where people of all classes and ages were moving slowly along, laughing and talking and eating and buying tickets to go in the Krazy House and the other concessions.

There was a barker in front of the Krazy House and he stood near the ticket booth and shouted a sales talk for his show.

"You can't go wrong, folks. Best thing in the park. Thrills and chills and all for a dime. Get your tickets while they're hot. There's only a few of 'em left . . ."

He kept shouting and the crowd filed up to the ticket booth and business was good.

But somehow, to us, his sales talk fell flat and we left and walked along the midway and stopped now and then, but we didn't have any fun in the park.

Just then, booming above the noise of the park, drowning out the barkers' shouts and the talk of the crowd and even the rattle of gunfire from across the park in the shooting gallery, came the chant:

"I'se six foot tall an' I'se a gamblin' man an' I'll watch yore car for jest two bits an' it's safe with Reliable Jones."

SHIRLEY HURST.

A Chorus Of Real Peers.

Would anyone except a die-hard royalist deny Gilbert's immortal quip that since Good Queen Bess' time the House of Lords has done nothing in particular and done it very well? In our own century these relics of neo-Norman blood have been further reduced to conspicuous desuetude by the rise in land and inheritance taxes paralleled by the falling market in American heiresses. What, then, can be done to preserve the mellowest of English superstructures?

An American impresario has found the way. Advertising in the London want ad—or was it agony—columns, he offered a six months' contract and a free passage to New York to those bluebloods who would tread the boards in a New York theater. Snubbed as "so impertinent" and "damned impertinent" by two of Mayfair's ennobled butterflies, the American vulgarian has nonetheless made a good beginning.

Who does not remember the march of the peers in "Iolanthe," verbally and musically the subtlest of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas? What sold-out houses, what feminine heart throbs and adoring eyes, and what veritable art would attend performances wherein every peer in the gorgeously robed chorus really is a peer! What a rich harvest the gentlemen of the stage would reap in connubial opportunities! How the awestruck American audience would genuflect as it shivered at the social impact of titled voices singing "Bow, bow, ye lower middle classes. Bow, bow, ye tradesmen and ye masses!" And, best of all, the income taxes imposed upon the now prosperous peers would constitute an ingenious way of collecting a portion of the British war debts.

Olympics in Japan.

IN 1936 THE more or less decent nations of the world decided against their better judgment and instincts to send athletic teams to the Nazi Olympics in Berlin. They knew the Nazis had lied about several matters. They had not only excluded Jews from competition for places on their team—a violation of the Olympic conditions—but in their holding of the winter games at Garmisch, a preliminary to the main program, they had converted the occasion into a military and political display—also contrary to the spirit of the games and in flagrant violation of a special vow which nobody had believed anyway.

Moreover, in the very headquarters of the world press assembled to cover the sports they had distributed a mimeographed memorandum calling on those present to "make propaganda" for Doktor Henlein, the Nazis' sedition master in Czechoslovakia, a neighbor country whose team was competing in the sports. This act of political treachery under the banner of the Olympics so incensed some of the guests from the free countries that the Nazis hastily tried to recall the memorandum, explaining that it had been meant only for Nazi correspondents. That only made it worse, if possible. It wasn't the act itself which they regretted; it was being caught that hurt.

• • • •

KNOWING THAT the Nazis had neither honor nor the faintest appreciation of the spirit of the Olympics, the Americans and others who thought of withdrawing from the summer games decided to participate, nevertheless. Their motives were not noble. The officials had set their hearts on the trip and the honors which would be paid them by the politico-military bosses of the Nazi regime, and the athletes, having won their positions on the team, cared less for principle than for the gratification of their own athletic ambitions and the trip to Europe.

Possibly there were some who thought that an example of civility would appeal to the Nazis' better nature, if any, and shame them into an outward show of human manners. If so they were mistaken, for the show was dominated by politics and militarism, and the settlement built for an Olympic village was designed to serve afterward as an army reservation.

• • • •

TRUE TO FORM, the Nazis violated every pledge, conferred political honors on some of their winners and when the games were over announced that for the Tokyo games of 1940 they were planning to create a class of state gladiators who would be subsidized by the party. They would be professional career men in sport, as officers are professionals and career men in the army and navy.

In consideration of all such muckerism two American teams which toured Europe last summer avoided Germany, and this now has led to a protest which demands in effect that the Nazi standards be forced upon the civilized tribes. The protest calls for an apology to the Nazis or expulsion of the American Amateur Athletic Union from the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

The Nazis, with their keen sense of their social inferiority in such matters, feel that the invitation from them is the same as a command and that a declination is an insult to that which they quaintly regard as their honor. If the protest is upheld by the politico-sporting diplomats of the International Federation it will mean that the Nazis are free to compel other nations to play with them and treat them as equals regardless of any outrages which they may commit against the accepted rules of sporting decency.

INASMUCH as the Japanese are to be hosts to the next Olympics and considering the state of things in the Orient, this is a good time to begin to think of withdrawing from the whole Olympic business. These games have now fallen into government hands in many self-conscious nations and are becoming political and military occasions in which sport is the goat. The dictators and professional killers make mischief enough themselves, and international sport in their hands will defeat the very ends for which the Olympics were revived.

Maxwell Flyer—Oh, boy! Why, believe it or not, ye ed once made a trip in one (a stock car, folks, positively a stock car) from New Haven to Columbus Circle, New York—75 long miles—as an observer in a sealed-hood test. They sealed up the hood at the start, and the car got clear through to New York without having to lift the hood to see why she stopped! It moved so quietly horses jumped twice as far when they became suddenly aware of its presence. Steered with a long tiller. And you took it down to the garage to have it charged (the car not the tiller, silly!) every week or two.

Mr. Hull's Visit

Observer Reports Secretary Well Received, But Questions His Success In Winning Canada To A Broader British Market.

By William Marchington.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Ottawa.

MR. CORDELL HULL has now come and gone. During their brief stay in Canada, both he and his wife charmed everybody who had the pleasure of meeting them. The Secretary of State impressed one and all as a man of enlightened outlook, dignified bearing and attractive personality. His broad survey of the fundamental principles of international morality with its cautiously phrased but none-the less devastating criticisms of its present violators which he delivered at Toronto University won him general commendation.

Both he and Premier Mackenzie King were at elaborate pains to assert that his visit was purely social and had no connection with public affairs. But their disclaimers did not exactly carry conviction and it is thought here unbelievable that Mr. Hull did not have some conversations with Canadian ministers about current problems in the relations of their two countries and particularly about the projected triangular readjustment of trade relations between Britain, Canada and the United States. However, if such discussions took place, their nature and results are shrouded in a veil of secrecy.

Canada is deeply involved in the negotiations for an Anglo-American trade treaty. Its consummation seems to depend upon how far the Ottawa government is willing to acquiesce in an abatement of preferential tariff privileges now enjoyed in the British market, in order to give American exporters a larger share.

The trade and tariff experts of the Canadian government have been exploring the possibilities of a rearrangement of duties, but otherwise very little headway with the negotiations has been made at the Canadian end. For one reason, Dr. O. D. Skelton, the deputy minister of external affairs, who is something more than the mere head of his department and is one of the ministry's most trusted advisers on tariff policy, has been away at Geneva, representing his country at the Assembly of the League of Nations, and he happens to be one of the key men of the situation.

U. S. Seeks Lowering Of Tariff On Apples.

ONE OF the concessions from Canada which the Roosevelt Administration ardently desires is a curtailment of the preferential margins on apples and other fruits, which at present give Canadian fruitgrowers a tremendous advantage in the British market over their American competitors.

Mr. Ilsley, who is the ablest of the younger members of the cabinet, happens not merely to represent Nova Scotia, one of the fruitgrowing provinces of Canada, but also to sit in Parliament for the constituency which contains the Annapolis Valley—a famous apple-growing region. In the course of a provincial election which was held in Nova Scotia last summer, the local Conservatives alleged that Premier King, who was then in London, was ready to make a bargain which would sacrifice the privileges and reduce the incomes of the fruitgrowers of Nova Scotia for the sake of promoting an Anglo-American trade treaty.

The Liberals grew frightened that these charges might be accepted at their face value and thus cost them the election. Accordingly, Mr. Ilsley intervened in the campaign and gave assurances that no deal had been concluded and that he would fight to the last ditch against any concessions which would hurt his fruitgrowing constituents.

It is rumored in Ottawa that he agreed to go to Geneva only on the definite pledge from his leader that no fresh bargain about the duties on apples and other fruits would be made during his absence. Now that he is back, he is understood to be putting up a stiff fight in the cabinet against any impairment of the present fruit preferences in the British tariff. For him, the issue is exceedingly important. If he consented to their abatement, he would almost certainly be faced with the loss of his seat and the interruption of his promising political career at the next election.

He feels strongly on the subject and when the original Ottawa agreements made by the Bennett ministry in 1932 came up for discussion in Parliament and the Liberal party opposed it, he voted with the Conservatives on the ground that he could not oppose a measure promising such benefits to his constituents. Thus, it is not beyond the bounds of possibility that he might, in the interests of his own political future, count it advisable to resign on the ground that he could not break pledges given to his supporters.

What might ease the situation for him would be the opening of the American market to cod and other products of the fishing industry of Nova Scotia. He could then point out that, if his province was losing in one way, it was gaining very substantially in another.

BUT THE PROBLEM of the apple duties is only one of the numerous complications which surround the proposed readjustment of trade relations. There are also signs that the leaders of the Conservative party, which recently suffered a great disappointment in the provincial election in Ontario, discern the possibility of finding in tariff concessions for the benefit of the United States a political issue, which might help to revive the party's drooping fortunes. At any rate, Mr. C. H. Cahan, a veteran politician of extreme Tory views who sat in the last Conservative cabinet and is now Mr. Bennett's chief lieutenant at Ottawa, saw fit on the eve of Mr. Hull's arrival at Ottawa to deliver to a party meeting in Montreal a violent attack upon what he described as the "insidious propaganda" now afoot to barter away vital Canadian interests for the sake of cultivating the good graces of the United States.

He argued vehemently that it was monstrous to suggest that Canada should make sacrifices for the benefit of a country which had repeatedly shown, by such measures as the Fordney-McCumber and Smoot-Hawley tariffs, a willingness to do as much harm as possible to the producers of Canada. He also protested against the illusory doctrine that Canada must maintain as harmonious relations as possible with the United States because in the event of foreign aggression against her territory she could rely upon the protection of the United States.

It is true that Mr. Cahan represents a "diehard" point of view which is not accepted by most of the Conservative party. But his leader, Mr. Bennett, in a speech delivered at Brandon, in Manitoba, on October 22, also fired some shots at the Liberals' tariff policy. He declared that when his ministry, between 1930 and 1935, tried to negotiate a trade agreement with the United States, he found "that, in all conscience, he could not accept the American proposals, and I still stand by that opinion."

So, with the Conservatives watching every move in the game, the King ministry will have, perforce, to walk warily in its negotiations, and it will have to receive a very substantial quid pro quo from the Roosevelt Administration before it acquiesces in a reduction of its existing preferential margins in the British tariff.

Ottawa Pessimistic On Foreign Affairs.

MINISTERS at Ottawa continue to give the international situation close attention and to show considerable misgivings. They have incurred the wrath of the Canadian supporters of the League of Nations on two counts. First, because Canada's vote is supposed to have been cast at Geneva against the retention of a seat on the Council of the League by the Spanish "Valencia" government; and, secondly, because Canada refrained from voting when an important move against Japan's policy was up for decision.

The Winnipeg Free Press, normally a friendly supporter of the government, has made a strong editorial assault upon it for the weakness and vacillation of its foreign policy. It has castigated it for conveying the impression that a Canadian Liberal government has a certain measure of sympathy with militarist dictatorships. It also accuses it of practicing methods of secrecy and evasion in regard to its foreign policy which cannot be tolerated in a democracy.

Probably the majority of the King ministry are firm devotees of isolationism, and Mr. King is habitually chary of making any definite commitments to support policies sponsored either by the League of Nations or the British government. But President Roosevelt's Chicago speech and other indications of a change in American policy toward international affairs have had a marked effect at Ottawa and the King ministry has signified its intention of sending representatives to the approaching conference at Brussels.

One of these will be Senator Dandurand, who was at Geneva and is staying in Europe at Premier King's request. The other may be Mr. Vincent Massey, Canada's high commissioner in London.

Old Illusion

By Barnet Nover.

M. Tardieu's Testimony.

THE DISCLOSURES made under oath by Andre Tardieu of how, while premier, he used government funds to subsidize the Fascist Croix de Feu and its leader, Col. Francois de la Rocque, is certain to produce an explosion of wrath in France.

Yet these revelations should really occasion no surprise. Tardieu's tactics are precisely those employed by governments and by businessmen in Italy in the period preceding Mussolini's March on Rome, by German reactionaries toward the Hitler movement and by extreme Right elements everywhere toward Fascist movements in their own lands and abroad.

Probably Tardieu felt, and his testimony bears this out, that the Communist danger was greater than the Fascist threat and that the latter could be built up to the point of smashing the Reds without undermining the republic; at any rate that he—the agile and astute M. Tardieu—could at the right moment jump astride the horse he had so lavishly fed with golden oats.

• • • •

FORTUNATELY for France and for the world M. Tardieu's calculations were never put to a test. Despite the liberal outlays made to De la Rocque from the government's secret funds, the Croix de Feu, as a Fascist bid for power, never got beyond the nuisance stage. For if the French Tories learned nothing from the experience of Italy and Germany, the French workers had learned a great deal.

At the moment of danger the latter consolidated their ranks, drawing to them all those who believed in the republic and in democracy. Instead of a Fascist government, France got a Popular Front regime and De la Rocque and the other would-be Hitlers and Mussolinis of France went into eclipse.

It was not so in Italy. Nor was it so in Germany. At any stage before the March on Rome the Fascist threat could have been eliminated by strong action on the part of the government. But successive governments viewed the lawless actions of Blackshirt bullies with complacence when not secretly encouraging them to do their worst against the "Reds."

The politicians in power were certain they could manage to shackle the demon they temporarily tolerated once that demon had performed the task they wanted it to perform. Similarly, those industrialists and bankers who subsidized Mussolini, believed they would profit from their investment by keeping Left movements from getting out of bounds. But the prison they helped build for their enemies they, too, now find themselves in.

• • • •

AND IT HAS been no whit different in Germany. Hitler might have got nowhere had it not been for the aid and encouragement he received from the Thyssens, the Hugenbergs, the Von Papens and all the others who saw in the future Fuehrer a useful fanatic whom they could twist around their little fingers when his usefulness was over.

But we know what happened. The old line reactionaries who, with the aid of the camarilla in the president's palace, persuaded old Hindenburg to be faithless to his oath, were certain, when the first Hitler regime was created with the Nazis outnumbered in the cabinet, three to one, that it would be they who would rule the roost. However it was not long before Hitler kicked over the ladder upon which he had ascended to power.

The German industrialists who financed Hitler may still be grateful to him because he has smashed the trade unions and is keeping wages down. But this honey has a large fly in it. At every stage they find their operations restricted and impeded and regulated by the totalitarian state. Some of them, certainly, would be glad to recall the old regime, trade unions and all.

• • • •

SCHACHT was one of the group who encouraged Hitler's rise to power. Schacht stayed on. His particular brand of financial magic was found to be indispensable to the Third Reich. No one has managed better and longer than he to pull rabbits out of an empty hat. But for some time Schacht has been little more than a pampered prisoner in a jail whose walls have steadily grown narrower.

For months, he has sought either to escape or widen the walls of that special type of concentration camp where Hitler had placed him. He succeeded in doing neither. Even now despite actual reports from Berlin to that effect there is no certainty that he has resigned or, if he has, that his resignation will be accepted. And there is even less certainty that his not unconscious fight against anarchy in the Third Reich will meet with any success. The multiuniformed Hermann Goering, and all he stands for, are in the saddle. Clearly the corpulent general has no intention of dismounting.

It all constitutes a sorry commentary on human intelligence. In Italy, at least, the illusions entertained by the bankers and industrialists and oversmart politicians regarding the transitory nature of fascism can be explained away on the ground that after all, they had no way of knowing better. Mussolini was the first of the line of neo-Caesars. No such excuse is possible in the German case and certainly none for the actions of the Tardieus and those who, elsewhere in democratic lands have given and continue to give aid and comfort to anti-democratic movements.

Nor are such illusions confined within state borders. Today Great Britain for instance, though by no means she alone, is acting toward Italy and Germany and Gen. Franco precisely as Hugenberg and von Papen acted toward Hitler. In the international sphere the British government is entertaining the same absurd belief that it can keep fascism within bounds as was entertained by Italian conservatives before the March on Rome and by their German counterparts before the Reichstag fire. And the consequences may be as disastrous for the world as they have been for Italy and for Germany.

Papal Chamberlain

By William Lyon Phelps

Francis Augustus MacNutt.

"A Papal Chamberlain" is the title of a very interesting volume edited by the Rev. John J. Donovan, with a foreword by His Eminence Cardinal Hayes and a preface by the late G. K. Chesterton, one of the last things he wrote; this book was published just one year ago.

The full title is "A Papal Chamberlain: The Personal Chronicle of Francis Augustus MacNutt:" the publishers are Longmans, Green & Co., New York. There are many illustrations.

• • • •

This is the autobiography of a Man of God who knew the world. He was born in Indiana, studied at Exeter and Harvard, traveled in Europe and the Orient, met interesting men of genius such as Oscar Wilde and Whistler, was appointed private chamberlain at the Vatican and was closely associated with one of the greatest Popes in history, Leo XIII, seeing him nearly every day, being present in the Vatican when he died, and keeping intimate relations with the two following Popes, Pius X and Benedict XV. It is interesting that an American of Presbyterian Scot ancestry, married to a New York lady, Margaret Ogden, should have become not only an ardent Roman Catholic, but should have played so important a part in the Church.

• • • •

The most interesting thing that happened during his law studies at Harvard was the visit of Oscar Wilde, and the really delightful impression Wilde made on the Harvard students when he took tea with them in a college room in the yard; and his personal kindness to the author of this book.

The author died December 30, 1927, in his sixty-fifth year; and when the privately printed edition of his book was brought to him, he remarked "My book and I are finished at the same time."

Tom McCarthy

Backstage at the Capitol.

LIFE BACKSTAGE in a vaudeville theater is pretty casual. It might be downright peaceful, if it weren't for the gate crashers and the animal acts.

The ponies worried the house manager.

"We can handle the sister acts, the magicians, the full orchestra and the prima donnas. But the ponies . . . they're a problem! They've got a lot of human traits. But they're not human. And they're temperamental. Even the 'flymen,' 'pinmen' and the 'grips' are complaining. They're breaking up the poker games!"

TOM McCARTHY.

Personally, I thought the ponies were the nicest part of the show.

Of course, I had to admit that the ponies were breaking up the poker games. I learned that even before I learned that a "grip" was a scene shifter and that a "pinman" was a curtain-raiser.

The ponies, you might say, were the one unpredictable part of the Capitol Theater vaudeville show. Gautier, apparently didn't care what they did. That's why the house manager was worried.

The "pinmen" and "grips" were worried for another reason. When Gautier turned the ponies loose, they always headed for the card game. It's bad enough to have human "kibitzers," but when a horse's face is looking on, and when the horse is neighing out the fact that you're holding a straight flush . . . well, that's more than any one man should be asked to bear!

• • • •

HOWEVER, I think there was still another reason why the "grips" and "pinmen" objected to the ponies. When the ponies came on the scene, it meant that the show was about to begin—and that they'd have to go to work.

I went backstage at the Capitol Theater the other night to find out what happens in the course of the vaudeville show. The ponies were my first discovery. They were the signal that it was time to work.

Danny made a dash for the lightboard and began tossing switches, as Phil Lampkin's orchestra rose in the pit. Though the audience out in front isn't aware of his existence, Danny is an important part of each show.

During the course of the overture, the orchestra director flashed signals to Danny with an electric buzzer. Each buzz called for a different type of light and, should Danny forget just what the signals meant, he had a cue sheet beside him.

Danny is one man who doesn't think much of the traditional busman's holiday.

"I've been working vaudeville houses and 'legit' for so long," he said, "that, when I get a day off, I don't want to see a show of any kind. I know some of the boys take in a show on their day off—but not me." Danny made a grab for the switch, as the overture reared to a conclusion.

By that time, the wings backstage were becoming congested. Gautier's ponies were wandering around. "Senator" Murphy, who in a few minutes would be making his "political" speech for the delight of the audience, was sitting in his shirt sleeves playing with the trained dogs of the animal act. And the stage hands, with evil intent, were finding time to urge me into their specially wired "electric" chair.

• • • •

DURING the interlude between the overture and the opening of the stage show, Gautier . . . whose pony Steeplechase, was the first act . . . began to round up his charges.

"They look like nice little ponies," he said, "and they are. But they're temperamental, and sometimes they get mean." He showed me a finger which one of his playful Shetlands had nearly chewed off.

"Dogs are smarter than horses," Gautier said, "and horses are smarter than ponies. But, if you're patient, you can train any of them."

I don't think any of the "grips" really mumbled anything under their breaths about "animal acts," but they all looked a little relieved when the turn ended; the ponies were rounded up, the monkey put back in its box and the dogs bedded down for the night.

The Keller sisters followed the animal act, and then Senator Murphy took the stage. By that time, the "grips" and "flymen" were almost normal again. One of them was already fingering the deck of cards. The show was almost over and peace poised above the wings.

Then something started up near the door and a couple of stage hands hopped over to help the door man handle a gate crasher. They didn't touch him, but just lent a moral support.

"I'll be back," said the young man.

"This is the fifth time today we've thrown you out," the doorman said, "and the next time, we'll call a cop."

"Listen, mister," said the well-dressed young man, "I haven't missed a show here in two years. And I haven't paid to get in yet."

"Life," said the doorman, "would be very peaceful here if it weren't for gate crashers. And," he looked around to make sure Gautier wasn't standing by, "if it weren't for animal acts."

Strike Danger Of Shivers at Capitol Ended

Steamfitters Back on Job as Anti-Union Firm Drops Contract.

Assurance that the Nation's lawmakers won't have to return to frigid chambers and offices when the special session of Congress convenes November 15 was given yesterday with settlement of a vexatious building trades strike.

David Lynn, architect of the Capitol, announced that union steamfitters and allied craftsmen were back on the job yesterday morning as a result of withdrawal of M. H. Pagenhardt & Co. from its contract to install a new steam supply and condensate return piping between the Capitol power plant and the Government Printing Office.

Alleged refusal of the company to hire organized labor precipitated the shutdown of all air-conditioning and heating work on the Capitol, House and Senate office buildings more than two weeks ago.

Decision to end the walkout, which affected 422 steamfitters, electrical workers, sheet metal men, iron workers and bricklayers, was reached at a meeting of the Washington Building Trades Council, Lynn said.

Though it will be necessary to readvertise for bids on the relinquished contract, work on other phases of the huge rehabilitation project will be resumed at once.

"Installation of the new and larger steam mains will not be necessary until Congress makes available additional funds for the annex building to be constructed adjacent to the present building (G. P. O.)," Lynn said.

"It is understood that funds are available for this building, but not in sufficient amount. Of course, the building cannot be started until funds sufficient to complete it are available, and it is further understood that the procurement division of the Treasury Department contemplates asking for the additional appropriations at next regular session of Congress."

Virgin Mary Art Is Stolen at C. U.

Thieves broke into the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University early yesterday and stole a large picture of the Virgin Mary. Gerald O'Day, who reported the theft, said it "could not be bought." It was a gift to the Shrine.

Rail Official Accused Of Withholding Data

By the Associated Press.

Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, asserted yesterday that William Wyer, treasurer of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co., had failed to provide a Federal court with records which might have "hurt" Myer's former employer, the late O. P. Van Sweringen.

Acting chairman of the Senate Railway Finance Committee, Truman based his assertion on evidence that a footnote to a letter signed by Wyer was not presented to the court or to a bankruptcy trustee of the road.

Wyer was granted permission by the committee to reply to Truman's statement in detail today.

Beekeepers of U.S. Propose Drive to Regain Business

Determined to put the bee industry back where it was before the days of refined sugars, more than 700 beekeepers yesterday concluded their three-day International Beekeepers' Conference at the Washington Hotel.

Reminded by speakers yesterday that the per capita consumption of honey has dropped to a little more than 1 pound a year, whereas sugar consumption has jumped to something like 96 pounds per year per person, beekeepers vowed to make America bee conscience.

"A concentrated publicity drive is something the industry is sadly in need of," said Annette Snapper, director of consumer relations for the Premier Pabst Co., of Milwaukee, Wis.

Other speakers included Harold J. Clay, marketing specialist with the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Department of Agriculture; W. E. Briathwaite, National Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce; R. E. Lothrop, Department of Agriculture, and W. S. Frisbie, chairman of the food standards committee, Food and Drug Administration.

U.S. Civil Service Schedules Tests For Its Workers

The Civil Service Commission is preparing to hold competitive promotion examinations among its own force in line with its belief "that the first step toward a career service in the Government lies in developing a competitive promotion system within the service so that employes qualified for promotion may not be overlooked when vacancies in higher positions occur."

Two grades are concerned in the plan, CAF-1 and CAF-2. Competing employes will be rated on written tests and on their efficiency ratings. The examinations will be voluntary, but those who don't compete and pass will not be considered for promotion unless the competitive promotion registers are not appropriate to the position to be filled or are exhausted.

Many employes of the commission have indicated they will compete.

Police Executives Guests of F. B. I.

Officials representing such famous police organizations as Scotland Yard, the French Surete and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police yesterday were guests of J. Edgar Hoover in a tour of Federal Bureau of Investigation headquarters.

Delegates were welcomed at a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel by Hoover and left last night for New York, where they will inspect the police system there.

Lymph System Found Barrier Against Disease

Discovery Affects 2,000,000 Lives a Year in Operations.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—A new cause of infection, discovered in a little-known "wonderland" of the human body, the network of fine, hollow threads known as the lymphatic system, which is a bulwark against external disease attack, was reported to the American College of Surgeons today.

A straw-colored fluid, lymph, flows in the threads. When the flow is blocked, it was shown by Cecil K. Drinker, M. D., of Harvard School of Public Health, streptococci enter the body en masse. Streptococci cause blood poisoning and other diseases.

The discovery, he said, caused "astonishment." Dogs usually immune to streptococci had a dozen successive streptococci infections after lymph interference. The discovery is important to American surgeons who perform 2,000,000 operations annually, because their knives may interfere with the lymph system.

After such interference, Dr. Drinker said, rigid care must be taken not to permit even the slightest scratch of the skin where the lymph is affected.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 27 (AP).—A new method of saving lives on the operating table by tickling the brain with weak electricity was suggested today at closing session of the National Academy of Science's fall meeting.

Dr. W. K. Smith, of the University of Rochester, told academy members he had found in experiments with monkeys, cats and dogs very definite areas in the cerebral cortex, or covering of the brain, which stimulated and retarded breathing but did not stop it.

Slight manipulation of the areas in the cortex produced either a quickening or a slowing of breathing, according to which one was touched.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

It Is Considerate Spoofing the New Deal Is Given In the Latest Satire by Messrs. Kaufman and Hart

'I'd Rather Be Right' Leaves an Impression of Abundant Good Nature and No Malice in Kidding Administration; Alex Yokel's New Play; Football Night at Capitol; 'The Awful Truth' Is After Record; Noteworthy Week in Offing; Notes of Theater.

"I'D RATHER Be Right," the lively musical satire on the New Deal, which has occasioned so many forebodings as to its propriety, is one of the most amiable and inoffensive travesties aimed at the national political scene this column ever has come upon in the theater.

BELL.

George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, in fashioning their pointed, but painless, raillery, have striven for amusement rather than abuse. They have contrived a pat and pungent commentary upon current political problems that is merry without being malicious and too true to be wholly trivial.

When this department witnessed the proceedings from a perch in the fifth row on the aisle in Ford's Theater, Baltimore, he was flanked on the left by Gov. Nice of Maryland, Republican, in a box, and, on the right, by Mayor Jackson, of Baltimore, Democrat, directly across the aisle. They enjoyed the two acts with apparently equal relish. Pinned down to his personal reactions to the piece by a friend, Mayor Jackson was heard to reply something to the effect that "even if it weren't all so good-natured, there is still nothing we could do about it because you can find practically the whole thing in the Congressional Record."

It is in this aspect of their friendly fooling that the Messrs. Kaufman and Hart have been especially shrewd. They have selected as topics of their taunting, those subjects which strike closest to the interst of Mr. John Q. Public, the "man in the street"—taxation, the PWA, the defunc NRA, the Federal Theater Project, the Wagner act, the Presidential broadcasts and other matters universally in the public ken. To be sure, they also have leveled their wit at the Cabinet and the Supreme Court, but here, again, I think they have displayed extraordinary judgment and acumen.

Instead of masking their characters in a thin veil of transparent anonymity, they have come gaily into the open with the real names of the present dignitaries of the incumbent Administration, from President Franklin D. Roosevelt down, and thus, at the outset, have scotched the suspicion that they have such bitter things to say that they must seek a partial concealment in the saying of them. A purely personal impression was that "I'd Rather Be Right" is basically a kindly play, even if a brilliantly satirical one. This evidently is the intent of those primarily concerned in its production and enactment.

In a brief backstage visit between the acts, Producer Sam H. Harris, Coauthor Moss Hart, Star George M. Cohan and Taylor Holmes, who impersonates Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, were of the united view that they had done nothing more audacious than make a "Gridiron show" available to the general public, instead of merely to a distinguished invitation list. Sam Harris' immediate preoccupation was attempting to explain why he hadn't opened his show in Washington rather than Boston; George Cohan's why he had waited this long to revive the peculiarly individualistic style of dancing that we used to watch with such unmitigated wonder out in the Chicago Opera House, which, as he remarked, "goes back a few years, kid." Mr. Hart only smiled complacently and with no evident betrayal of any consciousness of guilt for having assisted Mr. Kaufman in fabricating an "outrage." It was Mr. Holmes who confided that when he first read the script of "I'd Rather Be Right," while still touring in "Tobacco Road," the first thing that struck him was that the authors had made their figure of President Roosevelt an "unmistakably sweet character."

That is wholly true The entire motivation of the satire's thread of narrative is one of kindly helpfulness on the part of the President toward a couple of undersalaried youngsters who cannot be married until he has balanced the budget and they can get a raise. That is not a very tremendous "plot," but it suffices nicely to thread together the major difficulties that have harassed the Government these past few years and all the fun the authors and the cast have with them.

George M. Cohan, of course, was the ideal selection for the role of President Roosevelt. He plays it deftly, humorously and—by omitting all suggestion of caricature or "imitation"—in abundant good taste. He fully merits the ovations capacity audiences accord him at every performance.

An eleventh-hour bulletin from the Rialto Theater is to the effect that owing to activities of Washington's Town Hall, the projected opening of the film, "Damaged Lives," announced for Saturday morning, has been deferred. Damaged Lives," according to present plans, will initiate its local engagement on Thursday, November 4, at the Rialto.

Speaking of out-of-town openings, as we were back at the beginning of the line of march, Alex Yokel, chiefly celebrated in the theater as the man who perceived the hilarious possibilities inherent in the script of "Three Men on a Horse," and cashed in a fortune on his perspicacity, will offer the American premier of his latest production, "Young Mr. Disraeli," in the Maryland Theater, Baltimore, next Monday night.

"Young Mr. Disraeli," the most important and most spectacular play Mr. Yokel ever has undertaken, was written by Elswyth Thane and already has scored a success in London. The piece will feature two new players in the persons of Derrick de Marney and Sophie Stewart and, needless to say, deals with the colorful early youth of Benjamin Disraeli, who later became premier of Great Britain and made Victoria the Empress of India. Rather than being a drama of heavy historical significance, "Young Mr. Disreali" is described as "a bright piece of stagecraft, dealing with the romances and private affairs of Disraeli at an age when he was more interested in making love than in making history."

Charles Kranz, formerly Washington Branch Film Exchange manager for United Artists and more recently an independent motion picture distributor, has opened a New York office in addition to his local exchange and henceforth will divide his time between the two cities. Since more of his week will be spent in New York than in th Capital, Charlie has transferred his permanent residence to the metropolis. He and his ebullient wife, Agnes, will be missed from Film Row and the Variety Club, where both have been active in all of filmdom's worthiest enterprises.

Football night, a weekly feature inaugurated with the opening of the gridiron season, will be observed tonight at Loew's Capitol Theater, when the varsity squads and coaching staffs of George Washington and Tulsa universities will assemble as guests of honor of the management.

The two teams clash in Griffith Stadium tomorrow night in their annual pigskin scrimmage and will be "tuned up" at the Capitol. So will Phil Lampkin's orchestra, which plans appropriate musical contributions to the evening's entertainment.

Irene Dunne and Cary Grant in "The Awful Truth," plus a stage show of unusual worth, opened the current week at the Earle Theater by smashing a few week-end attendance records and has kept steadily at it ever since. It is anticipated that close of business tonight, when the engagement ends, will hang up new figures for future bills to shoot at. Anyone perceiving this enormous popularity prior to the picture's opening would find this an exceedingly elegant time to say, "I told you so"—if anyone did.

• • • •

The week of November 4 has a red ring around it on the calendar at Loew's Palace Theater. That week will mark the nineteenth anniversary of the opening of the house as one of the then new three important additions to Washington's growing list of motion picture theaters of the first rank. The Metropolitan and Rialto were the other two. It also will signalize a step nearer the quarter-century mark of continuous service with the Loew organization in the Capital of Manager Orangelo Ratto, who, after all these years, has become "Angie" to a majority of his patrons.

On the Palace screen that week will be "Ali Baba Goes to Town," Eddie Cantor's twenty-fifth anniversary film—twenty-fifth anniversary in show business, that is, not in the cinema.

Something ought to come out of all this.

Have Fun "Balancing the Budget"

Reading in the usual direction, Taylor Holmes and George M. Cohan, cast, respectively, as Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and President Franklin D. Roosevelt, in "I'd Rather Be Right," enjoy a brisk joust with the fiscal problems of the National Administration. Two more competent comedians could not have been chosen for the good-natured castigation of the New Deal.

Grid Star Rooney Trains at Night

Makes Portrait Of Singing Star

A portrait in music of Lily Pons, world famous soprano now starring in "Hitting a New High," is being composed by V. James Crisafulli, distinguished composer, and will be presented as a highlight of one of the Hollywood Bowl concerts next summer.

Crisafulli established his reputation at the Opera Comique in Paris, where his operetta, "La Dame Blanche," is now in its third year. He is making the Pons musical portrait under a commission from the Hollywood Bowl Association.

Lupe Hits Car To Avoid Puppy

To avoid running over a puppy, Lupe Velez crashed her studio bicycle into a parked automobile recently, and suffered severe cuts and bruises about both legs.

Lupe, en route to the set of "High Flyers," had the puppy, an English bulldog she had just purchased in a wire basket fastened to her handlebars. Suddenly, the pup jumped out of the basket in the path of the bicycle—and the Mexican film star promptly swerved the bike head-on into a nearby car.

Tailor in Kentucky Wants Star Guide

Louise Henry, working in "There Goes the Groom," starring Burgess Meredith and Ann Sothern, has received a letter from a tailor in Horse Cave, Ky., reading in part:

"If you will show me around the studio when I visit Hollywood this winter, and will send me a large autographed art photo of yourself, I will hang same in my window, located in the heart of our business district. Horse Cave is a very movie conscious community."

Stage Feature For Next Week Is 'Tovarich'

Comedy Hit at National Will Vie With Films and Vaudeville.

Gilbert Miller's production of Jacques Deval's comedy of "Tovarich," adapted to the English-speaking stage by Robert E. Sherwood, will be the attraction at the National Theater for the week beginning next Monday night. Mr. Miller is sending the original New York cast to Washington, headed by Marta Abba, in the role she created for the 11 months' run of the play on Broadway, and Rudolph Forster, distinguished Viennese actor, who supplants John Halliday in the principal male role. The support will include Cecil Humphreys, Jay Fassett, Margaret Dale, Ernest Lawford, James Truex, son of the illustrious Ernest; Amanda Duff, Leni Stengel, Barbara Gott, Aristides de Leon, Adora Andrews, Bram Nossen, Polly de Loos and Oscar Stirling. The story concerns exiled Russian nobility "in service." There will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Shirley Temple, supported by Jean Hersholt, Arthur Treacher, Sidney Blackmer, Helen Westley, Mary Nash and Mady Christians, among numerous others, will be the pictured star of the bill at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "Heidi," a film version of the classic juvenile fiction of the same name. The story is one of appeal to all ages and has been mounted with impressive beauty by Twentieth Century-Fox. On the stage, the vaudeville portion of the entertainment will be headlined by the Salici Puppets, one of the most unusual marionette shows extant. Others on the stage bill will include Harry Rose, the "Broadway Jester;" Jane Pickens, one of the singing Pickens Sisters and the Alexander and Santos Revue.

In "The Perfect Specimen," coming to the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, Errol Flynn and Joan Blondell will be pictured in the co-stellar roles. The supporting cast is led by Allen Jenkins, May Robson, Hugh Herbert, Edward Everett Horton, Dennis Moore, Dick Foran and Hugh O'Connell. The story is that of a rich young man who cultivates physical perfection only—until a beautiful young woman attempts to "make a man of him." The results are surprising. Block and Sully, celebrated comics of stage, screen and radio, will headline the vaudeville bill, which also will include Marjorie Gainsworth, soprano, in a quick return engagement; Harris, Claire and Shannon and the Four Ortons.

RKO-Keith's Theater announces Joe E. Brown in "Fit for a King" as chief film feature of the bill beginning tomorrow. The star is cast as a newspaper man who isn't quite as great as he thinks he is, but still is pretty good. The leading feminine role is played by Helen Mack. The companion feature of the bill will be a new issue of the "March of Time," dealing, as usual, with topics of timely concern. An added attraction will be the latest of the Walt Disney Mickey Mouse cartoon comedies, "The Clock Cleaners." This three-play program will be agumented by a new issue of the Pathe News.

Loew's Palace Theater announces that David O. Selznick's picturization of Anthony Hope's "The Prisoner of Zenda," with Ronald Colman and Madeline Carroll in the pivotal roles, will be continued for a second week, beginning today. Douglas Fairbanks, jr., C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey and Mary Astor lead the supporting cast. The supplementary attractions also will be held over.

"The Life of Emile Zola," starring Paul Muni, with a sterling cast in support, continues the attraction at the Metropolitan Theater at least throughout the remainder of the current week. If not held over for a second week of its repeat engagement, beginning tomorrow, it will be succeeded by another feature film to be announced later.

"The Bride Wore Red," starring Joan Crawford, with Franchot Tone and Robert Young, will be presented for a repeat F street engagement as chief feature of the photoplay bill opening tomorrow at Loew's Columbia Theater. The story is a camera adaptation of Ferenc Molnar's play of "The Girl From Trieste" and also presents Billie Burke, Reginald Owen and Lynn Carver in important roles.

That eminent young blockhead, Charlie McCarthy, Edgar Bergen's wise-cracking dummy, will occupy a place of importance on the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "Double Talk," a short-reel feature. "Crossing the Sahara," a travelogue in color, also will be on the new bill. Complete world newsreel coverage and added "shorts" will augment the program.

At the Little Theater next week, beginning Sunday, the major screen offering will be the Warner Brothers' picturization of Rafael Sabatini's adventurous story of "Captain Blood." Errol Flyn appears in the title role, with Olivia de Havilland in the principal feminine part. Short-reel subjects and news events will complete the program.

Under the sponsorship of the citizens Emergency committee for the feeding of undernourished school children, a gala magic show will be presented at the Belasco Theater beginning next Monday. Participating in this display of the black arts and prestidigitation will be Theo. T. Golden, president of the National Council of American Magicians; Harry Baker, Charles W. Townsley and Carl Mainfort, who will demonstrate the illusory prowess of the world's greatest masters of hocus-pocus. The box-office sale of seats opens today.

A new burlesque production will be presented at the Gayety Theater for the week beginning with the customary Sunday matinee. The chief comic will be Manny King, a local favorite. The feminine contingent will be headed by Charmaine, described as one of the most beautiful women on the burlesque stage.

Famous Visitor.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 27.—Settin' Around (Warner Brothers): By special dispensation of the powers-that-be, I spent an hour today in the Warner Brothers carpenter shops, watching the construction of miniature sets for "Robin Hood"—battlemented castles, 3 feet high, as complete in detail as though built to full scale, a live oak forest with a trickle of water coursing through it which will look like a great river when seen on the screen. No other studio has ever equaled the artistry of Warner Brothers' miniature sets.

KAY FRANCIS.

By the use of miniatures and process photography, the Warners are slicing their production costs in half. "Captain Blood," a sea "super," was filmed entirely on the studio lot. Most of the spectacular shots in "Submarine D-1" were done in miniatures. The great forest fire sequence in one of George Brent's recent thrillers actually consumed a forest not more than ten feet square. For "Hollywood Hotel," they are filming scenes of a miniature city street, with miniature street cars and automobiles.

By some obscure process of reasoning, every producer is convinced that audiences will turn thumbs down on his pictures if they know that miniature sets and camera trickery have been used. It is usually impossible to gain admittance to the carpenter shops or the process stages of a studio. Personally, I think that the producers, as usual, underestimate the intelligence of the public. If the picture looks real, I believe the average fan would be all the more interested to know how such amazing effects are achieved.

The Mauch kids, co-starring in "Penrod and His Twin Brother," are up to their old tricks. Today, on the set, I watched one of the boys, playing the hero's role, work through an entire sequence. "Nice work, Billy," enthused the director when the last scene had been shot. "Tell Bobby to be on hand tomorrow morning at 9." The Mauch laughed triumphantly. "I'm Bobby," he proclaimed, turning to his mother for confirmation. "Billy was sick this morning, so I offered to play his part and I bet him an ice cream cone that you'd never know the difference. You didn't—and I win!" Bobby, by rights, plays the mischievous brother. It is one of the few cases on record where the hero and the villain are played by the same actor. As a matter of fact, the director never knows which one of the Mauch boys is in front of the cameras.

Since Kay Francis filed suit against Warner Brothers, charging violation of contract, she has been on the rampage. Visitors are barred from the set where she is making "This Woman Is Dangerous," and Kay stages a tantrum if a publicity man so much as suggests an interview. Today, just as I passed the stage where she is working, out sailed the girl correspondent for a "down South" daily, obviously in a rage. And at her heels, trying to soothe her ire, tagged one of the studio's publicity scribes. "What's up?" I demanded, and was informed that Kay had sent the girl a curt message to leave the set. "What did you do?" I asked, and the little Southerner's eyes flashed. "I sent back a message," she said. "Ah told heh she is gettin' entahly too big for heh britches!"

On the "Too Much of Everything" set watched Bonita Granville and a little colored girl named Arabella working in a birthday scene. The table at which they sat groaned under the weight of a huge sugar-frosted cake. "Arabella," instructed Arthur Lubin, the director, "when the cameras start turning I want you to pitch into that cake. Eat fast—and make it look like you are really enjoying it." The cameras whirred—and Arabella delivered. "Cut!" cried Lubin, but Arabella, frosting to her eyes, kept right on eating. "Cut!" shouted the director again—and Arabella took another slice of cake. "That's enough, Arabella!" Lubin roared. Arabella rolled her eyes. "Land sake," said she, "Ah sure nevah heard you say 'Cut.'"

H. H. Shelton Funeral Rites Set for Today

Services for Attorney Will Be Held at Bristol, Tenn.

Funeral services for Henry H. Shelton, Washington attorney, who died Monday night of a heart attack in his apartment in the Shoreham Hotel, will be held at 3 p. m. today at the home of Mrs. Shelton's mother, Mrs. C. L. Sevier, in Bristol, Tenn. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemtery in that city.

Shelton, a native of Floyd County, Va., was a graduate of Hampden Sydney College and studied law at the University of Virginia. He began the pratcice of law in Bristol, Tenn., and was at one time president of the Tennessee Bar Association.

Moving to Winston-Salem, N. C., Mr. Shelton became general counsel for the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. He came to Washington 18 years ago and represented various tobacco interests here. He has been in ill health for the past year.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Eloise Sevier; a daughter, Mrs. Paul Weston, New York City; two brothers, P. H. Shelton, Jarretsville, Md.; P. M. Shelton, Roanoke, Va.; two sisters, Mrs. Lucy Shelton Lawrence and Mrs. Howard Cannaday, both of Roanoke, survive.

Bates Nominated To Unitarian Post

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 27.—Nomination of Sanford Bates, former director of the Bureau of Prisons, United States Department of Justice, as moderator of the American Unitarian Association was announced here today in a business session of the association's general conference.

Bates, who is executive director of the Boys Clubs of America in New York City, will come up for election during anniversary week meetings to be held in Boston next May.

Under a recent reorganization of the association, the office of moderator replaces the former position of president of the general conference. It is the highest lay position in the Unitarian denomination.

Politics Denied By U. S. in Air Crash Inquiry

Officials Admit Chief Investigator Lacks Knowledge of Aviation.

By the United Press.

Commerce Department officials admitted last night in answer to newspaper charges that the chairman of the special board investigating the recent fatal airline crash in Utah has no aviation experience but defended his appointment on the ground that he is versed in legal procedure.

Simultaneously, Col. J. Monroe Johnson, assistant secretary of commerce in charge of transportation, denied that any "political consideration" were involved in the appointment of his aide, former Judge Miller C. Foster, of South Carolina, to the investigation body.

Charges that politics dictated Foster's appointment were made recently by a New York newspaper. The publication stressed that Foster not only had no technical knowledge of aviation but that he had little flying experience as a passenger. It called attention to Foster's choice of railroads over airlines to travel to the scene of the Utah accident.

"It's true," Johnson said, "that Foster has no technical understanding of aviation, but he is well versed in procedure. His legal knowledge is essential to the board because its evidence must be gathered and testimony taken in an orderly manner."

Johnson pointed out that Foster had two able technical assistants in the other members of the board, Bryan M. Jacobs, chief of the Air Commerce Bureau's certificate and inspection division, and E. L. Yuravich, chief of foreign airline inspection.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 27 (AP).—Witnesses described today how the United Airlines Mainliner battled a sudden mountain storm, as it flew westward a week ago Sunday night, and crashed into Utah's chalk peak, killing its 19 occupants.

Members of the first searching party to reach the plane told Federal investigators they found no evidence that ice had formed on wings.

Previously C. W. Larson, of the Bureau of Air Commerce, said a radio beam to guide aircraft over the western mountains was placed on a new frequency two days before the crash and was functioning perfectly the night of the tragedy.

Funeral Saturday For 'Finney' Kelly

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday at an undertaking establishment, 522 Eighth street southeast, for Charles Kelly, retired policeman, who was killed Tuesday in an automobile crash on the Good Hope road in which two other persons were injured.

Mr. Kelley was known in baseball circles as "Finney." He was organizer of the Washington Police Baseball Club, and for many years its pitcher. He was 42. His home was at 435 Fifteenth street southeast.

He leaves a wife, the former Miss Margaret Boteler, and one son, Charles Louis Kelly; two brothers, John L. and Joseph G. Kelly, and two sisters, Mrs. Ruth Rook and Mrs. Mary Lynn. He will be buried in Cedar Hill Cemtery.

Funeral Set Tomorrow For Mrs. Mary Duval

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Morsell Duvall, 87, who died yesterday at her home, 2237 Q street northwest, will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. in the Metropolitan Church. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

A lifelong resident of this city, Mrs. Duvall was the widow of the late Andrew Brown Duvall, former corporation counsel here. A member of the Metropolitan Church for a number of years, Mrs. Duvall was president of the ladies association of the church and was active in the affairs of the Methodist Home for the Aged.

She is survived by two sons, Andrew B. Duvall, lawyer, and Walker M. Duvall, both of this city; three daughters, Mrs. H. T. A. Lemon and Miss Mary Duvall, both of this city; Mrs. Walter G. Pfiel, of Passaic, N. J., and seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Duelist Who Killed Nazi Scribe Is Suicide

Berlin, Oct. 27 (AP).—The death of Horst Krutschinna, who killed Roland Strunk, reporter on Chancellor Hitler's newspaper, in an affair of honor, was disclosed today. Party informants said Krutschinna committed suicide, rather than face trial before the honor court of the Black-Shirted Nazi Guard in which Strunk was a leader. Krutschinna was a subleader of the Hitler youth movement.

Comdr. Dombrowski Rites Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for Lieut. Comdr. Boleslaw L. Dombrowski, who died Tuesday in New York City, will be held at 11:30 a. m. today in Arlington Cemetery. The honorary pallbearers will be Commander M. Y. Cohen, Commander J. M. Creighton, Commander G. W. Dugger, Commandeer L. J. Wiltsie, Commander A. P. H. Tawresey and Commander W. J. Larson.

Beware Kidney Germs if Tired, Nervous, Aching

Are you Run Down, Nervous, suffer Aching or Swollen Joints? Do you Get Up Nights, or suffer from Burning Passages, Frequent Headaches, Leg Pains, Backache, Dizziness, Puffy Eyelids, Loss of Appetite and Energy? If so, the true cause often may be germs developed in the body during colds, or by bad teeth or tonsils that need removing. These germs may attack the delicate tissues of your Kidneys or Bladder and often cause much trouble. Ordinary medicines can't help much because they don't fight the germs. The doctor's formula Cystex, now stocked by all druggists, starts fighting Kidney germs in 3 hours and must prove entirely satisfactory in 1 week and be exactly the medicine you need or money back is guaranteed. Telephone your druggist for Cystex (Siss-tex) today. The guarantee protects you. Copr. 1937 The Knox Co. Adv.

Mrs. McCabe, Lawyer's Wife, Expires at 57

Chevy Chase Woman Was Prominent in Church and Club Circles.

Word reached Washington yesterday of the death of Mrs. Eleanor E. McCabe, of Chevy Chase, Md., at the Mayo Clinic after a long illness. Her husband, George P. McCabe, Washington attorney, and her family were with her when the end came. Mrs. McCabe was 57 years old.

Mrs. McCabe was prominent in church and club circles in Chevy Chase, and was active in the Chevy Chase (Md.) Garden Club. As a gardener, her peonies won the acclaim of experts. She was active also in women's organizations of the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament, and a member of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. McCabe is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Anthony J. Byrne, Mrs. Leo A. Walshe and Miss Margaret McCabe; a sister, Miss Katherine M. Fitzgerald, of San Francisco, and two grandchildren, Dorothy Lee Walshe and Margaret Walshe.

Funeral services will be conducted by Father Thomas G. Smyth at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament, Chevy Chase, on Friday morning, October 29, at 10 o'clock. Interment will be at Ogden, Utah, where both Mr. and Mrs. McCabe were born and spent the early years of their lives. The pallbearers will be P. D. Cronin, Andrew Griesbauer, Paul V. Heiss, Dr. V. J. Dorset, Harry J. Kane and Bart J. Walshe.

2d Girl Identifies Suspect in Attack

A 17-year-old youth held by police as a suspect in a criminal assault Monday night on Nancy Lee Summers, 18-year-old business college student, was identified last night as the man who sought to molest a second girl two weeks ago.

Betty Holmes, 20, told police the youth had approached her on October 11 near her home at 411 Franklin street northeast.

Detective Sergt. George Thornton, who arrested the youth, sought last night to have him viewed by Miss Summers, and also by Ruth McMillan, 19, George Washington University student, who was attacked two weeks ago in Rock Creek Park.

Expert Claims Poison Found in Blonde's Bag

Cincinnati, Oct. 27 (AP).—Testimony that the lining of a white knit purse carried by Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn at the time of her arrest, contained a deadly metallic poison, was offered at the woman's trial on a murder charge today in the death of Jacob Wagner, 78.

Dr. Willard Machlee, assistant director of the Kettering Laboratory at the University of Cincinnati, said that both lint and lining of the purse contained the poison.

Fat Girl Laughs and Grows Slim

Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat (fat) is a little gland. Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat. Adv.

Toscanini Rants, Casts Baton Aside Over Poor Music

London, Oct. 27 (AP).—Arturo Toscanini, world-famous orchestra conductor, threw down his baton and angrily walked out on a rehearsal of a British broadcasting company orchestra tonight.

The Italian maestro, declaring he would not go through with a concert scheduled for next week, exploded when he could not obtain desired execution of a passage in the third movement of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Among witnesses of the display of Toscanini's temperament were the Austrian Minister, Baron George Franckenstein, former Queen Victoria Eugenie, of Spain, and prominent British musicians and composers.

F. C. C. Weighs Disbarment of Two Lawyers

Segal, Smith Case Closed With Debate on Their Good Faith.

The cases of Paul M. Segal and George S. Smith, radio attorneys charged with setting up dummy corporations for the purpose of misleading the Federal Communications Commission, rested with six commissioners last night.

Final arguments by special F. C. C. Counsel Paul Kaufman and defense attorneys were concluded at 10:51 p. m. in the hearing room where disbarment proceedings against the two lawyers have been in progress for the past ten days.

Kaufman concluded the hearing with a short rebuttal of the arguments of his opponents that "there was never any intention on the part of the respondents, Segal and Smith, to mislead the F. C. C.," and that the alleged dummy corporations in evidence were not formed with the intention of interfering with other applicants.

Segal, widely known for his practice before the commisison, spoke in his own behalf.

He denied that any corporation which might have been formed through him or his associate, Smith, was intended in any way to interfere with other applications.

Lawrence Koenigsberger, who spoke first for Segal and Smith, said that the facts in evidence were generally concurred in by both sides, but there was nothing to indicate any attempt on the part of his clients to mislead or deceive the commission.

"Before the commission there is an awful responsibility," stated Koenigsberger, "a matter of life and death.

"This is a proceeding to deprive means of livelihood and besmirch reputations. It is similar to a death sentence if these men are disbarred."

Gifts to Chest Increase, First Reports Show

Many Large Contributors Boost Subscriptions Up to 100%.

Holding its first report meeting at the Willard Hotel yesterday, the special assignment unit, of which Richard W. Hynson is chairman and Frederick M. Bradley is vice chairman, began operations in the tenth anniversary campaign of the Community Chest. Chairman Hynson pointed out that increases noted in subscriptions yesterday show that the larger givers in Washington are not only working for the complete success of the campaign, but are generously supporting it.

Among the gifts made public was that of Melvin Behrends, $600, on increase of 20 per cent over last year; Edgar Berliner, $500, a new gift; Morris Cafritz, $5,000, an increase of 100 per cent; Dr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Christie, $500, an increase of 66 per cent; Mr. and Mrs. Wilson M. Compton, $500, an increase of 25 per cent; Mr. and Mrs. Dwight W. Davis, $2,500, an increase of 14 per cent; Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew, $10,000, an increase of 25 per cent.

The largest gift of the day was that of the Evening Star Newspaper Co., $40,000.

Other gifts were Mrs. Annie C. Glover, $1,500; Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Huidekoper, $625, an increase of 12 per cent; Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., $6,000, an increase of 11 per cent; Victor Kauffman, $4,000, an increase of 14 per cent; Mrs. Frederic A. Keeps, $6,000; Alexander C. Kirk, $500, a new gift; Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Noyes, $2,500; R. Ross Perry, jr., $500; Dr. William C. Rives, $8,000; Mrs. B. Francis Saul, $575; John Saul, $600, an increase of 33 per cent; Miss Belle Sherwin, $1,500, an increase of 25 per cent.

Mrs. Poffenbarger, 75, W. Va. Historian, Dies

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Livia Nye Simpson Poffenbarger, 75, who for more than a half century devoted her efforts to trying to prove the Battle of Point Pleasant was the first engagement of the Revolution, died today.

Wife of Former Judge George H. Poffenbarger, of the State Supreme Court, Mrs. Poffenbarger was largely responsible for the founding of Tu-Endie-Wie Park at Point Pleasant.

Roosevelt Community Big Applers to Compete

Heads of the Roosevelt Community Center have decided to conduct a "Big Apple" contest, which to all appearances will likewise be an endurance contest.

The contest will be staged as a feature of the center's regular Thursday evening social dances, an announcement said yesterday. It added:

For the first ten minutes the music will be of moderate tempo. But for the last ten minutes the orchestra is going to step it up as much as it can, and it's everyone (big apple) for himself."

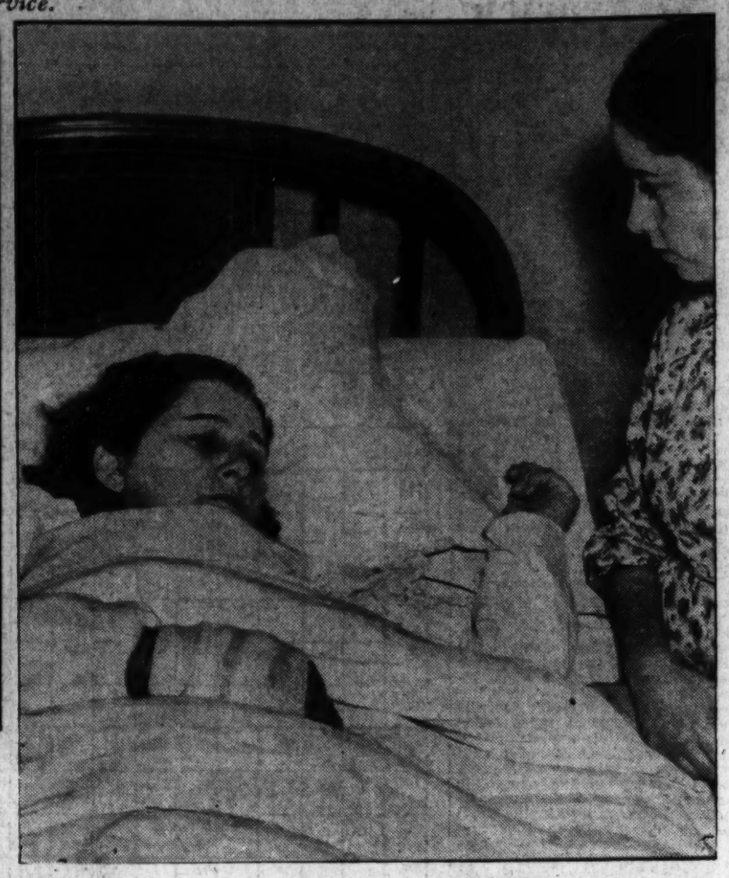
Maimed Accident Victims Tell Tragic Story of Drivers' Toll

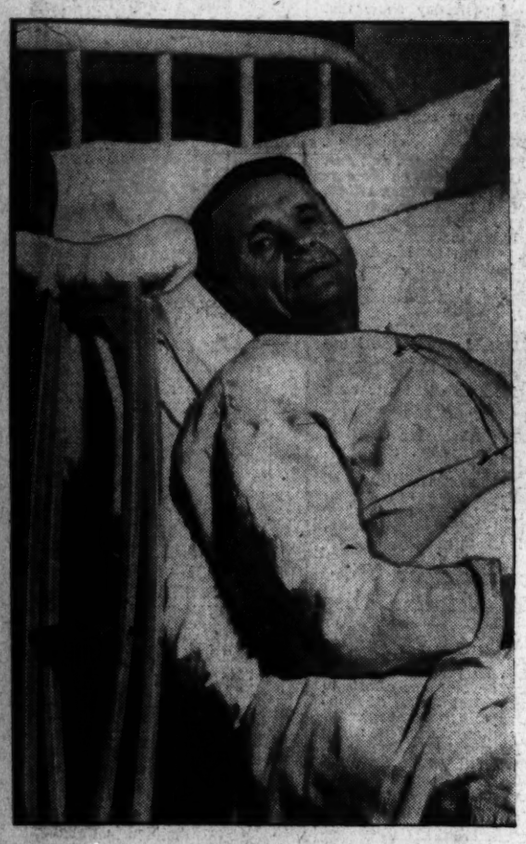
The Post is the only daily morning paper in W ashington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

1. A TRUCK STOPPED suddenly on the Baltimore pike and a car in which this expectant mother was riding crashed into its rear end. She was hurled against the front seat with such force that her unborn baby was killed. She is Mrs. Margaret Doyle, of Laurel. She probably will remain in Sibley Hospital many weeks while . . .

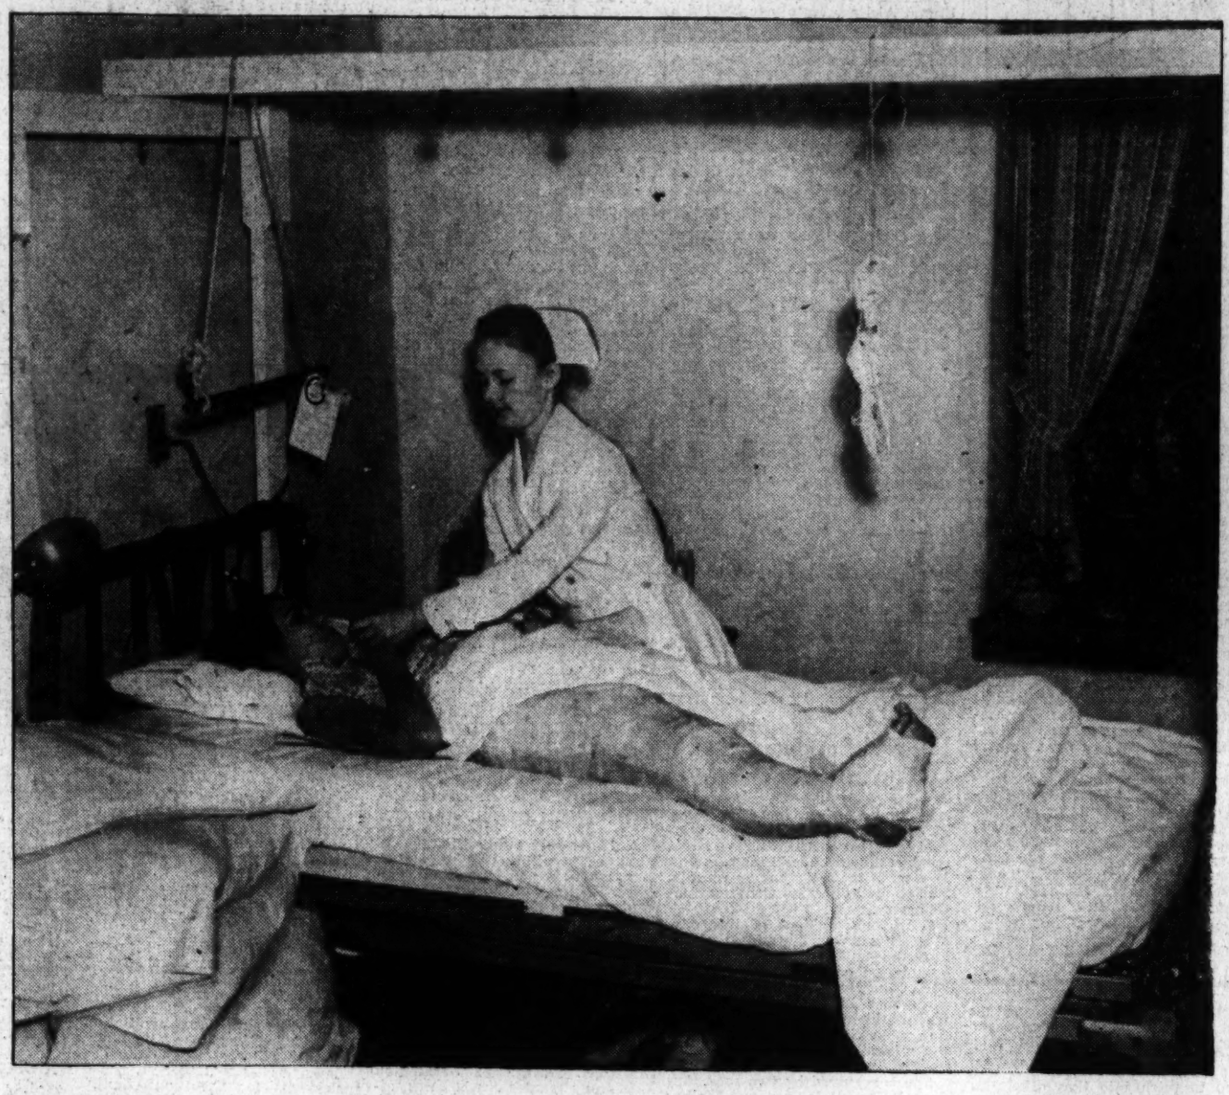
2. A FRIEND OF the family, Harry Shipp, also of Laurel, lies in Casualty Hospital with a crushed and mangled hip. He also was riding in the rear seat when the light sedan hurtled into the stalled truck. Nurse Bonnie May Keyes tries to ease his pain, but he may never walk again. He is barely able to ask about the condition of . . .



3. A THIRD VICTIM of the crash, Mrs. Florence Golden, mother of Mrs. Doyle, who occupies an adjacent room. It was her first accident. She was riding in the front seat with her husband and daughter. Her husband also is in Sibley Hospital. A careless driver was responsible for this family tragedy.



4. A HIT-AND-RUN driver sent Paul Mworski, an unemployed farmer, to Garfield Hospital with crushed ribs and splintered bones in his leg. He was searching for work, crossed the busy Baltimore pike to interview a prospective employer and was hurled into the air by a car which failed to stop. Crippled for life, his plight is similar to that of . . .

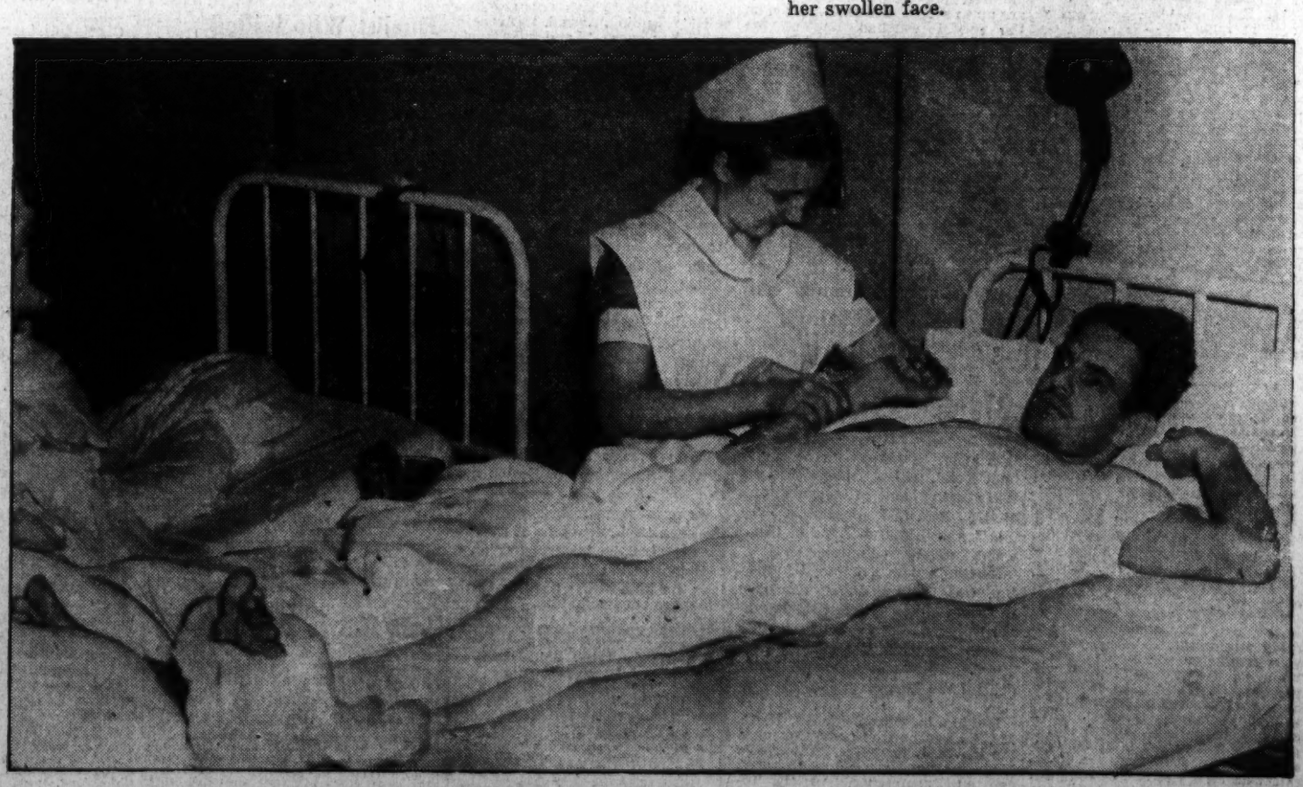


Post Staff Photos.

5. ANOTHER INNOCENT PEDESTRIAN, Miss Margaret Finisacy, of Arlington, who was struck October 4 and now lies in Emergency Hospital, her leg, thigh and hip encased in a plaster cast. She, too, faces the future as a cripple, just a number in the District mounting accident toll. While in a bed across the room lies . . .

6. A YOUNG GIRL with a fractured jaw. Miss Gertrude Dubb, 3425 Garrison street northwest, another innocent victim of highway recklessness. Disfigured and suffering such pain, she couldn't explain how the crash occurred. She remains helpless while Nurse Nellie Boone administers a soothing ice bag to her swollen face.

7. HIS CRUSHED LEG held together by steel rivets and plaster cast, Paul B. Falconer, 1715 Eighteenth street northwest, is just able to sit up and examine the work of physicians who sought to save his limb by modern medical methods. Falconer is 21. Three months ago he was attempting to cross the street at Fifteenth and I streets northwest when he was struck down by a careening auto. He faces several more weeks in a hospital bed before he can even attempt to use his injured leg.



8. ANOTHER CARELESS DRIVER sent Benjamin Royce, of Arlington, to Emergency Hospital with the left side of his body mangled, torn and broken. From ankle to chest he is covered by a plaster cast which holds his broken leg, hip, pelvis and ribs in place. On August 13, Royce was injured in an accident on Military road not far from the Washington Airport. He was taken unconscious to the hospital, rushed into the operating room and then awakened to many painful weeks flat on his back. Nurse Marion Hodge is taking his temperature while he contemplates his future as a sacrifice to modern high-speed motoring.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Lonely, Widowed, Reciprocally in Love With Married Man, Is Woman of 50 Justified in 'Affair.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a woman 50 years of age, although my friends tell me I do not appear to be over 45. Here is my problem. Just two years ago I met and became friendly with a married man a few years my senior. I have learned to love him and I feel my love is reciprocated. He is kindly, trustworthy and a highly respected and successful business man living in a village of 5,000 inhabitants about 100 miles from the city where I reside.

* * * *

At the time I met this man I was overwhelmed with loneliness and sorrow. I had recently lost my husband, a loving and affectionate companion, after 26 years of happy married life. Our only child had married a few months before her father's death, moving with her husband to a city over 300 miles away.

* * * *

The man's wife, as I happen to know, is cold and indifferent and entirely disinterested in his welfare. When I have said anything about giving him up he has told me (and I have every reason to believe him) that without me, life for him would not be worth living. I feel that way about him, too, for when I have thought about giving him up, such a wave of loneliness sweeps over me that I feel unspeakably desolate.

My relatives are hundreds of miles away, and if I were to give him up, my life would be just a repetition of the unbearable time I went through before I met him. In the last six months there has been some talk of his settling a small amount in my name, in case of his death. I am giving him my companionship without thought of anyone else. To be perfectly frank with you, I have not accepted expensive gifts and only this past year have I accepted any financial assistance—a very small amount each month to pay for my tiny apartment.

* * * *

I have eased my conscience in the matter by saying I would never separate him from his wife, even though they are married in name only. She has said she will never give him a divorce. Please help me to see the situation as a normal person should, as I want to do the right thing but feel that I am entitled to some comfort and pleasure and I do not expect or ask marriage. His wife wants position. I feel that she is the one who is sinning more than she is sinned against. What do you advise?

WIDOW.

A Colossal Mistake.

DEAR WIDOW: If you are perfectly satisfied with the arrangement as it stands and have managed to stifle the pangs of your conscience, I am at a loss to know why you invite my disapproval of it. For surely you don't expect me to approve; to second your parasitical, whining, self-pitying theory that you are "entitled to some comfort and pleasure," obtained "the easiest way," by flaunting the laws of God and man and embarking on a furtive way of life that dishonors not only yourself but the names of your late husband and your child alike, if the truth should come to light.

* * * *

One can make some excuse for lawless adventurin, on the part of impetuous, undisciplined youth caught in the toils of an overwhelming biological urge that sometimes overthrows unseasoned reasoning. One can sometimes excuse such frantic grasping after crumbs and straws of happiness on the part of middle-aged persons who have starved their whole lives long for married love and companionship which has consistently been denied them.

* * * *

But, for my part, I see no justification whatever for a woman of your age, with your background of experience, making such a colossal and damning—and cheap— mistake. In my opinion, the sourest note in the whole cacophony is your letting the man pay your rent and your willingness to accept a "small" cash settlement against the possibility of his death. Is your allegiance for sale? Are you such a poor creature, so bereft of pride, self-respect, independence and resourcefulness of character, that you do not hold whatever of companionship, devotion and friendship you have to give above cash price?

* * * *

Are you so dishonest, essentially, that you—who have been a wife—can meet another woman's husband half way, or more than half way, in an illicit love relationship and still claim you are the person more sinned against than sinning? Don't you know that that exculpating whine: "The man's wife is cold and indifferent and entirely disinterested in his welfare" is as old as the hills, as old as original sin itself, and as devoid of significance as abracadabra? That it's the empty self-excuse advanced by every philanderer whoever went sortieing through the back alleys of life? That it's never believed by any "other woman" except that "other woman" whose selfish purpose it suits to believe it. So long as a man is one woman's husband, and content or forced to remain her husband, no other woman has any remote justification for trying to ease herself into a position in his life where she is receiving a wife's emoluments. All she can be—all she should hope to be—is a friend. The relationship should be held proudly aloof from material and selfish considerations.

Your whole trouble is that you currently lack—and are too lazy to develop—that spiritual, intellectual and social resourcefulness which should be the indestructible wealth of 50 years of a woman's life courageously and unselfishly and intelligently lived. All your life you have been leaning heavily—and flimply—on some man. With your husband's passing, you reached out and grabbed the next prop you could lay hands on, and have since been busy rationalizing your right to the possession and utilization thereof.

* * * *

My advice to you is to translate your frustrated yearnings and emotions, your idle energies, into impersonal social service and active business or professional endeavor of a kind that will bring you in a self-sustaining income. Instead of hiding away in the shadows of a "tiny apartment," awaiting the coming of this man to whom you "give companionship without thought of anyone else," get out and join groups of women of your own age, who are busy improving their minds and bodies and working for a general improvement of society as a whole. Instead of letting him pay your rent and settle a "small amount" on you for life, earn your own living. In doing so, you may come across some man who is free to marry. There is nothing but loneliness and increasing isolation, and possibly shame and a second heart-break, ahead on the path you are currently pursuing.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 27.

THE WINDSOR situation continues to be hot up here, this being the point of entry as well as the den of America's largest herd of lion-hunters. A dubious Balkan baron can send Park avenue into a nice case of the fantods—you can imagine how steamy it is now over the approach of a real royal duke and spouse!

ALICE HUGHES

And so another bulletin today may amuse you faintly.

Socially, while Gotham's hostesses jump up and down and send to the bank for their gold dinner-services (in hope, if not actually faith, of pushing the brocoli toward Their Highnesses) it is reliably reported here that the fine old society of Baltimore refuses to perspire over the possibility of a visit from Their Royal Nibs. The rockbound tories of the Free State, who knew Winning Wally when, prefer not even to discuss the approach of the Hanoverian and his bride. Oddly enough, the equally conservative Boston is in a bit of a high state because Mr. and Mrs. Windsor are said to have accepted an invite from the Bayard Tuckermans. Boston's meat, Baltimore's poison, New York's seidlitz powders!

Sartorially. It is certain that we here shall get the first vulgar stare at Wally's fall wardrobe from Paris, and it was not to be finished until her return from Germany. All local fashion sharks admit that her wedding rig-out started the mad vogue for off-the-face hats and corselet dresses, and are agog to see what she has on her back now. And front, too!

Incidentally, her evening dresses are said to be very high-necked, the reason being that she suffers from over-prominent collar bones and thus prefers high-necked dresses at all times. There's one style she won't set among the local belles possessed of lovely necks and shoulders! They'll show em, Wally or no Wally, you may be sure! And why not, pray, and indeed?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—One of the famed Fifth avenue stores boasts to me that every President's wife since Lincoln has bought her inaugural gown there. The salesgirl who has waited on Mrs. Roosevelt ever since F. D. R. was first elected New York's Governor is named Lucille Mahoney, who is quite proud and happy about it, and is a devoted admirer of Madame Eleanor . . .

With ventriloquists now entirely off relief again thanks to the rebirth of public interest in their odd art by way of Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, a local shop is selling dummies at a modest price, complete with wardrobe and instructions. All right, girls—learn to throw your voices all over the place and drive papa crazy.

August Heckscher, 89-year-old philanthropist, and Fannie Hurst, novelist, have gone into an Alphonse and Gaston act. Last summer I told you about the birthday party she gave for him at Billy the Oysterman's. Now he has retaliated by tossing her a birthday party at the same home of gorgeous grub! Practically the same cast partook. I note in an inconspicuous spot on the guest list the name of Mr. Jacques Danielson. Ho hum, just Mr. Fannie Hurst . . .

If you noted the lovely girl on the cover of Scribner's Magazine for November, she's Olivia Thompson, top millinery girl at one of the Avenue's most famous stores. Not a professional model at all, but an all-wool executive. She wears the Agnes Breton with the red jersey drapery . . .

Heels That Sparkle.

Twinkling heels may soon be a reality instead of just a figure of speech, according to rumors from abroad. A glass heel containing an electric light bulb which can be switched on and off while dancing is said to be one of the most successful evening-w.a. novelties designed in recent years.

Savage to Sophisticate; Hat-Bag Theme

Beekeepers Meeting Reveals Ways to Cook With Honey

Calcium, Iron, Phosphorous and Vitamins Give Natural Sweet Many Advantages From Health Viewpoint; Recipes Given.

By Jean Green.

IF YOU are one of those persons who think that honey is just honey, pay a visit to the exhibit of the International Beekeepers' conference being held this week at the Hotel Washington.

To a honey connoisseur, coriander honey from the U. S. S. R. is something quite different from the eucalyptus honey from the Union of South Africa. The true honey expert will also know the American brands. There is fireweed honey from the northern timber States, orange honey from California, sage honey from the West, palmetto honey from the South and sweet clover honey from the Midwest.

JEAN GREEN.

As to which honey is best, that is largely a matter of taste and geography, according to Mr. H. J. Clay, associate marketing specialist of the Department of Agriculture. "Sime people," said Mr. Clay, "like the buckwheat honey, which has a husky taste and dark color, while others prefer the more delicate clover honey. The nutritional value of each is the same. So it doesn't matter which type you eat so long as you include some of it in your dietary."

Contains Vitamins.

Some of the health points are that it is a natural sweet, has a high levulose content, contains calcium, phosphorus, and iron, and vitamins A and B prime.

While honey has long been used in cakes and candies, its use is spreading to other food articles, Mr. Clay pointed out. 'Commercial firms are sponsoring a honey bread and honey is now being used in curing hams," he said.

Some of the interesting ways honey is being used were illustrated in the exhibit at the convention. These were food samples made with honey recipes entered in the national honey contest conducted by Miss Malitta Jensen, director of consumer education, for the Honey Institute. First prizes were awarded in cake, candy and cooky divisions.

The first prize for honey pound cake was sent in by Mrs. Irene W. Doux, Chicago, Ill. Sweet clover honey was used.

HONEY POUND CAKE.

1 4-5 cups of cake flour
1 teaspoon of baking powder
1 cup of butter
½ cup of honey
½ cup of sugar
Yolks of six eggs
Whites of four eggs

Sift the flour, measure and sift three times. With half cup of flour, sift the baking powder. Cream the butter one minute. Add honey and mix three minutes. Add sugar and mix two minutes. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored, then add to the above and mix three minutes. Beat the egg whites until thick and lemon colored, then add to the above and mix three minutes. Beat the whites until stiff, but not dry. Add alternately with flour leaving ½ cup of flour to add with the baking powder. This last will not get as much beating with the electric beater and the cake is not apt to have holes in it. Bake 30 minutes at 325 degrees then turn down to 315 degrees for 30 more minutes.

Honey Fudge.

4 ounces of honey
8 ounces of powdered sugar
¼ cup of milk
3 tablespoons of butter
Pinch of salt
¼ cup of chopped walnuts

Put honey, sugar, milk and salt in a saucepan. Boil slowly to about 230 degrees. Add butter and boil to 242 degrees. Pour on buttered slab or platter, add nuts, when party cooled beat until nearly cool and pour into buttered pan. When cold, cut and wrap.

The first prize for cookies was won by Mrs. J. M. Eairley, 1225 Main street, Independence, Mo.

Cereal Cookies.

1 cup of honey
½ cup of butter
1 egg
½ cup of rolled oats
½ cup of grapenuts
1½ cups of flour
1 teaspoon of baking powder
½ teaspoon of soda
¼ teaspoon of salt
½ teaspoon of vanilla

Toast rolled oats in the oven. Put toasted oats and grapenuts through a grinder. Sift flour, measure, sift with baking powder, soda and salt. Beat eggs, add honey gradually. Add to the creamed butter. Add flour mixture. Add vanilla. Beat well. Add the oats and grapenuts. Chill overnight. Shape into balls the size of marbles, putting on a floured board. Roll between the palms of the hand. Place on cooky sheet, and flatten with a spoon. Bake at 375 degrees not quite ten minutes.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Child Diet Improved.

I am looking at the picture of a group of school children in London, taken in 1894, and for comparative purposes, at the picture of a group of children in the same school, in the same parish, within very recent years.

Seeing is believing, and a glance at such pictures is worth more than reams of statistics to prove that the nutrition of the race of today is vastly better than it was in the last generation. Some of the children in the picture taken in 1894 are squinting up their eyes as if the light hurt them; some have obvious signs of rickets, adenoids, bad teeth. Such things are not noticeable in the recent picture.

It is difficult to believe that this improvement happened by chance, and it is difficult to believe that the improvement was not largely due to a dissemination of scientific knowledge of nutrition.

The pictures to which I refer were taken in England, but the condition is true and obtains all over the globe.

We have been speaking this week of the vitamins and, of course, those peculiar substances which constitute such a small part of our dietary are probably more important for maintaining a high standard of nutrition than any other single element.

Is instinct alone sufficient to provide enough vitamins in our diet? Dr. Leslie J. Harris, in his recent book on the subject, says "No." Of course, it is perfectly true that instinct alone is not sufficient, but one wonders if habit is not sufficient. In other words, the habit of eating a varied diet with sufficient amounts of fresh food, vegetables, fruits, etc. I think this is true for most people on a comfortable economic level, especially in America.

For those who are less fortunate and are not on so high an economic level in England, they are being taught an ideal diet must (a) be varied, (b) contain a daily protein dish (e. g. meat, fish, eggs or cheese), (c) contain daily fresh fruit or salad (Vitamin C), (d) not be milk-sparing.

The common faults of the working class diet in England have been listed by authoritative officials as:

(1) Too little vegetables, fresh fruit, milk, butter and eggs are taken.

(2) Too much food is "tinned, preserved, refined, dried or compressed." More brown bread might be eaten instead of white.

(3) The specially pressing needs of the expectant and the nursing mother are not always sufficiently realized.

(4) Growing children are often given insufficient "body building" food—that is, lean meat, fish, milk, cheese and eggs.

New Scent Is Used With Black Garb

With black as the predominating color for daytime and evening this winter, Weil of Paris has concocted a new perfume called Noir, to use with black costumes only. It is a light Oriental scent, subtle and seductive. With none of the heady obviousness of deep black materials, Noir rather suggests the gentle black of pearls; the pampered black of orchids; the stirring black of jet. A fragrance, however, say the stylists, correct for the woman who starts the day in black woolen and ends the same day in sequin black. It is beautifully bottled in a simple black crystal flacon, boxed in a chest lined with "startle" blue.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

AT THIS season of the year there is an intense interest in corrective exercise for the after treatment of infantile paralysis. Children who were stricken in the recent epidemic are now beginning a program of rehabilitation. The remarkable recoveries effected in the past few years prove that even where the disease has been severe and the child has been left a cripple, his case is by no means hopeless. Many children whose limbs have wasted away during their illness are restored to normal acivity by a program of exercise prescribed by the physician.

Treatment of infantile paralysis is summarized in a pamphlet prepared for the poliomyelitis exhibit of the American Medical Association in Milwaukee, in 1936. One of the most encouraging statements made by the committee on infantile paralysis is to the effect that although the most rapid return of muscle power generally occurs during the first year following the disease, this gain may be extended indefinitely by continuing the muscle training.

Consult Physician.

It is extremely important that any exercises taken by the patient be approved by a physician, and that no exercise whatsoever be taken during the tender stage of the illness. After exercise is begun, the child should be examined frequently to determine the gain or loss in power of the various muscle groups, so that the program may be changed accordingly.

In brief here is what the committee has to say on muscle training: The majority of infantile paralysis patients retain the ability to perform certain movements correctly or with equal strength. For this reason, exercises which may be taken by the normal person are unsuited to the unequal muscles of the paralysis patient, and it is necessary to choose exercises especially for the weaker muscles. The committee advises following all cases carefully for years to prevent the imbalance of muscular power which produces deformity.

Paralleling interest in infantile paralysis is that in spastic paralysis, resulting from injury to the child at birth. Amazing success with these crippled children has been achieved by Dr. Earl R. Carlson, of the New York Neurological Institute. Mr. Carlson is himself an outstanding example of what can be done by the person crippled from birth. Up until the age of 18 he was unable to do the simplest things for himself. He overcame his handicaps, realized a brilliant medical career, and is repeating his own story through the successful treatment of his patients.

Co-operation Essential.

The interest of the child is a principal factor in the treatment of the spastic paralytic, who must have both physical and mental training. Dr. Carlson has found that once the child becomes interested in what he is trying to do, rather than in how to do it, he usually can do the thing correctly. Patients who are unable to feed themselves can sometimes play golf or the piano with more than average skill.

With either the infantile or the spastic paralysis patient it is important not to help the child too much. Dr. Carlson believes, and he should be thrown upon his own resources as much as possible.

Fireworks in Paris Inspire Decorations

Paris (U.P.).—Fireworks displays at the Paris Exposition with stars bursting in mid-air and comets shooting off the Eiffel Tower against a black night sky have inspired brilliant decorations on evening gowns for the winter season.

Mainbocher presents a black net gown of romantic silhouette with sequins in red, gold, green, blue and all of the fireworks colors spraying like fountains of color from the waistline to the hem.

Sequins feature prominently as trim in "fireworks" of gold, rose, blue and chartreuse decking the skirt of a black net gown.

Sprays of rhinestones form silver stars against backgrounds of velvet in several of the leading dressmaking houses, rhinestone flowers set close to the neckline, silk embroidery in gold and jewel tones and brocaded cloths of rare beauty all hint at the brilliance of the exposition

Envoy Gives Brilliant Fete For Dr. Koht

Four Cabinet Members and Supreme Court Justice Guests.

Norway's Foreign Minister Goes to Hyde Park Tomorrow.

A brilliant dinner for a distinguished visitor was the order of affairs at the Norwegian Legation last evening, when the Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne entertained in honor of Dr. Halvdan Koht, foreign minister of Norway, who arrived in the Capital yesterday.

Importance of the affair may be judged from the fact that the Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, who dines out infrequently, was there, with Mrs. Hull.

Strict Formality Characterizes Event

The event had all the formality of important diplomatic entertaining in the Capital. Every guest made a point of arriving at the right time, and formal evening dress for both men and women was the rule. The handsome legation, with its softly carpeted floors and long winding stairway, was softly lighted for the occasion and the long table in the dining room was decorated with roses and white chrysanthemums.

Guests were mostly important Government and diplomatic officials. The Supreme Court was represented by Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone and the Cabinet by the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper and the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, besides Mr. and Mrs. Hull.

Dinner One of Many Parties for Visitor

Others present at the dinner, which is one of many parties planned for Dr. Koht, were Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, a State in which there is a large Norwegian colony; the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom; Otto Wadsted, Minister of Denmark; the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Francis Sayre; James Clement Dunn, political advisor of the State Department, and Mrs. Dunn; George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol of the State Department; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr.; the Counselor of the Norwegian Legation and Mme. Galbe; the First Secretary and Mrs. Francis Irgens, and Mrs. Betsy Kjelsberg, a Norwegian living in Washington.

Today the Secretary of State, Mr. Hull, will entertain at a luncheon at the Carlton in honor of Dr. Koht. The latter will go to Hyde Park tomorrow to confer with President Roosevelt, returning to Washington Saturday for a reception the Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne will give in his honor that afternoon.

Her Engagement Announced

Bachrach.

MISS MARTHA DAVIDGE, whose betrothal to Mark Sullivan, jr., is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davidge. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss McGrath Becomes Bride

Wedding to G. K. Quigley Is Followed by Breakfast at Shoreham.

Miss Helena Ursula McGrath, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. McGrath, was married yesterday to George K. Quigley, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Quigley, in the home of her sisters, the Misses Catherine and Mary McGrath.

Miss Catherine McGrath acted as bridesmaid for her sister, and Laurence Duclos, of Linden, N. J., brother-in-law of the bride, acted as best man for Mr. Quigley.

The bride wore a gown of blue velvet and a hat made of the same material. Her flowers were a corsage of white orchids and lilies of the valley. Her bridesmaid wore a gown of Persian red velvet. A wedding breakfast in the Garbo Room of the Shoreham Hotel followed the ceremony.

Among others present were the bride's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Tansey, of Fall River, Mass., and Mrs. Laurence Duclos.

• • • •

Air Commodore T. E. B. Howe and Capt. and Mrs. A. L. P. Mark-Wardlaw will be guests of honor at a tea given Monday afternoon by Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, wife of the First Secretary of the Canadian Legation, in her residence on Garfield street.

Commodore Howe, who has been serving as air attache of the British Embassy, and Capt. Mark-Wardlaw, Assistant Naval Attache on the same staff, will leave soon for England.

• • • •

Mrs. Atherton Macondray has issued cards for a tea, to be given November 2 at her home in Alexandria, Va., honoring Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, president of the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington.

• • • •

During her stay in Washington, Mrs. Manor will be the guest of Mrs. John London and her daughter, Miss Inder London, in their apartment at the Brighton.

Mrs. Frank Letts Will Have Party For Visitor Today

Mrs. Frank Letts will entertain at a small cocktail party this afternoon in honor of Mrs. Victor Beaufort, of New York, who is visiting in the Capital until Monday.

Other parties which will be given for her during her stay include a luncheon tomorrow, at which Mrs. Mark Bristol will be hostess; a dinner on Friday evening to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey at their home on Massachusetts avenue, and a luncheon at which Mrs. James Clement Dunn will entertain on Saturday.

On Saturday Mrs. Beaufort will go to Warrenton to spend the day with Mr. and Mrs. George Sloane.

Miss Cavanagh Will Wed Nov. 6

Miss Adele Cavanagh, daughter of Mrs. Richard Bryan Cavanagh and the late Mr. Cavanagh, of New York and Washington, has selected November 6 as the date for her marriage to Dr. Einar Philip Flint, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar F. Flint, of Seattle, Wash.

As her maid of honor, Miss Cavanagh will have Miss Eleanor Saunders, of Lowell, Mass. Mrs. Howard Francis Morin, of Washington, will be her matron of honor, and Miss Katharine Byrne, of Long Beach, N. Y., and Miss Margaret Rover, cousin of the bride, will be bridesmaids.

Dr. William R. Johnston, of New York, will act as best man for Dr. Flint. Ushers will be Howard Francis Morin and Dr. Donald Hubbard, of this city, and Dr. W. Ward Pigman, of Virginia.

Miss Cavanagh received degrees from Trinity College and Smith College, and Dr. Flint is a graduate of the University of Washington, George Washington University and received his doctor's degree from the University of Maryland.

Peter J. Connolly Weds Miss Burke

Washington friends of Peter Joseph Connolly were interested to hear of his marriage last Saturday to Miss Catherine Marie Burke, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Burke, of Richmond Hill, N. Y. The couple will make their home at the Garden Towers Apartments here.

The wedding took place at the Church of the Holy Child Jesus in Richmond Hill, and was followed by a wedding breakfast for 45 guests at the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn. The Rev. John M. McGowan performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Wilbur J. Adams, wore a Colonial style gown of ivory satin with a tulle veil attached to a braided satin coronet. She carried a prayer book, from which fell a cluster of orchids.

Miss Ella McVeigh, of Mount Vernon, was maid of honor, and Joan Redmond, young niece of the bride, was flower girl. Francis J. Connollly was best man for his brother, and the ushers were George U. Gavagan, John Reisert and John McDonald Kane.

The bride is a graduate of St. Vincent's Academy, in Brooklyn, and Mr. Connolly attended Brooklyn Law School, where he was a member of the Phi Delta Phi fraternity.

Entertain for Couple.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Jackson and Mr. Jackson's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Hannah, entertained at a dinner in the Shoreham blue room last evening for their cousin, Miss Virgina Wingfield, and Malcolm S. Sharpe, who are to be married Saturday at the Presbyterian Church in Chevy Chase.

Announce Birth.

Mr. and Mrs. George Morris Fay announce the birth of a daughter on October 23 at Providence Hospital. Mrs. Fay is the former Miss Dorothy Margaret Donovan, daughter of Col. and Mrs. William Donovan.

Martha Davidge Is Betrothed

Will Become Bride of Mark Sullivan, Jr., of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davidge, of 2825 Rock Creek Drive, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Martha Davidge, to Mark Sullivan, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, of Washington. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Davidge attended the Masters School at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., and the Hacienda de Sol, a boarding school in Tucson, Ariz. Mr. Sullivan studied at Lawrenceville Academy and Princeton University. His father is the well-known political commentator and author of the book, "Our Times."

Miss Davidge, who is the granddaughter of the late Secretary of War, John W. Weeks, and Mrs. Weeks, made her debut in Washington two seasons ago.

Dignitaries to Lay Cathedral School's Foundation Nov. 4

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of the Washington Cathedral, and Canon Albert Hawley Lucas, headmaster of St. Alban's School for Boys, join with the chapter of the cathedral in issuing invitations for the laying of the foundation stone of the new activities building for the National Cathedral School for Boys at Mount St. Alban, on Thursday, November 4, at 5:30 o'clock.

The ceremony, which will take place within the cathedral grounds near the intersection of Garfield strett and Massachusetts avenue, will be followed by the annual faculty tea, when Canon and Mrs. Lucas will join with members of the faculty in receiving parents of the students, patrons of the school and other friends in the Lane-Johnston Building.

In New York.

Mr. Leonard Hsu, of the Chinese Embassy, is at the Ambassador Hotel in New York City for a few days.

4th Town Hall Season Opens November 14

Mrs. Roosevelt Again Will Head Sponsors; Rialto Theater to Be Scene.

Fast becoming a Washington institution, the Town Hall will open its fourth season on November 14 with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt again heading the list of sponsors. James G. McDonald, former chairman of the Foreign Policy Association, will be on the first of 20 programs and will speak on "The Present Crisis in Europe."

Since it first began in 1934, the Town Hall has proved so successful that it has outgrown its former meeting place at the Shoreham Hotel and this year will be at the Rialto Theater.

Important Event To Capital Society

As much of social event as an intellectual one, the Town Hall is attended each year by numerous members of Capital society. Diplomats, officials and residents go weekly to hear the stimulating discussions on questions of the moment.

Among the distinguished patrons in addition to Mrs Roosevelt are Mrs. Louis Brandeis and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wives of the Supreme Court justices; the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, the Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, Secretary and Mrs Henry A. Wallace and Secretary and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Senator and Mrs. Millard E. Tydings, Representative and Mrs. Robert L. Bacon, Gen. Pershing, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint, and Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union.

New Members on Sponsor List

New additions to the list for the coming season include such distinguished people as Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative and Mrs. James Wadsworth, Mrs. Anne Archbold, Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight W. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Finkenstaedt, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. M. Gray, Col. and Mrs. Sherman Miles and the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh.

Others of last year's sponsors who will serve again this season include Mrs. Truxton Beale, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford K. Berryman, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Oscar L. Chapman, Oscar T. Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Phelps Dodge, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Judge and Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Miss Belle Gurnee, Frederick C. Howe, Mrs. Frederic Keep, Mrs. Ellen LaMotte, Maj. and Mrs. Henry Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. G. Gould Lincoln, Mrs. William Beverly Mason, Lowell Mellett, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Eleanor Medill Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Miss Janet Richards, Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Scott, Mrs. Frank H. Simonds, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Thurston, Mrs. Harvey Wiley, Paul Wilstack, Mrs. Hamilton Wright, Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson and Dr. and Mrs. John W. Studebaker.

James B. Akers, Jr., And Bride on Tour

Now on a motor trip to the South, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Akers, jr., will reside at 6000 Thirteenth street upon their return. They were married on Tuesday at Metropolitan Memorial Church, and their wedding was followed by a reception at the Wardman Park.

Mrs. Akers is the former Miss Ethel Garnette Rice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hugh Rice, of Kilmarnock, Va. Mr. Akers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Akers, of 3415 Fulton street.

The bride wore a gown of white slipper satin cut on princess lines, with a long veil attached to a halo of white satin. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Elizabeth Rice served as her sister's only attendant. Mr. Akers was best man for his son and the ushers were William Barbee and Leon Rice, brother of the bride.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

AFTER COASTING ALONG in second for a few weeks, the Washington social season may be said now to be going into high. If you have not at least four dinners and half a dozen cocktail parties on your schedule for the next week or so you might almost be considered unpopular.

DUDLEY HARMON.

The Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich have something nice in store for those who like society mixed with the glamour of the theater. They will shortly issue invitations for a supper in honor of Maria Abba, star of the play "Tovarich," which is coming to Washington Monday. The party, to which all the cast will be invited, will be held after the opening performance and the Ambassador and Donna Matilde will have eight guests for dinner preceding the show.

Miss Abba is the Italian star who played the same role in the play when it ran in Paris before being snapped up by Gilbert Miller for New York. There it made a huge hit and ran all last winter. In case you've forgotten, the comedy deals hilariously with the adventures of an exiled Russian prince and princess who get jobs as butler and maid in the home of a nouveau riche couple.

Members of the staff of the Italian Embassy are expected to turn out en masse for the opening performance. The Marquis of Capomazza, secretary of the embassy, is doing his bit by giving a small dinner beforehand.

IT'S HARD TO BELIEVE that November is so close, yet the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler have invitations out for a dinner on the sixth of next month. An old Washington custom, this getting out invitations that far ahead. There are so many parties here (more than in other world capitals, any diplomat will tell you), that hostesses have to line up their guests pretty far in advance . . . Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover gave a dinner last evening and Col. and Mrs. Sherman Miles will entertain at a cocktail party Friday in honor of Capt. and Mrs. Robert Munroe. The Munroes recently arrived in Washington to live and before taking a house here stayed with the Commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. Pettingill.

• • • •

• • • •

WORKING GIRLS: Jane (Mrs. Robert) Joyce has taken a job with Mrs. Emmons Smith and Mrs. Newbold Noyes, who run an evening gown and negligee shop here . . . The Misses Marie and Cecilia vom Rath, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William vom Rath, of Glen Cove, Long Island, are actively interested in the United Hospital campaign now going on in New York. The twins spend two and a half hours three times a week in service at one of the wards. They were presented to society here two seasons ago by their grandmother, Mrs. Harry Black.

North Carolina Democratic Ball Here To Be Attended by Officials and Society

Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller, of the United States Board of Tax Appeals, the Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission and Mrs. R. McNinch, and Garland S. Ferguson, jr., Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and Mrs. Ferguson are among those who have accepted invitations to attend the harvest ball of the North Carolina Democratic Club.

Others expected to attend the ball, which will be held November 5 at the Hotel Raleigh, are the Assistant Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Turner Battle, Dr. R. D. W. Connor, archivist of the United States and the former Governor of North Carolina and Mrs. O. Max Gardner.

Arrangements for the dance are being made by Mr. Wesley E. McDonald, president of the club, and by a committee composed of Miss Marion C. Sedberry, Miss Mary C. Hoke, Miss Kathleen Arrowood and Miss Rena Pearl Hamilton.

Miss Carol Carpenter, Franklin Gates to Wed

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Carol Carpenter, of St. Louis, who attended the Madeira School here, to Franklin McKee Gates, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin H. Gates, of Montclair, N. J. Miss Carpenter is the daughter of Mrs. Kenneth Greeley Carpenter, of St. Louis.

Mr. Gates, who is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fredrick Taylor Gates, is a senior at Yale University School of Engineering.

Stanley F. Reed, Jr., Usher for Wedding Of Miss Mary Bird

Stanley F. Reed, jr., will be among the ushers for the wedding of Miss Mary Reynolds Bird, daughter of Mrs. Frances W. Bird, to Walter Massey Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Phillips, of Torresdale, Pa.

The ceremony will take place in Union Congregational Church, in East Walpole, Mass. Miss Anne C. Bird will be her sister's maid of honor. The bridegroom's father will be best man.

• • • •

Mrs. Isaac Mann and Mrs. Howard Meyers will be at home on Tuesdays in their apartment at 2126 Connecticut avenue. No cards are being issued.

Mrs. Mann recently returned to Washington after spending the summer at her home at Hyannis, on Cape Cod.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Residential

Representative and Mrs. Joseph E. Casey have taken an apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street and will be at home there after November 15. Before her marriage last summer, Mrs. Casey was Miss Constance Dudley.

• • • •

Princess Brinda, of Kapurthala, will sail from New York today on the Ile de France for London, where she spends much of her time. The Princess visited Washington earlier in the month.

• • • •

Miss Mary Louise Talbot, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Talbot, of Foxhall Village, will be one of the models in the benefit fashion show to take place Wednesday evening in the parish hall of St. Patrick's Church.

• • • •

Mrs. Walter Jennings, of Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., and her sister, Mrs. Eugene Lentilhon, of New York City and Paris, are passing several days at the Shoreham while in the Capital to see Mrs. Jennings' son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Ely, jr., who have the Dwight Davis house on Kalorama road. Mrs. Jennings and Mrs. Lentilhon will motor to Williamsburg, Va., today, returning to Washington for the week-end.

• • • •

Mrs. Harry Lee Berry has arrived in town from her home in Portland, Me., and has joined Mr. Berry at the Carlton Hotel for several days.

• • • •

Miss Reba Doughton, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, has arrived in Washington from her home in Parta, N. C., and is at the Wardman Park Hotel.

• • • •

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Keller, of Collinswood, N. J., and Mr. and Mrs. John E. Bacon, of Trenton, N. J., are at the Raleigh for for a few days.

• • • •

Mrs. William S. Campbell, who makes her home at the Wardman Park Hotel in the fall season, has returned and has reopened her apartment at the Wardman.

• • • •

Mrs. Craig Barrow has arrived in town from her home in Savannah, Ga., and while here for several days she is stopping at the Carlton Hotel.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shields, of New York City, have arrived at the Shoreham for a few days and will go from the Capital to Richmond to visit Mrs. Shields' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Larus, jr.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Morris, of this city and Chicago, are at the Wardman Park Hotel.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Stephanson, of Chicago, who are in Washington for a visit, are occupying a suite at the Carlton Hotel.

Mandates Group to Be Guests Here

Ben Grey Host to Flying Caravan' Before South American Trip.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Members of the "flying caravan" of the People's Mandate Committee, taking off Saturday for a good will trip to South America, will be guests of honor tomorrow afternoon at a reception from 5 to 7 in the Pan-American Room of the Mayflower Hotel. The affair is being given by Ben Grey, of New York City, a trustee of the National Home Library Association, and will be attended by members of official and diplomatic society, including many heads of missions of the South American countries which the delegation will visit.

Mrs. Burton W. Musser, of Salt Lake City, who heads the delegation, has arrived in Washington and is staying at the Hay-Adams House, where the Mandate Committee now maintains its headquarters. Mrs. Thomas Burke, of this city, is completing her preparations for the journey and others in the party will be Mrs. Enoch Wesley Frost, of Texarkana, Ark., and Mrs. Rebecca Hourwich Royher, of New York City.

One More Step Toward Peace

Mrs. Musser, who was the only woman member of the official delegation from this country to the Buenos Aires Peace Conference last winter, declared she was "not optimistic enough or conceited enough to believe our journey will accomplish great things. It will be but another step in the right direction, welding one more link in the chain of international friendship."

The Buenos Aires conference accomplished much more than she had believed possible, she said. She also stressed the value of the Peoples Mandate because of its having a definite objective in its peace work—the ratification of the Buenos Aires treaties.

"The world cannot change in a day or a year," she pointed out, "but each treaty signed and each peace parley held is an expression of the desire of the nations to find other ways than war by which to settle their disputes."

Mrs. Musser has demonstrated in her own city, the mutual helpfulness and good which can result from the contact of various nationalities with each other. She is a native of Switzerland and, although she was brought to America by her parents when but a small child, her background gives her an appreciation of the problems of adjustment faced by the citizen of another country who comes to ours. In Salt Lake City she has become known as a friend of people of all nations. One project she started was a class in handicraft in one of the settlement houses there, to encourage women in the foreign sections to make use of their talents to design articles suitable for commercial use. Mexicans, Italians, Scandinavians all came, and as its popularity grew, American women, too, joined the class to learn the arts brought over by some of the foreign-born. The women became friendly as they worked together and better understanding of each other brought about an exchange both of ideas and embroidery patterns.

"Tolerance and unselfishness begins at home," said Mrs. Musser, "and must be practiced among nations to insure peace."

Many Friends Send Good Wishes

When Mrs. Musser left for Washington on this trip, about 300 were at the train to bid her good-by, a large proportion of them her foreign-born friends. She speaks Spanish, French, German and Italian and reads Portuguese and the Scandinavian languages. Whenever officials of European countries visit Salt Lake City, they confer with her and are entertained at her home.

The contacts she made as a member of the delegation to Buenos Aires will be renewed when the "Flying Caravan" visits the capitals of the South American countries on this trip.

Mrs. Gaeta Wood Boyer, organization chairman of the mandate committee, who will precede the party by a week, making final preparations for their reception in the various cities, left on her air journey Monday.

Mrs. Swanson At Scribes' Tea

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy and an associate member of the Newspaper Women's Club, attended the tea given by the club yesterday afternoon at its headquarters in the Admiral for members, associate members and their friends. It was the club's first social activity of the season.

Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, the president, received the guests. Sophie Kepner, chairman of the house committee, was in charge of arrangements, assisted by Miss Katharine Brooks, vice president, and Mrs. J. Tighe Williams, second vice president. Miss Margaret Hart, former president and now acting chairman of entertainment, was at the punch bowl and Mrs. Alice Hutchins Drake presided at the tea table.

Other associate members of the club present yesterday were Mrs. Atherton Macondray, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Macondray; Mrs. Perry Heath and Mrs. Clarence Goodwin, who had just come from a day's work at the Red Cross.

Among the guests were Mrs. Finis J. Garrett, Mrs. Delos Blodgett and her daughter, Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. Ernest J. Van Fossan, Mrs. A. A. Dibble, Mrs. Dorothea Townsend, Mrs. Donald Pepper, Miss Helen McGerr and Miss Aurelle Burnside, both lawyers at the Department of Justice; Miss Patricia McGerr and Mrs. Monica Woodell.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

SOVIET RUSSIA is a long way to go to attend the theater, but Mrs. Edwin B. Parker and Miss Elsa Peterson, who have just returned from a summer abroad, went there for just that purpose. They spent ten days in Moscow the first of September to see the annual theater festival. The stage settings and ballets were the most beautiful they had ever seen anywhere, says Mrs. Parker, and the acting was superb, but the voices of singers in the opera were not to be compared with those in this country. Even the Russian critics called attention to the lack in that respect, which was the only flaw in the productions.

People from many parts of the world were at the festival and it was altogether an enjoyable experience for the Washington travelers. They also returned with reports of a comfortable stay so far as hotel accommodations were concerned.

They visited the Scandinavian countries and Germany as well as the Soviet Union and, from Moscow, went south through the Caucasus and the Crimea.

DESPITE the well-known friendliness of the Woman's National Democratic Club, there has been a chilly atmosphere about the clubhouse lately and it's nobody's fault but the furnaces. There are two, both of which were put in condition during the summer but were just too old and worn out to function properly when the first cold snap hit the Capital.

The problem was a serious one, but not serious enough to daunt the resourceful club members, including Mrs. John P. Grimsley, secretary in charge of the office. The fireplaces in the office, the drawing room and some of the bedrooms were put to use and electric heaters were brought in to supplement their warmth. Then a man interested in the welfare of the club heard of its plight and gave a check for $3,000 to provide two new furnaces.

Everything went well until the dinner a couple of weeks ago, when Ambassador Wang spoke. The "good angel" of the club was among the dinner guests, and, warmed by the heater and the crackling fire in the fireplace, complimented the members on their success in heating the rooms, adding that he was practically convinced the clubhouse didn't need new furnaces after all—but he didn't take back the $3,000 and the new heating plant will soon be installed in preparation for anything winter may choose to do in the way of zero weather.

The club's most important event this week will be the dinner tonight at which J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, will speak. Several members are entertaining parties of guests. Mr. and Mrs. James Craig Peacock will be hosts to a group of friends in honor of Col. and Mrs. Consuelo A. Seoane; Mrs. Edward A. Stewart will have as her guests Mrs. Herbert Dorsey, Mrs. H. E. C. Bryant, Mrs. Arthur Dean, Miss Pat Beyer and Miss Margaret Hardy, and another party will be entertained by Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price.

MISS ETHEL BAGLEY, president of the Business Women's Council, which meets every Tuesday night at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, has just announced to the members that their organization would celebrate its twentieth anniversary this year, when attention was called to the fact that Miss Bagley herself was celebrating a birthday this month. She was presented with a corsage of gardenias from the council and Dr. Albert J. McCartney lent a hand in putting the bouquet in an artistic spot on the brim of her black hat.

There was another surprise gift, too. Miss Florence Hendershott, who, with her mother, recently moved into their newly completed home at 232 Peabody street, was presented with a handsome floor lamp and other useful household articles.

Soroptimists Told D. C. Needs Housing

Everybody has a housing problem, whether he lives in one room or in a house he owns, Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, executive secretary of the Washington Housing Association told the Soroptimist Club at its luncheon yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

She discussed living conditions in Washington and showed photographs of housing in some sections of the city which revealed need of prompt measures for improvement.

Mrs. Sylvia Ziskind read "White Shadows," and Gwendolyn Taylor sang, accompanied by Mrs. Jewell Downs.

Among guests were Mrs. Burton Musser, of Salt Lake City, who heads the "flying caravan" of the People's Mandate Committee.

Scout Week Set At Little House

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, national president of the Girl Scouts, will open Girl Scout week at the national Girl Scout Little House, 1750 New York avenue, Saturday. Feature of the opening will be a display of arts and crafts work done in the day and permanent camps, under the Washington Girl Scout Council and from organizations which work under the Council of Social Agencies.

One week each year nearly 440,000 Girl Scouts in the United States meet together in special programs of seven service days to symbolize the aims and ideals of Girl Scouting. Monday symbolizes homemaking; Tuesday, handicraft; Wednesday, thrift; Thursday, hostess; Friday, citizen, and Saturday, health day.

Sunday the girls of each troop will attend church together in uniform. In this community there will be two special services, one at Washington Cathedral and the other at St. Aloysius Church, both at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Mrs. Brooke and Mrs. Louis Guerineau Myers, national vice president from New York, will attend, and ambassadors and ministers who represent countries which are members of the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts, have been invited.

Girl Scout Sunday falls on the birthday of Juliette Low, the founder, this year, the twenty-fifth anniversary of Girl Scouting.

Mrs. Myers, who is national chairman of the public relations division of the Girl Scouts as well as vice president, will be a guest of Mrs. Brooke during her stay in Washington.

U. S. Chiefs Of A.A.U.W. Meet Here

National Council Occupied With Many Subjects in Session.

The lounge of the American Association of University Women's Clubhouse, frequently given over to tea parties, took on the semblance of a schoolroom yesterday as Dean Margaret S. Morriss, of Pembroke, president of the A. A. U. W., and members of her national council opened their three-day business session. A "do not disturb" sign might well have been hung on the door, for the orders were "no interruptions."

A double row of tables, each with a pile of papers and folders full of reports, was arranged for council members. Unlike most groups whose officers gather here for national meetings, this has no social functions scheduled in connection with its business. From breakfast sessions of special committees before the morning assembly of the council at 9:30 until dinner in the evening, when members continue informally their discussion of problems of the association, scholarships, fellowships and budgets occupy their attention.

Few meetings in Washington bring together so distinguished a group of women in the field of education as this. In addition to Dean Morriss, Dr. Mary E. Woolley, chairman of the international relations committee; Dr. Katharine Gallagher, chairman of the committee on awards, and Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, of Barnard College, president of the International Federation of University Women's Associations, were present.

A picture of conditions among the university women of Europe was presented to the executive council by Dean Gildersleeve in her report of the international council meeting in Paris last summer, at which she presided and which was attended by Dr. Kathryn McHale, general director of the A. A. U. W. here as American representative.

Scandinavian women are so firmly established on the basis of equality with men that they decided they could not promote international fellowships offered women by the International Federation, according to Miss Gildersleeve, although they are active in the federation. Fellowship in the Scandinavian countries are open to both men and women, she said, and the women feared any award made on the basis of sex might result in their losing the unquestioned position of equality in educational opportunities which they now hold.

The women of Germany who formerly had a strong and active association, dissolved their organization two years ago and no German woman was present to join the discussions at the Paris council meeting, she said. The Italian association also has been dissolved in the last two years, but there is a movement to reorganize. Italian women may participate in the conference at Stockholm in 1939.

The Spanish association, which has no political affiliations, has not been dissolved, but temporarily suspended during the war period. A representative of the Spanish group attended the Paris meeting and expressed the hope that by the time of the Stockholm session her association might again be functioning and be represented.

The fellowship endowment committee was one of those which had a breakfast conference yesterday with Mrs. Ruth W. Tryon, its secretary, presiding in the absence of Mrs. F. G. Atkinson, of Minneapolis. One of the earlier holders of a fellowship granted by the association, Dean Margaret Justin of the Kansas State College is a member of the committee and was among those attending.

The council discussed the awarding of the international fellowships, one of which is supported by the A. A. U. W., although all are awarded through the international federation.

Speaker Stresses Women's Club Work

Miss Earlene White, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, discussed before the Zonta Club at its luncheon yesterday the program of her organization and stressed the influence of the business women's club in the small town. The meeting was held in the dining room of the Y. W. C. A.

Miss White mentioned the meeting of the Group Action Committee which she will attend in New York, November 10, with representatives of classified clubs and of professional women's organizations, conferring in an effort to correlate their goals and plan group action on problems of interest to the group.

Miss Anna Muddiman, vice president of the Zonta Club, presided at the luncheon in the absence of Miss Winifred Burwell, the president, who is away for a brief trip.

to testify when members of the crew are arraigned for a hearing here Tuesday morning.

The three men now homeward bound left the Algic at Santos a few days after the trouble at Monevideo. Although Capt. Gainard logged them as deserters, their shipmates concluded that they probably got drunk and missed the boat. Arrangements for their return on the West Selene were made by the American consulate at Santos.

Red Activities Discussed.

The remaining accused deserter is Joseph Hartley. He was hired at Jacksonville on the voyage south to take the place of Able Seaman John Burgess, who was murdered in a waterfront brawl. When the Algic stopped at Jacksonville on the way home, Hartley, described as a "ring leader," jumped ship.

The activities of Communists in America's merchant marine were discussed by C. H. C. Pearsall, of the Colombia Steamship Co., and president of the Propeller Club of the United States, at a banquet here tonight in the Emerson Hotel under the auspices of the Propeller Club of Baltimore.

Pearsall read from an editorial in the Daily Worker, organ of the Communist Party in this country, which criticized the American Merchant Marine Library Association. This association last year distributed 145,000 books and 150,000 magazines to American merchant ships. But the Daily Worker didn't like the books.

The editorial, as read by Pearsall, said in part:

"Our Young Communist League maritime branches want to put some decent literature into the hands of the seamen. Something that will have some meat in it—something that will be food for thought—books that can be talked over in the hours off watch in the fo'csle.

"There's no doubt about the fact that this pays big dividends. For instance, one Young Communist Leaguer, shipping out of New York, took $27 worth of literature on ship with him. Four months later he was back from Australia—back with all his books, four new Young Communist Leaguers, and three recruits into the Communist Party."

Pearsall also told of the dilemma facing young men who are graduated from nautical schools such as the New York State Merchant Marine Academy. These youths, although graduated with a rating of third mate or third engineer, are expected to start in lower grades until they have gained further sea experience.

"It has been necessary in most companies," Pearsall said, "that these young men become members of a union and it is my understanding that the unions have refused to accept these graduates and, in some instances, have threatened physical assault when they appeared for membership."

British Attache Will Be Host To Windsors in Capital Visit

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sims Are Arranging Suite at Wardman Park Hotel for Them; Invitations Issued for Dinner 3d Week in November.

and Mrs. Sims would be the logical host and hostess for the famous pair. In the first place, they have known the duke; for years, have visited him at Balmoral, have moved in the same set with him and the duchess on frequent trips abroad, and—I am told—saw the duke and duchess last summer in Europe.

Have Much in Common.

Added to that, Mrs. Sims and the duchess have much in common. Both are noted for their chic, both are witty and extremely popular in circles in which they move, and both are fond of entertaining small groups of intimate friends.

If the schedule does work out as planned and the duke and duchess are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sims, one of the most puzzling problems of all would be settled satisfactorily. The British Embassy would be relieved of whatever strain the duke's visit might precipitate; for, since Mr. Sims is on the Embassy staff, the latter would not be in the position of ignoring the duke and duchess. On the other hand, since Mr. Sims is an honorary attache—which means he draws no money from the British crown—he and his wife can entertain the visitors with, or without, any official connection. In other words, the situation would be handled as cleverly here as it was in Vienna, where the honorary attache of the British Embassy had the duke and duchess in tow during their entire visit.

While I'm on the subject of the Windsors—as who isn't these days—I might add that at a party the other day, I heard a member of the Diplomitic Corps express his views on the Windsors' prospective visit in no uncertain terms. As he sees it, the duke's dashing about from one country to another on a housing survey is merely the prologue of a campaign to regain, by popular demand, his power in Great Britain. "Clever scheme," was the way my acquaintance put it. "Bound to appeal to the masses." Then he went on to explain that if the so-called scheme works out and the duke is called back to England, the old order will change, yielding place to a modified Fascist regime.

"If you don't believe the duke and his American bride have started out to stage a comeback, you just watch 'em from now on," he said. While I do not agree with my garrulous informer, I could see some slight basis for his belief. As all the world knows, the Windsors have twice been guests of Charles Bedeaux at his castle in Hungary, and will make their American tour under his guidance. The diplomat added: "Mr. Bedeaux is strongly Fascist in his sympathies, whole heartedly convinced that current regimes in Germany and Italy have done wonders for the working man."

Ulterior Motive Doubted.

Whether he and the Windsors with a small coterie of friends have hatched up a program that will at once put the duke back in power and fascism to fore in Great Britain is something that sounds a bit too startling to swallow without careful consideration.

If I have my records straight, the duke was interested in improving living conditions of the laboring classes long before his romance ever hit the headlines. Chances are his current housing research stems from no ulterior motive, and that his forthcoming trip to America is merely what it seems to be on the surface—an effort to study a world-wide problem as a private citizen.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 27.—The Duke of Windsor declared today that he and his American-born wife would visit the United States without political designs.

He said they were only trying to aid in finding a solution to "some of the vital problems that beset the world today."

The Duke described himself as "a very happily married man" and announced he would sail with the Duchess November 6 on the liner Bremen to spend about five weeks in the United States.

In his first public speech since his abdication last December, the Duke said at a luncheon of the Anglo-American Press Association that "my wife and I neither are content nor willing to lead a purely inactive life of leisure."

Questions concerning his itinerary in the United States brought smiles and an assertion that "I don't know myself."

(Charles E. Bedaux, American engineer, who has charge of arrangements for the tour, sailed from Cherbourg with his wife. They will join the Windsors later in America.

(In London, newsreel organizations for the first time since the abdication showed features on the Duke and Duchess, one dealing with the former King's visit to Germany. Newsreel editors said they were planning to use complete pictures of the Windsors' reception in America.)

trol over operating utilities. The word "manipulation" was used in power commission circles explaining the action, and it was hinted the inquiry was expected by some to reveal a connection between recent transfers of securities and the stock market situation.

The commission sent out a questionnaire, returnable in seven days, requiring each utility to report in detail as to:

1. All securities in its assets and the exact physical location of each security since July 1.

2. Every sale, transfer, purchase, lease, loan, change of custodian or change of deposit of such securities since the same date.

3. "Every communication of any nature" from the controlling company or companies relative to sale, encumbrance or change of place of deposit of the securities.

4. Identity of the company or companies controlling the reporting company, and the means of control.

The Commission, on October 18, issued an order for all the utilities to retain in their own custody all stocks, bonds, or other securities among their assets and ordered an investigation into the extent to which such utilities have been directed by holding companies to transfer securities from their own custody.

The order followed receipt of word that some holding company or companies had ordered operating companies to send some of their securities to a New York depository "were they might be" hypothecated or otherwise put beyond the control of such utilities in such manner and to such extent as to affect the ability of the utilities to render adequate service and to impede or prevent proper examination by the commission of their accounts, books, records and properties."

Lorimer Leaves $250,000 Estate

leaped into the car and speeded off. The car was found about 3 miles from the scene of the slaying. Batten was arrested about an hour later at the home of his mother in Charlottesville, with whom he lives.

Wrist Severely Slashed.

His wrist was severely slashed and he was taken to the University of Virginia Hospital suffering from loss of blood.

It was here, according to authorities, that he admitted the killing to Deputy Sheriff Smith, son of Sheriff J. Mason Smith.

Later, at the jail, Batten told Sheriff Smith, according to the officer, the wrist was slashed in a fight with another man. Sheriff Smith said he named the man, but the officer deferred until tomorrow the alleged slasher's arrest.

Sheriff Smith said he was inclined to discount Batten's story of his wounding. He quoted Davis as calling the wound "phony."

Authorities tonight said they were looking for persons who, they understood, witnessed a quarrel between two men beside the widow's car. The murder scene is close to the road from Charlottesville to Washington, and authorities doubted the murder could have taken place on such a thoroughfare without being witnessed.

Body Lying on Roadside.

Police said the call to the scene of the murder came from an attendant at the filling station.

When police arrived the body of the woman was lying in the roadside. A raincoat sheltered her shattered head and face from the rain. The gun was found nearby. Its stock was broken as though it had been hurled to the ground by the slayer or torn in a desperate struggle, though the ground in the immediate vicinity of the car bore no evidence of a fight.

Only one shot had been fired.

This examination of the body at an undertaking establishment here disclosed, had torn into the woman's face slightly to the left of her mouth and had traveled upward, sheering off most of her head. It was evident the charge had been fired at close range.

Sheriff Smith was attempting tonight to get in touch with Mrs. Riley, the murdered woman's mother, who for the last three weeks has been visiting a son by a former marriage, Lester Morris, in the northern end of the county, leaving her daughter in charge of the household.

Roosevelt School Seeks Bust of T. R.

A plan to acquire the Frazier bust of Theodore Roosevelt for the Roosevelt High School was disclosed when the bronze was exhibited there yesterday. At present the school does not possess even a picture of its illustrious namesake.

But at a special assembly, marking the anniversary of the first President Roosevelt's birth, Miss May Paul Bradshaw, the principal, urged the students to take a good look at the bronze and added: "I hope some day we will own it." The bust later will be exhibited to the Parent-Teacher Association.

No public funds are available for the purchase of the bust, but it is hoped to arouse enough enthusiasm among students, faculty and parents to acquire it by private subscription. The bust, the work of the sculptor, James E. Frazer, belongs to the estate of a New Yorker. It is said to have been valued at more than $1,000. Benjamin Bell, proprietor of the Washington Art Galleries, however, has offered to present it for half the price which the estate asks. This, it is said, would require the school to raise about $150.

127 YEARS OF Character ..AND BOTTLED IN BOND

FOR more than a century and a quarter, Old Overholt has been famous as a quality whiskey, distinguished by a rich, robust taste as different as day and night.

And it's an economical whiskey, too, for you can use less of this Pennsylvania straight rye in a mixed drink without thinning its deliciously sturdy and mellow flavor.

Judges of truly fine whiskey are so partial to Old Overholt that today it leads any other American bottled in bond whiskey in popularity.

A Washington matron, trying to make conversation with Mayor LaGuardia's wife, without much success, was asking her a number of fairly fancy questions.

"Don't you think the parties at the Polish Legation are lovely?" she finally asked.

"I don't know," said Mrs. LaGuardia, being a little difficult, "I have never been at the Polish legation."

At this point Mayor LaGuardia took the cigar out of the corner of his mouth and intervened.

"Who do you think we are," he asked, "the socialite Sol Blooms?"

Next time the President celebrates another turning point in his career with a wobbly wisecrack I hope Mrs. Roosevelt tells him to be his stature. His charming weakness: Presidential puns and pranks.

Jimmy Roosevelt's metamorphosis into a colonel of marines was a Presidential pun . . . The apotheosis of Senator Black was a White House prank . . .

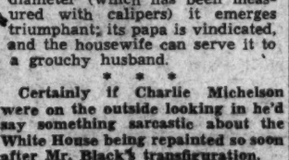
So was Jimmy's new role as Little White Father of the orphan Government agencies . . . Some of the Presidential puns and pranks are delicious . . . But much as we revere him, our laughter is somewhat forced.



"—Uncle Sam tests a pea"

Some Capital matrons are dreadfully nervous about taking their tots to the Zoo, because they occasionally see a mouse in the tiger cage and it scares 'em silly.

* * * *

Of Thee I Sing: Of Washington's peculiar use of the word "selective" to describe a snooty society personage who handles his invitations as if he were shifting gears into high.

Apparently "selective" is different from "exclusive" as used in the hinterland. . . . An "exclusive" gentle person can't see the hot-pollol for sour apples; a "selective" Washington keeps looking around out of the corner of one eye for a social prize.

* * * *

Next to the Supreme Court, the most enchanting spectacle I've seen in the Capital is the Food and Drug Administration testing a pea for tenderness, with a genuine Rube Goldberg apparatus.

They peel the pea, place half of it on a glass slide, pour 2 pounds of mercury through a series of glass tubes which squeeze down on it, while the pea's papa wrings his hands in anguish.

If the pressure squeezes the pea down to one-fourth of its original diameter (which has been measured with calipers) it emerges triumphant; its papa is vindicated, and the housewife can serve it to a grouchy husband.

Certainly if Charlie Michelson were on the outside looking in he'd say something sarcastic about the White House being repainted so soon after Mr. Black's transfiguration.

"—the mouse scares the matron"

As a yokel from the Western plains, I've discovered one good reason for Washington's rents: The houses are built substantially, with out false fronts, sturdily enough to withstand a bombardment.

This is one reason for the Capital's charm . . . There's a soothing sense of permanency about it, which can't be attained with thin boards and stucco; a high wind won't blow it over.

Outlanders are puzzled by the endless controversy in the Capital about Gov. Alex Shepherd . . . Was he a greedy politician, or a far-sighted esthete who made L'Enfant's dream of a gorgeous capital come true? Anyhow, re-building Washington fatigued him so that he went to Mexico to live.

No town like this was ever built without a little gravy . . . I am now fully aware of the identity of the statue of Mr. Shepherd at Fourteenth and E, and every time I pass I salute it with a wan smile.

Baltimore was agog yesterday with the rumor that President Roosevelt was coming down to see "I'd Rather Be Right" tomorrow . . . I think he can afford to wait till he can see it by television.

Hinterlander's observation: Nowhere else is it so completely forgotten that civil authority ranks above the military . . . In Washington anyone in a tailored uniform (even a second lieutenant) seems to outrank a mastermind.

Park Board May Wreck Historic Fort

Totten Site Considered for Site of New D. C. Reservoir.

Fortress Is Only One Completely Preserved From Civil War.

The fate of Washington's only completely preserved Civil War Fort may be decided today when the Park and Planning Commission considers the advisability of demolishing Fort Totten to make room for a new reservoir.

Situated near Soldiers Home on the highest point in the city east of Rock Creek, the fort has long been considered as a reservoir site.

Results of a thorough study of the proposal will be given to the commission today when John Nolen, jr., director of planning, renders his report.

Suggestions for redesigning Thomas, Scott and Dupont circles to relieve traffic congestion, will also be considered by the commission today when Capt H. C. Whitehurst, director of District Highways, submits his study of the circles.

Whitehurst will also submit plans for a bypass in Georgetown to relieve traffic conditions there during the morning and evening rush hours. It is believed his plan will call for either a high level on K street or use of the old C. & O. canal bed as a bypass.

The five year highway program proposed by Whitehurst will be discussed by the commission when Nolen reports on his study of the plan.

Another matter to be considered by the commission during its two-day monthly meeting, will be the request of Maryland officials that a joint meeting be held to discuss matters of interest to both the District and Maryland. Flood conditions in the vicinity of Peace Cross, near Bladensburg, is one of the problems Maryland officials claim should be tackled by both the District and Maryland.

With Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the commission, presiding, the body will take final action either today or tomorrow on the proposed zoning law. The law is to be introduced in the next session of Congress and will replace the present zoning law which was enacted in 1920.

Rabbi Rosenblum Scores Defeatism Among Young Jews

"The problem of prejudice against the Jew will not be solved by having the Jew disappear from the face of the earth," Rabbi William F. Rosenblum, of Temple Israel, in New York City, said last night in a meeting of Argo Lodge, B'nai B'rith, at the Jewish Community Center.

Rabbi Rosenblum centered his discussion on the question "Commit Suicide? What Good Will It Do!" and pointed out a growing attitude of defeatism on the part of the younger generation of Jewish people.

"The anti-Semite is willing to carry his prejudice against the Jew to extremes, flaunting every rule of justice and humanity. The defeatist Jew is ready to hide behind some other religious label or to drop any claim to that essential history which marks him as a Jew."

Rabbi Rosenblum's address was given as part of the lodge's annual past presidents' night celebration. Nineteen past presidents attended the meeting. Joseph A. Wilner, past grand president of District No. 5, B'nai B'rith, presented the lodge a menorah, a gift of Mrs. Amy Wolf. Mrs. Wolf's husband, the late Simon Wolf, was given the menorah by B'nai B'rith lodges in the District 31 years ago.

Lewises to Take Another Historic Alexandria Home

The Lewises are exchanging one historic Alexandria house for another historic Alexandria house.

They are leaving:

The William Brown house, erected in 1775 by Dr. William Brown, of the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, and for two years physician-general and director of hospitals of the Continental Army.

They are moving into:

The Fendall house at Washington and Oronoco streets, at various times the home of members of the Lee family. Built no one knows exactly when, in 1791 it was the home of Philip Richard Fendall, a distinguished attorney whose first wife was Elizabeth Steptoe Lee, a widow whose daughter married Gen. Henry (Light Horse Harry) Lee.

The U. S. Navy, garbed as villainous guerrilla battlers, was speedily vanquished by marines who landed at the Navy Yard yesterday as thousands watched the sham battle which climaxed a rainy but eventful Navy Day here.

Hazen Verifies Move to Unify D. C. Hospitals

A proposal to appoint a general superintendent of all District municipal hospitals gained impetus yesterday when it was reliably reported the Commissioners approved the plan.

Creation of the new office has been discussed by District heads for a year.

Speculation in the District Building as to a possible appointee centered about Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital. Another suggestion was that the post would be given to an outsider.

Reports that officials have been working on new plans for higher efficiency in municipal hospitals were confirmed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

"Under this new plan, a superintendent of all publicly owned hospitals in the city would have complete charge," Hazen asserted. "This would result in a much better system than we have at the present time."

Commissioner Hazen said the new post would pay $7,500 annually.

"The work of the new superintendent," Hazen said, "would be similar to that of Ray L. Huff, general superintendent of District penal institutions."

Huff heads all directors of the different jails and reformatories, with the job of co-ordinating work of various institutions, Hazen said.

The new superintendent would be in charge of the District Tuberculosis Sanitorium and Gallinger Hospital and would supervise charity cases in Casualty, Freedmen's and Emergency Hospitals.

Vacated buildings of the tuberculosis hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets probably will be renovated for use as a maternity branch of Gallinger Hospital, it was learned.

2 Colored Youths Rob D. C. Grocery

Two colored youths, armed with a revolver, held up Max White, 49, in his grocery store at 49 G street southwest, and escaped with $45 from the cash register and $4 from White's pocket last night. They escaped on foot, after locking their victim in a rear room.

Two boys who were passengers on his bus snatched his change carrier and escaped from the vehicle at Fourth and B streets southwest, Francis P. Murphy, driver, of 910 Seventh street southwest, told police.

Two colored robbers tried to enter the home of Lester E. Boykin, an official of the Department of Agriculture, who lives at 2825 Albemarle street northwest, while Boykin was away. His maid, Irene Barnes, screamed when one of the tresspassers broke the glass in the door and tried to open it. Frightened, the men ran away.

ors of the receiving ship said they were willing to do anything marines would do. Still it was a question whether any crowd, however patriotic, would endure such a downpour.

Then, unexpectedly, the torrent subsided, and as the word that the battle was on was passed around on the loud speakers, the visitors came swarming out of the shops to line the field three and four deep.

Sailors "Insurrectos."

The sailors already were there in costumes with a vague suggestion of Central America in them—straw sombreros, checkered shirts, denim trousers patched with curious chunks of crimson, blue and yellow silk. The program had billed them as the "Insurrectos," and just for the sake of local color they had painted the two shacks at the west end of the field with such legends as "Sandinos," "Bacardi" and "Las Casas Frias."

They had taken their position at a barricade, behind which they had planted a yellow standard, and a few dozen yards ahead they had set up an outpost. With a card in his hatband reading "Jefe," and a saber in his hand, Lieut. D. M. Coffee directed preparations for the defense.

It was a noisy battle while it lasted with plenty of mud for the wounded and dying to wallow in and with machine guns and artillery on both sides. The marines were to make a landing operation from the Anacostia and capture the salient. They did so with great efficiency, storming the outpost, advancing under a smoke screen to the barricade, where they bayoneted the last ditch defenders, captured the retreating insurrectos.

Then there was a solemn moment as the yellow standard was hauled down, the American colors hoisted in their place and the crowd bareheaded in the drizzle listening to the National Anthem. But neither marines nor sailors, and least of all the marine detail which was supposed to do so could defend the field against the stampede of small boys who wanted to get the empty cartridge clips.

Parade Called Off.

Up to 2 p. m. everything had gone according to schedule except for the big parade of sailors, marines and coast guardsmen, which was called off. It was too wet, too, for the formal guard mount of the marines and the exercise drill of the receiving ship seamen's guard. The big air show, which the Fleet Marine Force from Quantico were to have given along the water front also became impossible.

One of the features of this air show, an innovation, had been the arrival of King Neptune in the person of a C. P. O. from the receiving ship, an adaption of the ceremony of crossing the equator. Not to be bothered by his own element, Neptune duly arrived at the quay on the east end of the waterfront, only to find the elaborate plans for his reception had been called off.

Forge Lures Many.

By this time the crowd was indoors milling through the shops and offices or aboard the U. S. S. Erie. The biggest crowds were in the forge, where groups of fascinated boys stood to watch huge masses of white-hot metal pounded by the great mechanical hammers.

About 12,000 persons were on hand at the Brooklyn Navy Yard to raise a cheer when Assistant Secretary Charles Edison manned the great bull riveter that began the work on the North Carolina. In Boston, at exercises on the historic Common, James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son, asserted that "a second-best Navy" will not do for America. He called for a Navy that would be strong enough to confine battles "to the oceanic wastes." At the navy yard in Mare Island, Calif., Navy Day was signalized by laying of the keel for a new 1,450-ton submarine—the Swordfish.

"Ready for Any Attack."

Here in Washington, Secretary Swanson told reporters that the Navy now is at its greatest power and efficiency since the World War. At Atlanta Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, declared that the fleet is ready to meet any attack.

Speaking to the Navy Day meeting of the Washington Rotary Club, Rear Admiral Charles Russell Train, president of the Naval Examining Board, asserted that the battleship is still "the backbone of our naval strategy." He continued:

"As air development advances, so does antiaircraft defense. As bombs increase their destructive power, so naval construction is altered to meet it."

Ceremonies took place at the John Paul Jones Monument in West Potomac Park, under auspices of the Military Order of the World War and the Masonic clubs of the District, and at the Commodore John Barry Monument in Franklin Park, under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus. Wreaths were placed at the base of the statues.

At yet another ceremony, Mrs. William A. Becker made the presentation of a bronze plaque which is to be awarded to the naval destroyer having the highest rating for antiaircraft gunnery. The plaque was accepted by Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, representing Secretary Swanson.

'Y' Aide to Speak.

Speakers Laud James G. Yaden At Dinner Here

Twelve speakers last night testified in the good works of James G. Yaden as a civic leader and member of the American Federation of Government Employes at a banquet given in honor of Yaden by the District Department, A. F. G. E. in the Hamilton Hotel.

The speakers were William Roberts, an attorney; Charles I. Stengle, president, A. F. G. E.; Civil Service Commissioner Harry B. Mitchell, John Locher, president Central Labor Union; Arthur Clarendon Smith, representing a group of civic associations; Ira Y. Bain, Cecil Custer, Maj. Ralph I. Graves, Mrs. Bernice Heffner, Michael D. Schaefer, G. Carroll Dimond, of the A. F. G. E., and Charles R. Anderson, of the Civil Service Commission Board of Appeals and Review.

The banquet marked Yaden's recent service as president of the District Department, and drew from Dimond, a national officer, the remark that the best way to honor Yaden would be through intensively building up the organization. Smith brought greetings from the Federation of Business Men's Associations, the Central Business Men's Association, the Reciprocity Club, the Sons of Confederate Veterans, the Lee Highway Association and the Democratic League of the District of Columbia. Most of the speakers dwelt on Yaden's interest in Washington's civic affairs.

The Takoma Horticultural Club will hold its chrysanthemum show today and tomorrow in the Takoma Park branch of the Public Library at Fifth and Cedar streets. There will be four classes of collections, ten of specimens, four of arrangements and three for other flowers in the show. Group Opposes Realty License For Operators

The issuance of licenses to a certain "half-dozen" District real estate brokers or salesmen will be protested by a group of Washington residents, it was revealed yesterday by John A. Petty, secretary of the newly-created District Real Estate Commission.

A notice was received by the commission stating that a group would like to protest the granting of licenses by airing their grievances at a public hearing.

Petty would not reveal the source of the protest nor the names of the real estate operators involved.

The statement also requested the commission to notify the group if and when the "half-dozen" make application for their licenses. Petty stated that if the complaints prove to be of a serious nature the Real Estate Board would hold a hearing.

A license may be suspended, denied or revoked by the commission.

Licenses must be issued by November 23.

Approval by the District Commissioners was granted yesterday to regulations controlling the operation of the Real Estate Commission. Approval was also granted by Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal.

D. C. Income May Be Cut by Excise Laws

Taxes May Be Deducted From Business Privilege Levy.

Legal Authorities Informally Agree on Procedure.

Certain excise taxes, both Federal and District, may be deducted from the gross receipts reported by business and professional people in filing their business privilege returns, it was indicated by legal authorities of the District yesterday.

Without stating specifically the type of excise taxes involved, the officials informally agreed these could be deducted.

Meanwhile, Allen F. Brooke, tax administrator, stated that more than 1,000 corrected returns had been received by his office to date. The amended forms, Brooke said, included many deductions from the gross receipts for a variety of excise taxes.

Sees Revenue Loss.

"This will probably mean that the revenue coming from this levy will be decreased by a considerable amount," he said.

The District Commissioners will be petitioned for a formal interpretation of the excise tax deductions, in order to solve this new complexity of amended returns, Brooke asserted.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal will ask the co-operation of the Internal Revenue Bureau in classifiying a variety of excise taxes.

A dirge of corrected forms swamped Brooke's office recently following word that certain taxes could be deducted from the gross receipts. It was stated that these taxes, which are intended to be levied directly in the consumer, were being collected by the businessmen, acting as a collecting agency for the Government.

Liquor dealers maintain that taxes paid on the sale of liquor, wine and beer should be deducted from the gross receipts in filing the privilege tax return. Brooke stated that many liquor dealers have sent in amended forms.

14,000 Returns Studied.

He estimated that in several cases the excise taxes of the liquor dealers run as high as 40 per cent.

At the present time his office is attempting to decipher the more than 14,000 returns on gross receipts received from the business and professional classes in the District.

Further complications have set in with the receipt of the amended forms.

The permissible deductions were evidently based on the Court of Appeals decision in March, 1930, regarding the American Oil Co. It was held that the District gasoline tax was not a part of the purchase price for motor fuel bought by the consumer of the gasoline importers.

The importer, the court held, merely acted as an agent for the District in the collection of the tax.

Hence, in the recent muddle of the privilege tax, legal officers of the District held that the gasoline retailer should not be required to include the gasoline tax he collected as part of his gross receipts.

Other taxes which could be deducted from the returns as not falling under gross receipts were movie theater taxes and also taxes at Griffith Stadium.

POLL PICKS DI MAGGIO AS MOST VALUABLE PLAYER

The Washington Post Sports

18 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1937 X*

This Morning

G. W. Coaches Are Safe, Reports Say.

By Shirley Povich.

While other coaching dynasties have rocked and tottered from the after-effects of Saturday misfortunes, the men of the George Washington University football staff have always enjoyed immunity from the attacks of irate alumni. Strong in the confidence of the university president, solidly backed by their alumni association, Jim Pixlee and his aides have never had to contend with the howls of the squawkers.

POVICH

In fact, President Cloyd Heck Marvin has repeatedly stated with refreshing frankness that the jobs of his football coaches did not depend upon victory or defeat; that G. W. U. would be satisfied if its teams, in defeat, showed the proper spirit.

* * * *

It was inevitable, though, that the squawks would be heard in increasing force following the pitiable helplessness of the G. W. U. against Alabama at Griffith Stadium. And the first hint that criticism of the G. W. coaches would be tolerated even in semiofficial quarters has now appeared.

* * * *

The ultraliberal George Washington student weekly, the Hatchet, yesterday opened its columns to a strongly worded letter assailing the G. W. coaching staff. The author, signing himself as Alex Divorsky, an alumnus now living in Richmond, does not spare the Colonial coaches. Whatever significance the fact that the Hatchet published the letter might have, is conjectural, but there is no doubt whatsoever how Alumnus Divorsky feels about it.

* * * *

He says, among other things:

"For the past five years I have followed the fortunes of the George Washington football team . . . I journey up from Richmond to see the G. W.-Alabama game . . . what I saw was a group of boys fighting their hearts out in vain. How can you expect a team to make a comparable showing to 'big' teams when they haven't been taught a thing?

* * * *

"During my years at G. W. (1932-36) I saw nothing but that stupid brand of football—no plays, no deception, no nothing—just brute force . . . in its own inimitable way, the coaching staff continues to use the same fundamental plays which every junior high school in the country has.

* * * *

"Why must G. W. U. continue with that style of play? Why can't we have something new in the line of plays? Why, in short, can't G. W. get a coaching staff which is capable of teaching the team something that would really make it a good team?

* * * *

". . . When Tulsa first played G. W. a few years ago and used a squad formation, it only took the coaching staff about three years to wake up to the fact that such a play was a good one. When, the first time the team used that play against Rice they almost gained the entire length of the field. And even then the play had been held up until late in the game.

* * * *

". . . Here are the things which are disgusting to me. I don't say that G. W. should go out to develop a Rose Bowl team, but the common-sense thing to do is to engage mediocre teams. One can not expect men who have not been trained in the fundamentals of blocking and tackling to withstand such strong opponents as Alabama, Rice, Arkansas, etc. As I say, if the impossible does happen, it will only be in spite of the coaching and not as a result of it.

* * * *

"Why is it not possible to get good coaching? If the school wants to get into big-time football it first must get big-time coaching. And if it doesn't want big-time football, for God's sake, stay out of it . . . but don't have these players go out and sustain injuries and take a terrific beating, especially when they are about certain to be beaten at the start . . . it is not fair to the players . . .

* * * *

"I don't anticipate any radical changes as a result of this letter, but I am certain that there are many more alumni who feel the same way about the matter.

* * * *

"Summarizing, I feel that, to save its face, and those of its players, G. W. should either (1) get a decent coaching staff or (2) schedule teams of comparative ability."

And the above was actually published in the school paper mind you.

* * * *

University of Penn players privately confided to Georgetown players after the game at Philadelphia Saturday that G. U. scored a touchdown on the occasion when the Hoyas lost the ball on the 1-inch line . . . Cliff Battles, of the Redskins, need never fear that he will be traded to the lowly Philadelphia Eagles . . . the Eagles wouldn't have him after his fumbling exhibition both times the Washington Club played the Philadelphia team . . . but Coach Flaherty is content to keep Battles who is only the leading ground gainer in the entire league . . . Dale Prather, the G. W. tackle who failed to make good with the Redskins and later was released to Cleveland, is now playing for the Boston Shamrocks of the outlaw American League . . .

Lion Backs Shaken Up.

New York, Oct. 27.—Lou Little again shook up his backfield as Columbia drilled on defense against a freshman team armed with Cornell plays. Gerhard Seidel and John Mehahen were inserted into the backfield at intervals.

Mrs. Lord, Mrs. Walper Are Victims

Mrs. R. P. Huff Wins Teal Trophy Play at Kenwood.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A pair of women's championships were decided yesterday despite an all-day downpour. Mrs. W. R. Stokes won the N. B. C. trophy at Congressional in a play-off with Mrs. Leo Walper. Mrs. H. M. Brundage captured her second Columbia Country Club championship in two years, defeating Mrs. Merrill Lord in the finals.

Mrs. Stokes and Mrs. Walper, who tied with Mrs. Charlotte Stern for the N. B. C. event last week, played off the trophy and the watch, as Mrs. Stern elected to take the gross prize.

Mrs. Stokes, the Indian Spring linkswoman, ended the medal round in spectacular fashion as she holed a 20-foot putt on the final green for an 87 gross and 82 net, while Mrs. Walper missed a 6-footer that would have earned a tie. Mrs. Walper scored 89—6—83.

Mrs. Brundage, in winning the Columbia Club championship, outsteadied Mrs. Lord and won on the fourteenth green after holding a 3-up lead at nine holes. Mrs. J. F. Gross won the championship consolation over Mrs. H. K. Cornell, 2 and 1.

Prize Presentation.

Martin R. West presided at the ladies luncheon and presented the prize to the winners in five flights of play.

The first nine of the Walper-Stokes match was a see-saw affair, Mrs. Stokes winning three holes, losing two and halving four. As she conceded Mrs. Walper a handicap stroke, they were all even at the turn.

Mrs. Walper gained a two-stroke lead on the second nine on the fourteenth hole, but the eventual winner squared it on the sixteenth with a par four. They halved the seventeenth, and Mrs. Walper appeared to have an edge on the final green, as she placed her second 6 feet from the pin, but Mrs. Stokes, previous winner of the Keefer and Star cups, stroked the 20-footer in for her third championship of the year.

Columbia Results.

First flight—Mrs. H. M. Brundage defeated Mrs. Merrill Lord, 3 and 4. Consolation—Mrs. J. F. Gross defeated Mrs. H. K. Cornwell, 2 and 1.

Second flight—Mrs. H. Stadler defeated Mrs. Mary Minnix, 2 and 1. Consolation—Mrs. J. J. Darby defeated Mrs. Hugh MacKenzie, 1 up, 20 holes.

Third flight—Mrs. H. P. Foley defeated Mrs. H. J. Kane, 2 and 1. Consolation—Mrs. L. E. Hurley defeated Mrs. W. C. Gelens, 3 and 1.

Fourth flight—Mrs. B. M. Rountree defeated Mrs. R. H. Bogeley, 3 and 1. Consolation—Mrs. C. Fisher defeated Mrs. W. Myers, 3 and 2.

Mrs. Huff Winner In Kenwood Play.

Mrs. R. P. Huff won the Teal Trophy at Kenwood yesterday, a match play against par event, by finishing one down to perfect figures. Mrs. Huff also won the gross award with 92, but elected to take the trophy.

Mrs. A. A. McEntee, club champion, won the gross prize with 95, while Mrs. Fred Meier and Mrs. Charles Vaile tied for second in the cup play, five down each. Mrs. Meier won in a draw for second prize.

Tulsa's Squad Will Workout For G.W.Game

As Tulsa's Golden Hurricane moved nearer Washington for its game with George Washington tomorrow night, the Colonials geared their revised backfield in a hour-long scrimmage yesterday, despite the steady rain, at Palisades Park playground.

The Tulsa squa arrives here this morning at 11:30 and will be quartered at the Ambassador Hotel. This afternoon Coach Vic Hurt will send his boys through a short practice at Griffith Stadium. The Colonials, meanwhile, will practice at Palisades Park again, or at one of Maryland U.'s fields.

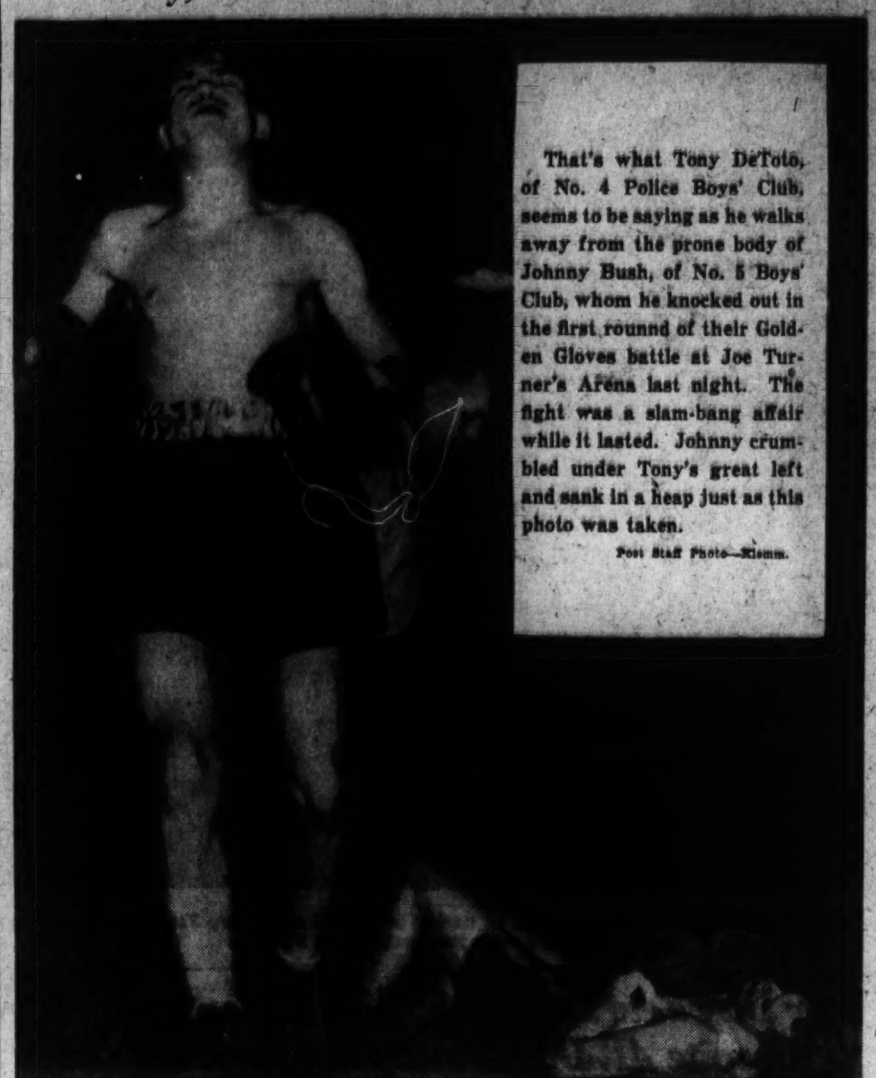
Army Backs Drilled.

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 27 (AP).—Coach Gar Davidson, Army coach, drilled two sets of backs with good results today in a long scrimmage. Woodrow Wilson and Jack Endress excelled with some fine passing as the cadets prepared for the V. M. I. invasion, Saturday.

Lazzeri in Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 27 (AP).—Tony Lazzeri slipped into Chicago today to find out why his release from the World Champion New York Yankees was engineered by Owner Phil K. Wrigley, of the Cubs.

'Boy, Did I Knock That Fellow Out Cold!'



That's what Tony DeToto, of No. 4 Police Boys' Club, seems to be saying as he walks away from the prone body of Johnny Bush, of No. 5 Boys' Club, whom he knocked out in the first rounnd of their Golden Gloves battle at Joe Turner's Arena last night. The fight was a slam-bang affair while it lasted. Johnny crumbled under Tony's great left and sank in a heap just as this photo was taken.

Six Technical Kayos Mark Bouts; 'Diz' Loses

By Jack Munhall.

Six technical knockouts and the colorful, inimitable Mike "Diz" Eslin combined to furnish 1,200 spectators plenty of action, thrills and laughs as the Golden Glove tournament opened last night at Turner's arena with 12 bristling novice bouts.

The much-publicized Mike "Diz," Washington's King Levinski, officially launched the tournament in great style as he dropped his opening bout for the third time in as many years. Despite his bright pink bathrobe emblazoned with the words: "Rendezvous Playboy" and numerous antics and facial expressions which kept the crowd in an uproar, Eslin proved no match for clever Andrew Speleos, a Washington Boys' Club 112-pounder.

Called upon to explain his defeat, Eslin modestly declared:

"It was just a tough break, that's all. I'm going up to Noo Yorke to challenge Armstrong and Sarron," added the flippant Diz.

Diz won't have to go to New York to seek action if the plans of Jim Lake materialize. The theater operator and announcer extraordinary was so pleased with the crowd's reaction to Eslin that he told ringside newspapermen he would attempt to sign Mike Diz for a week's engagement at the Gayety Theater. In any event Mike Diz will be seen next week when the Golden Glove tournament resumes, for he will be matched with the best available 112-pounder in a special exhibition.

Although each bout was fiercely contested by the eager novices, the heavier classes provided the most action as the boys slugged it out, asking and giving no quarter.

The well known Clifton Fones, Merrick 147-pound fighter, was given quite a scare by unheralded and unattended Nathan Segal. Segal and Fones whaled away, toe to toe, the better part of the first two rounds, and when the time for a fast finish arrived in the final heat, neither was able to get in a solid punch as they staggered around the ring, each leaning on the other. Fones was awarded a split and unpopular decision.

The final bout of the evening between Franklin Peter, Merrick B. C., and Eddie Stacey, National Guard, a couple of hard-hitting 160-pounders, was also a crowd-pleaser. Peter won a unanimous three-round decision, but not before each hit the canvas for a nine count in the initial stanza. Peter used a stiff left jab to great advantage, to repel the bull-like rushes of his stronger opponent.

112-Pound Class.

Andrew Speleos (Washington B. C.) outpointed Mike Eslin (unattached), three rounds; Bernie Hardy (Merrick) won technical knockout from Jackie Miller (Washington B. C.), third round; Tony de Toto (No. 5 Police) won technical knockout from John Bush (No. 4 Police), first round.

118-Pound Class.

Al Gray (Merrick B. C.) outpointed Joe Thompson (Northeast B. C.), three rounds.

126-Pound Class.

135-Pound Class.

Leo Marcopulos (No. 5 Police) won technical knockout from Eddie Hoffman (Merrick B. C.), third round; Harvey Schweir (Terminal Y. M. C. A.) outpointed Ronald Ashen (Merrick B. C.), three rounds.

147-Pound Class.

John Bacco (unattached) won technical knockout from Jack Fox (Merrick B. C.), 55 seconds, first round; Clifton Fones (Merrick B. C.) outpointed Nathan Segal (unattached), three rounds.

160-Pound Class.

Franklin Peter (Merrick B. C.) outpointed Eddie Stacey (National Guard), three rounds.

Quinn Sued For $500,000 By O'Hara

Race Track Head Files Few Hours After Quinn's Suit.

By the Associated Press.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 27.—A $500,000 libel suit today was brought against Gov. Robert E. Quinn, of Rhode Island, by Walter E. O'Hara, racetrack head, only a few hours after O'Hara had been served in a $500,000 libel suit by Quinn.

Sheriff Thomas Barry said today counsel for director of the Narragansett track and publisher of the Providence Star-Tribune had given him a writ of arrest in the $500,000 suit.

Barry made the statement a short time after O'Hara had been released in $7,500 bond in the suit brought by Quinn last night when O'Hara called the Governor a "dictator" in a radio talk. Barry said he had not had time yet to serve the writ.

Meanwhile, a petition was filed with Judge Charles A. Walsh, asking that a responsible representative of the Providence Tribune Co., publisher of the Star-Tribune, O'hara's paper, be cited to appear at 11 a. m. tomorrow to show cause why the company should not be held in contempt of court.

The petition, filed by Michael Deciantis, head of the State public utilities commission, resulted from a paragraph in a story printed in a special edition of the Stare-Tribune today. It read, the petition said:

"Judge Charles A. Walsh, of superior court, was interviewed during the early morning hours and Deciantis was politely urged to cool down in the interests of common decency and the sane administration of justice, and the application of these principles frustrated Quinn's plot to keep O'Hara in jail for the night."

O'Hara was served with a warrant by High Sheriff John Baird when leaving his hotel, but returned and stayed in his suite in Baird's custody for the night.

When informed Sheriff Barry had a writ of arrest, Quinn declared it could not be served on a Governor and that he would not accept service. He added, however, that O'Hara was free to serve a "writ of summons in a libel suit."

Under such a writ, the Governor would be required to answer to the charges but would not be arrested.

Deciantis, in the petition, maintained the statements in the story "falsely represented the facts."

He said further that there was no interview and that he had not been asked to "cool down."

Don Lash Will Defend Cross-Country Title

Newark, N. J., Oct. 27 (AP).—Don Lash, the Indiana speed boy who won the national cross-country championship over the Branch Brook Park course here last year, will get a chance to repeat over the same layout.

The Good Counsel Holy Name Society again has been awarded the event, to be held November 28. It is the first time the title run has been contested twice in the same city.

Yankee Outfielder Given 29% of Votes

Rank and File of Baseball Fans Over Nation Rate Californian Ahead of Gehrig; Hubbell and Medwick Get Third and Fourth Places.

(Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.)

New York, Oct. 27.—The most valuable player in the big leagues—Joe DiMaggio, of the New York Yankees.

That's the decision of rank and file baseball fans from coast to coast as measured today by the American Institute of Public opinion, an independent statistical organization which conducts opinion surveys for leading U. S. newspapers.

The institute used a staff of more than 800 interviewers to reach representative baseball followers in all 48 States. The institute asked them:

"In your opinion, who was the most valuable player in the big leagues this year?"

DiMaggio received 29 per cent of all mentions and was well ahead of his Yankee teammate, Lou Gehrig, who was runner-up with 17 per cent.

The National League took third and fourth places as Carl Hubbell, New York Giants' lefthander, and Joe Medwick, St. Louis Cardinal outfielder, won 18 per cent and 8 per cent of the total vote, respectively.

Other leaders in the poll were Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, of the Yankees; Charley Gehringer, of the Detroit Tigers, and Charles (Gabby) Hartnett, of the Chicago Cubs.

The leaders divided the vote as follows:

1. DiMaggio, New York, A. L.	29%
2. Gehrig, New York, A. L.	17
3. Hubbell, New York, N. L.	18
4. Medwick, St. Louis, N. L.	8
5. Gomez, New York, A. L.	7
6. Gehringer, Detroit, A. L.	6
7. Hartnett, Chicago, N. L.	5
All others	12

First Popular Vote.

The institute poll is the first popular test, on a nation-wide scale, of player popularity. It is likewise the first test in which the players of both major leagues were competing against each other for popular honors. The Baseball Writers Association is accustomed to make an "experts'" selection each year, but the association makes separate selections for the National and American leagues.

The selections of the average fan this year can be compared with those of the experts when the latter are made public shortly.

Last year the baseball writers voted Lou Gehrig "the most valuable player" in the American League and gave National League laurels to Carl Hubbell. Both Gehrig and Hubbell had won the prize once before.

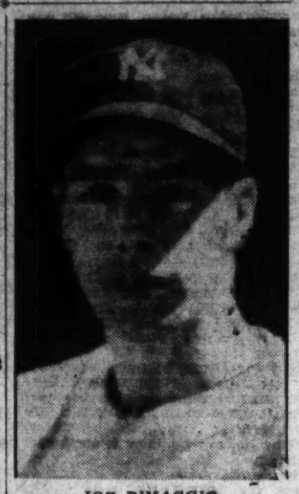
DiMaggio never has. The baseball writers placed him eighth on the American League honors in 1936, after the Pacific Coast player turned in a sensational first season in the majors.

Few first-year sensations do as well the second year, but DiMaggio more than fulfilled his promise. The young Italian outfielder trailed Gehringer and Gehrig in batting average, but he hit a very respectable .346 and led both leagues in runs scored and runs batted in.

To top his American League record this year, Di Maggio took a leading part in the Yankees' rout of the Giants in the World Series and contributed a home run in the final game.

National League Stars.

Although Carl Hubbell won fewer games this year than in 1936, he still led the National League with his record of 22 games won. Voters in the institute poll rate him an indispensable factor in the Giants' victory in the National League.



JOE DIMAGGIO.

Joe (Ducky) Medwick placed prominently because of a batting average that topped .400 for most of the season. Despite a slump in August and September, Medwick led the National League in batting with yards to spare.

Hitters Wanted—Not Pitchers.

The institute poll sheds light on an old question: Do the fans want to watch the hitters or the pitchers?

Five of the seven leaders in popular rank are hitters—DiMaggio, Gehrig, Medwick, Gehringer and Hartnett—and they account for the overwhelming majority of votes in the poll.

The survey also reflects the popularity of the American League, which has a majority of the seven places, including Nos. 1 and 2.

Vender Wins $25,000 Quits Selling Peanuts

Denville, N. J., Oct. 27 (AP).—And what did Jose Gomez, 62-year-old peanut vender, do tod when Solar Bear finished thi in the Irish Hospitals Swe stakes?

He gave away all the peanuts. He gave away the cart. "Hooray!" he shouted.

Because he and a friend drew on their life earnings to buy a ticket on the horse for $2.50, they will share winnings of $30,000.

"No, more da peanuts," declared Gomez, a Spanish immigrant. "I buy new suit (the one he has now is 22 years old); I buy new car (he had none); I put rest in bank."

He said he's not going back to Spain because "too much fight there."

Ahearn Goes North to Sign Petey Sarron for Bout at Arena Here

Ingram, Reid Or Gevinson Will Be Foe

Fight in Local Ring Is Assured; Lou to Meet Monday's Winner.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, of the fistic firm of Turner & Ahearn, will leave for New York this morning to sign up Petey Sarron for a match at Turner's Arena with either Lou Gevinson, the Southwest southpaw, or the winner of next Monday night's eight-rounder at the arena between Ray Ingram, local scrapper, and Al Reid, of the Bronx.

Ahearn has the promise of Jimmy Erwin, Sarron's manager, that Petey will fight in Washington in the very near future, but Ahearn wants it on the dotted line.

The matchmaker stated yesterday that he would pit Gevinson against the winner of the Reid-Ingram feature bout, and the winner of that bout would be matched with Sarron.

Whether Sarron wins or loses in his title bout with Henry Armstrong tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden, Ahearn said he was confident of returning with Sarron's signature on a contract. Such a match might take place late next month at the arena.

Notice was also served on Ray Ingram that he must make 127 by 2 p. m. Monday or forfeit $200. Sammy Goldman and Charlie Rose, who handle the classy little New Yorker, Reid, have demanded that Ingram make this weight to protect their fighter. Ingram, seeking a comeback, and Reid, fought to a stirring six-round draw a few weeks ago at the stadium.

Goldman, who managed the great Tony Canzoneri, informed Ahearn that he would like nothing better than a match between Reid and Sarron, and Matt Twomey, who pulls the reins on Lefty Gevinson, said that he was going up to New York with Lou to demand a bout with Sarron.

Sarron and Gevinson were to have clashed at the Stadium last June, but the match fell through when the featherweight champion arrived later in this country than he had expected.

Sarron has not fought here since last May a year ago when the Birmingham buzz-saw won the featherweight crown from Freddy Miller.

Recreation Pin Leaders in Tie

Marlboro Hotel and University Shop bowling teams continue to set the pace in the strong Recreation League, each team having won 10 and lost 2, with Marlboro holding the lead by total pins.

In last night's matches at Recreation Alleys, Marlboro Hotel led by Brad Mandley's 404 swept their set from Marvins Credit despite Henry May's 366. University Shop aided by Pinkey Bradt's 366 stretched their winning streak to nine straight by whitewashing Brodts. The Federal Bureau of Investigation, with Astor Clarke rolling 375, won three from Blankens Restaurant.

Allied Roofing Co., paced by Edinger's 383, Nash's 371 and Cleary's 364, took a 2-1 decision from Terry's Home Appliance Co. Bregman's Wildcats, led by Sam Simon's 375. Abe Singer's 366 and Beaver's 364, won three games from Blaydes Contracting Co.

Presidents to Oppose Norfolk Team, Sunday

Washington's undefeated Presidents will return home Sunday after several weeks of play on foreign fields, to meet the strong Norfolk Clancies at Griffith Stadium.

Strengthened by the return of Frank Cumberland, quarter; Bob Makofsky, fullback, and Angus Lamond, guard, who have been idle due to injuries, the Presidents hope to continue to add the Virginian to their list of Dixie League victims.

French Will Seek Olympic Stars in Senegal

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

New York, Oct. 27.—Safari in Senegal:

This is one of the strangest but true stories in the history of sports. If you saw it in the movies or read it in fiction, you would snicker at it because of its incredibility.

But it's an actuality. France, which failed to win a single point at men's track and field in the last Olympics in Germany, will try to recruit a new "Foreign Legion" of athletes in Darkest Africa. In December, the French Athletic Federation will send a safari trekking through the jungles of French West Africa seeking athletic talent.

Olympic performances of American Negroes have inspired this strange expedition—feats of Negroes like Jesse Owens, Cornelius Johnson, Johnny Woodruff, Archie Williams, Ralph Metcalfe and Ben Johnson. The imaginative French hope to find primitive jungle men who can duplicate or excel the athletic accomplishments of Uncle Sam's modernized, college-trained dark-skinned competitors.

They hope to find jungle men whose speed, jumping ability and brawn will send the tri-color of France up the flagpole again and again in the 1940 games at Tokyo.

Capt. Clayeux, who commanded the French Olympic team at Berlin, will have charge of the federation's expedition. It will land at Dakar, Senegal, in mid-December. Using Dakar as a base, the safari will trek through the jungles of Senegal and Upper Senegal, clear to Timbuktu on the Niger River.

Fascinating tales of athletic prowess have seeped out of the Senegal wilderness—stories of 7-foot Negroes, who in normal hunting forays leap with ease over 25-foot streams, jump over 7-foot high stockades in their bare feet and run along the forest trails for ten hours without halting.

The federation's safari would tap this hidden treasure of athletic talent—just as other safaris have penetrated West Africa seeking treasures of gold, ivory and rare woods.

Hence drums will sound along the Senegal and Niger rivers, frightening monkeys, lions, leopards, cheetahs, hyenas and giraffes—and summoning the best athletes from the forests and open spaces to main villages where tryouts will be held. The best performers will be taken to Dakar for lengthy training. Mayor Goux of Dakar has promised to build a stadium where native athletes can begin training under climatic conditions similar to the jungle.

This African man hunt will cost money. The French ministry of colonies and the athletic federation are paying most of the expenses, although the Paris newspaper, L'Auto is handling the transportation costs to Dakar and return. African athletes selected for Olympic competition and training will become wards of the French government, but they will remain amateurs. After the Tokyo games, they can return to their native jungles if they so desire.

News of this intriguing expedition comes to me by letter from Paris. My friend Ralph Heinzen, United Press bureau manager in Paris, sends the letter. Ralph says, "I thought you might be interested in the African safari." Interested! boy—oh—boy! Would I like to join that expedition and head into the forests and cover those jungle tryouts—even if we found nothing but malaria.

Navy Starts Power Backs Against Penn

Hansen, Franks, Cooke and Wood Ready for Fray.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 27.—Head Coach Hardwick, of the Navy, has decided to start his power backfield against Penn Saturday, probably the most powerful quartet that has ever been in a Navy backfield, and all members of classes below the graduating class.

In this combination the blockers will be Harold Hansen and Art Franks, each weighing over 200 pounds, with Lem Cooke and Emmett Wood as the carriers. Wood is a chunky lad of nearly 180 pounds and a reliable gainer of a moderate number of yards, particularly in a pinch. Cooke is the outstanding runner of the combination.

Hardwick expects to use his regular line, with Irwin Fike and Lou Powell at the ends; Al Bergner and Ken Hysong, tackles; Capt. Ray DuBois and Heber Player, guards, and Dick Fincher, center.

The selection of this younger backfield to start the game does not mean that the first backfield, selected early in the season and composed entirely of members of the graduating class, has been relegated to a subordinate place.

Bill Ingram is back in shape and giving glimpses of his last year form, and with Frank Case, Bob Antrim and either Alan McFarland or Charley Reimann, makes up this combination, which is likely to be in a good half of the playing.

Practice was secret this afternoon and about evenly divided between attack and defense. Attention was given to some new plays to be used against Penn.

While Penn has not appeared as strong as Harvard or Notre Dame, Navy's most recent opponents, the coaches are not taking things for granted. The rivalry is an old one, dating back to 1888, two years before the first game with the Army, and Penn is expected to strike its stride against the Navy.

Cards Pay $8 Dividend.

St. Louis, Oct. 27 (AP).—Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, announced today directors of the National League baseball club had voted a dividend of $8 a share on $10,160 shares of stock outstanding, a total payment of $81,280. Last year the club was reported to have paid $12 a share.

Greatest 'Heave' Due to Blonde, Baugh Says

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Staff Writer.

New York, Oct. 27.—"Slingin' Sam" Baugh, of the Washington Redskins, whose brilliant ball tossing this season promises a new National League passing record, confessed today that the greatest heave of his career was when he sighed at a blonde.

"We're engaged," the tall, dark-haired Texan admitted. "We'll be married in June. And then I'd like to settle down."

Slingin' Sam's fiancee is Miss Edmonia Smith, of Sweetwater, Tex., Baugh's home town.

Baugh's romantic revelation was made after the Brooklyn Dodgers' football luncheon, at which he was guest of honor. The Dodgers play the Redskins at Ebbets Field Sunday. They brought Sam down from Washington to stimulate interest in the contest.

Baugh, all-America quarterback with Texas Christian University last year, is amazing National League statisticians with his ball tossing in his first season as a pro. In six games, 53 of his 109 passing tries were completed. If he can complete only 25 more in Washington's remaining five games, he will break the league record of 77 completed last year by Arnold Herber, of the Green Bay packers. Of course, Sam is leading the league in this department for 1937.

Did Sam prefer professional football to the college game? He certainly did. He explained that the pro players tackle and block much harder, that there are no weak spots on pro elevens, and that the game is more open. Moreover, the professionals have nothing on their minds but football, so their playing edge is sharper.

Did he prefer football to baseball? "Well, you might say football is my first love," Sam answered. "Otherwise, I would not be playing as a professional."

"First love!" interrupted a reporter. "What about Edmonia?"

Sam blushed and grinned. "Well—all right—we'll call football my second love and baseball my third. I played third base and shortstop in college, and with amateur teams in the summers. I was signed to try out with the St. Louis Cardinals last spring, but the contract specified that I couldn't play football, so I didn't go through with it.

"I was figuring on being a freshman coach at Texas Christian this year, when George Marshall talked me into playing with the Redskins."

It is understood that Marshall gave Baugh a two-year contract at $7,500 a year. When this contract runs out, Sam hopes to land a job as freshman or backfield coach with some college. "I'd rather play football than coach," he explained, "but after Edmonia and I are married a coaching job will let us settle down."

Kelley Abandons Gridiron Career

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Larry Kelley, Yale's 1936 all-America end, today announced he had abandoned the idea of playing professional football for the part-time role as a sports writer.

Instead of playing with the Boston Shamrocks, of the American Professional Football League, Kelley said he would cover the more important games of the current season for a chain of newspapers.

Referring to reports that authorities of the Peddie School had applied pressure to force him to surrender the professional playing idea, Kelley said: "This is not true. The school officials have at all times been sympathetic and helpful. I withdrew from Sunday's game at the order of my doctor."

National City Sunday Grid Schedule Is Set

Sunday's schedule for the National City Football League was announced last night. It follows:

Northeast Boys Club vs. Georgetown Boys Club, Ballston Stadium, 1 p. m.; Regal Clothes vs. Trinity Athletic Club, Ballston Stadium, 2:30 p. m.; Southeast Athletic Club vs. Corr Sport Supply, Gonzaga Field, 1 p. m.; Palace Athletic Club vs. Plaza Wine and Liquor, Gonzaga Field, 2:30 p. m.

Sarada Wins Race.

San Mateo, Calif., Oct. 27 (AP).—Sarada, running in the silks of the Circle "M" Ranch and ridden by Jockey Willie Robertson, won today's feature race at Bay Meadows track. The time for the one mile was 1:37 4-5.

Turkey Tourney At East Potomac

"T" Gubraski, the public links tournament promoter, has scheduled the annual fall turkey tournament at East Potomac, with qualifying rounds scheduled Saturday through Monday, inclusive. Flights will be provided for all entrants.

The first round of match play must be completed by November 7 and it starts on the 4th. Allotted time for the other matches includes second round, 11 to 14; third round, 18 to 21, with the finals in all sixteens on November 22.

Gaps Are Closed.

Ralph Albarano and Bob Brown, Maryland's pair of sophomore tackles, have just about completely closed gaps that made the Terp line vulnerable last season.

DOBSON holds that GUS is as clever and tricky as GLEN WARNER, who coached him, ever was, and WELCH, in return, minces no words, calling FRANK one of the country's better mentors and an outstanding conditioner of men . . . each is borne out in his contention this season . . . WELCH has given his team many tricky plays and now even threatens to use the first girl football player in the history of the collegiate game . . . the record of Maryland's line, which plays 60 minutes of each ball game, is sufficient evidence that DOBSON knows what it takes to make 'em tough.

If you plan to risk a two-bit piece on a football pool this weekend, it might not be a waste of time to drop by the office and take a squint at the list of selections sent in by one VINCE MARTINO, who bases his contentions on a 15-year career as player and coach . . . not only does he pick the winner, but he gives the correct betting odds, taken from what he claims is a complete record of what each club has done in the past and what their future possibilities amount to . . . if CLIFF BATTLES, Redskin back, who is now leading the league, succeeds in winning the ground-gaining championship of the National Professional League, he will wear a crown that he first won five years ago . . . he now leads his closest competitor by 100 yards, although he missed the first game . . . his average is 4.4 yards per try.

Although he has scored but one touchdown, RILEY SMITH is the high point scorer on the local club . . . his eight points after touchdown and four field goals (greatest number in the league) give him an accumulation of 26 points and place him fifth in the circuit . . . Zay Captures Valley Forge Handicap at Laurel; Pays $15.90 Mutuel

Firethorn Is Beaten 3 Lengths

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 27.—Zay, with the shortest name and the longest odds in the Valley Forge Handicap, had the most speed over a deep, muddy track and brought joy to some scattered backers with a $15.90 mutuel. One of the busiest young mares on the Nation's race tracks, Zay turned in her sixth victory in 23 starts this year and had four stake horses behind her as Jockey Ken McCombs drove her across the line three lengths in advance of Walter M. Jefford's Firethorn.

Threadneedle, heavily played, jumped into the air at the break and weakened badly after getting to the front of Zay at the far turn. The other two in the field failed to be prominent at any stage.

It was one those days when racing and football go on but other outdoor sports are canceled. Rain fell throughout the program and the track, slow at the start of the program, was a mass of mud for the feature event.

Zay was clocked in a mediocre 1:49 3-5 for the mile and a sixteenth. Scratches riddled the program and the final races were run through the semi-darkness.

Solarium Easy Winner.

Solarium, a son of Victorian owned by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, showed the way to 11 other juvenile maidens in the day's opening event, winning by a length and a quarter over Lucky Omen, representing the Fairfields Stable. This money went to Versailles, a member of the betting field, which came from the far reaches of the group. Solarium provided a $7.40 mutuel.

Steeplechasing was conducted over a heavy track and the public's chief investment was in the right place. Rideaway, the property of Gladys Whitney, won by eight lengths with Flying Feathers second and Heigh Stone third. Navarin set the pace to the tenth fence, where he fell, and Rideaway took command, never to be headed. Calixtus also fell at the eleventh fence. Rideaway paid $4.20 to his army of backers.

Fast Express Surprises.

Mrs. K. N. Gilpin, Virginia matron, had reason to cheer in the third race. Fast Express, a Clock Tower gelding claimed by her for $2,500, surprised by defeating a group of $5,000 sprinters. Lou Machado, of Charles Town fame, gave the winner a rousing ride. Timber Lady, the reformed half miler, was second ahead of Rock X, of the Tranquility Farm entry. Fast Express, teamed in the betting with Teddy's Star, paid $13.50.

Mille M., a sister of Roman Soldier, finished second to Coramine, stablemate of Seabiscuit, in the fourth race, the Broad Run Purse which drew five juvenile fillies to the post. Dressy, installed the favorite, was third to the $6.30 shot. Coramine ran Fitter into defeat and was in front to the end.

The unusual in racing developed in the Corsica Purse. Court Dance, of the Joyner entry, looked as if she were going to pass and defeat Evening Shadow in the stretch run but the filly slowed down to jump over marks left on the track by the starting gate and failed to regain her stride in time to catch the pacemaker. Evening Shadow paid $4.80. Little Sally was a well beaten third in the field of five competing at a mile and 70 yards.

‡A. J. Joyner entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EVENING SHADOW, $4.80, $2.40, out; COURT DANCE (entry), $2.20, out; LITTLE SALLY, out.

EVENING SHADOW favored by the break, was hustled along in front and finished under punishment. COURT DANCE went in air at bell, was rushed up to be closest to pace, but lost stride while shying at wheel tracks left by starting stall on stretch. LITTLE SALLY raced on outside from beginning.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:56. Off 3:57½. Winner, Mrs. R. H. Heighe's dk. ch. m. (5), by Camp Fire—Zenoia. Trained by J. A. Boniface. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49 3-5.

†Walter M. Jefford's entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZAY, $15.90, $5.10, out; FIRETHORNE (entry), $3.50, out; THREADNEEDLE, out.

ZAY, off in first flight, took lead early, was taken back off pace of THREADNEEDLE and rallied through stretch to hold FIRETHORNE safe. The latter gained gradually and showed good effort. THREADNEEDLE went in air at bell and stopped from hustling tactics. GIANT KILLER was poorly handled.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place same. Went to post 4:25. Off 4:26½. Winner, Mrs. John Bosley, jr.'s, b. g. (4), by Sea Scamp—Dimlight. Trained by John Bosley, jr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:52 1-5.

Chief Thunderbird, Olsen in Mat Feature

Karl Davis, Lopez Meet At Turners

Colorful Indian Chief Is Seeking 5th Straight Victory.

Chief Thunderbird, one of the most colorful wrestlers to hit town since Laverne Baxter spread his reign of terror here last winter, will unlimber his big guns in the direction of Cliff Olsen, the former Gustavus Adolphus football hero, tonight at Turner's Arena in Daddy Joe Turner's headline match.

Thunderbird already has displayed his might in four matches—each a smashing victory—and a triumph tonight will establish the Chief as the No. 1 drawing card, and no doubt prove the magnet for drawing those terrific crowds to the Fourteenth street emporium of grunt and sock.

Never before has Thunderbird had top billing in Washington. He challenged the winner of the Cox-Olsen match last Thursday and he is probably tickled that Cox isn't the one to meet him. Fortunately for Olsen, he won the bout after tossing Kansas Joe clear out of the ring and his foot clean through a ringside seat. It was a funny finish.

Thunderbird made the grade by toppling Jack Hader in the third round of their scheduled four-rounder.

The Chief, as you will no doubt see for yourself, takes things easy at the start, laying in wait for the enemy to rough it up. Then Thunderbird's thunder claps, and he brings into play his Indian choke, his bear hang, his death lock, and his famous Indian war dance. By the way, that war dance gets 'em.

A semiwindup calculated to bring fans to their feet finds Vincent Lopez, the Mexican who once was world's title claimant, meeting Karl Davis, a villain that is a villain of the first water. Lopez walloped Dr. Freddie Meyers in his 1937 debut a few weeks ago.

An all-foreign 30-minute brawl will involve Grandowich, the Russian champion, and Hans Steinke, the bald eagle from Germany. In other brawls Bill Sledge squirms with Casey Berger and Mayes McLain takes on Joe Meizner. The curtain is raised at 8:30.

Dobson Drills Terps Inside For Florida

Rain drove the Maryland grid squad indoors yesterday as it looked to the homecoming tilt with the Florida Gators at College Park Saturday, but the time in Ritchie Coliseum was well spent.

Coach Frank Dobson took advantage of the occasion to go over the defense in the efforts to stop Capt. Walter Mayberry and company, and after a siege in this phase of the game, the Terps engaged in signal drills. Two elevens ran through plays after both had been drilled in the defensive maneuvers.

Florida has other good backs in addition to Mayberry, its all-American candidate, and Dobson has to guard against giving too much attention to the Gator ace. It is to be expected that Josh Cody will strive to take advantage of Mayberry, both as a power on attack and as a threat to make the Gator plays go.

Ken Willis, is an all-around back, who is not many steps back of Mayberry, while Red McGhee, Moon Mullins and others are capable.

Maryland is revamping its attack for the Florida game and will show a variety of stuff that has not been pulled out of the bag previously this year.

National Capital Field Trial Club To Stage Events Today at Seneca

Magruder Farm Will Be Scene of Program; Entry List Large.

By Bill Ackerman.

Hunting dog enthusiasts will be headed, this morning, for the Magruder Farm at Seneca, Md., for the fall trials of the National Capital Field Trial Club, which will get under way at 9:30 with the running of the first heat in the Shooting Dog Stake, and come to a grand finale tomorrow afternoon with the All-Age Stake.

The running of these stakes are of great interest, not only to those sportsmen who love to follow good dogs through the fields during the open season, but to dog lovers in general, for the field trial is the epitome of hunting dog training.

From the standpoint of bending "man's best friend" to his work, their ability is wonderful, and gratifying to their owners and handlers, but it is truly beautiful and just as interesting to the large gallery of spectators, from the occasional chase or flash-point of some youngster in the Derby to the perfectly finished skill of the veterans in the all-age.

The heats in the Derby will get going somewhere around 3 o'clock this afternoon and probably finish sometime early Saturday morning. Right here is a good place to point out these puppy events are not just a necessary evil of the game, to be lightly passed by in favor of the old dogs, for if their initial training has been right and they place here, it is a very good indication that they will go on to place in the other events later.

Many of the mistakes made by the youngsters in their running are not counted against them in the judging if they have evidence of a good nose and show a real desire to find the bird, for at this time these qualities far outweight minor faults, and after all it takes age to acquire the necessary staunchness to flushing and shooting.

Their eagerness and joyous abandon generally has far more attraction for the spectators than does the finished care and sureness of the old dogs.

Frank Kidwell has entered his Porter trained dog, Just Jim, that romped home with the honors in the Shooting Dog Stake last April in the Spring Trials held at Walter Johnson's farm, at Germantown, and he will be a good one to keep your eyes on today.

Ford Young's Valient Three Spot will be in the All-Age Stakes on Saturday; if you remem ber it was this grand Llewellyn setter's win in April that give him top honors in the all-age for the third consecutive running.

Dr. E. E. Huffer will have several of his dogs in the different events and they are worth watching any time. There are, altogether, close to a hundred entries, from Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

The public is cordially invited to this twenty-sixth annual fall field trials, at Seneca, reached by way of Rockville and Darnstown. Once beyond the latter place there will be small signs for guidance.

Local Boxers Vie.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 27.—Seven fighters representing the Terminal Y. M. C. A., of Washington, will appear on the American Legion boxing program here Friday night. They will oppose boys from the Sixth Ward Democratic Club, of Baltimore. Glenn Drake, Washington, meets James Pearre, Baltimore, in the five-round main bout, and Carroll Wright, Washington, faces Billy Carrigan, Baltimore, in the semi-final. Other Washington boys on the bill are Whitey France, Harry Donn, Joey Brown, Buck Walker and Jack White.

Walter Johnson, former Nats' ace hurler, is shown here with Just Jim, owned by Frank Kidwell, which won the Shooting Dog Stake last spring. Just Jim is entered in the field trials today at Seneca, Md.

(News item: A co-ed will kick points after touchdown for American University, according to Gus Welch.)

Act I.

It is late in the final period and American University has scored a touchdown, making the score, Hampden-Sydney, 7; American, 6. Head Coach Gus Welch looks around for his point-kicker to send in and save the day. Welch: "Where in tarnation has that girl gone, she was sitting here just a minute ago?"

Substitute Guard: "I dunno. Last time I saw her she was makin' eyes at that dumb halfback down at the other end of the bench."

Reserve End: "Naw, she was holdin' hands with the center. I saw 'em myself."

Welch (a bit impatiently): "Well, where'd she disappear to; where is she now? Didn't anybody see her leave the bench? Hey, manager, where's our place-kicker? I need her to save the game."

Manager (perplexed, like any manager): "Golly, coach, I've been so busy around here I haven't had time to watch her. Seems like all the other boys had their eyes on her anyway."

Welch (downright disgusted): "This is a pretty mess. We make a touchdown and have a chance to tie the score, and our field-goal kicker disappears. I guess I'll have to let one of the ordinary players try it."

Chorus: "Here she comes, coach. Here she comes! Hey, hurry, Mabel. We just scored a touchdown and need the extra point to tie. Get a move on."

Welch: "C'mon, young lady. Get in there and get that point for us; we need it to tie. Where've you been, anyway?"

Welch (losing all patience): "Why in blazes can't you?"

Point-after-Touchdown Kicker: "Why, it's perfectly obvious. My ensemble doesn't match the other team's colors. You can't expect me to appear in public like this."

(Mr. Welch loses his temper, his extra-special point-after-touchdown kicker, and American U. loses the game in one motion.)

We've heard any number of reasons for Georgetown's inability to get going this season, and just in case you'd like to know we pass 'em along—but we can't guarantee them. They are as follows:

1. The boys don't like the food they're getting. The steaks, we have it on good authority, are only 1½ inches thick rather than the customary 2. We'd like to conduct a personal inquiry into that angle.)

2. They don't like "Mush" Dubofsk because he doesn't address them as "Mister" before he bawls 'em out.

3. They can't get along with Gabe Murphy, graduate manager.

4. They're tired of playing football. (No side remarks, please.)

5. They suspect the team manager of being a Japanese spy.

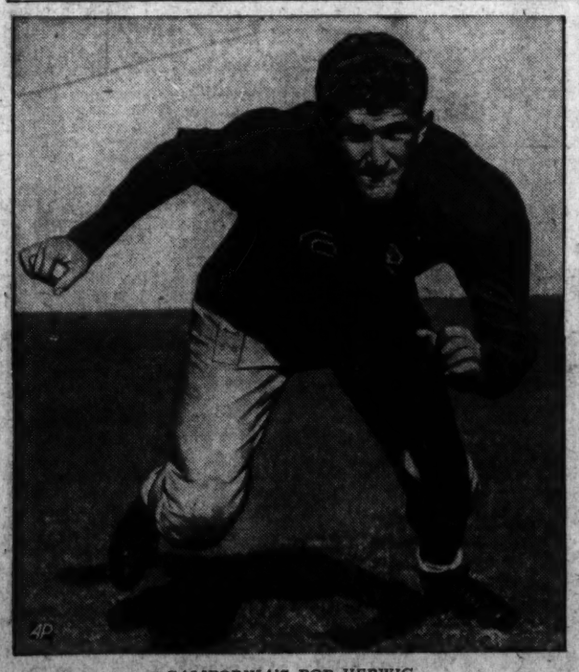
Speaking of local ratings, which we are now, it appears that Maryland is the No. 1 team, with George Washington, second; Catholic University, third, and Georgetown University last, and there is the fly in the ointment. Georgetown tied Penn—and outplayed it, according to qualified observers, while Maryland lost to the Quakers, 28-21, early in the season. Hence, the question arises, doesn't that give the Hoyas preference over the Terps.

The question, however, will be definitely settled, so far as we are concerned, November 20, when Georgetown and Maryland meet at Griffith Stadium. Meanwhile, we'll go blithely on with our ratings.

Grid Rivalry Renewed.

Hampden-Sydney, Va., Oct. 27.—Hampden-Sydney will renew football relations with V. P. I. at Blacksburg Saturday after a lapse of eight years.

WATCH THIS MAN:—



CALIFORNIA'S BOB HERWIG.
Football made a baseball star famous.

A young giant who got into athletics early and intends to stay there all his life is Bob Herwig, the University of California's star center.

At the Pomona, Calif., high school, Herwig won 10 awards in football, baseball, basketball and track. He came to Berkeley primarily as a crack baseball outfielder. Since then his achievements have made him most famous in football.

Herwig shines as a defensive fullback. Sports writers checking up on him during his sophomore year said that, in a number of games, he made 60 per cent of his team's tackles. Last season he snagged a lateral pass by Southern California and ran to a touchdown. He can pass a football 90 yards. Coach Stub Allison says "Herwig would be just as good as an end or fullback."

Herwig was co-captain of the Bear basketball team last year, runs the 440, still plays baseball and has branched out into swimming. He likes social life and serves on many college dance committees.

Herwig is 22 years old, stands 6 feet 4 and weighs 210. He is majoring in education and physical education with a view to becoming a coach. He works his way through school—at various odd jobs.

The big Bear center has his own press agent. He is married. His co-ed wife writes football articles for an Oakland paper.

Punch Wins Cesarewitch Stake Race

6 Americans Hold Ticket on Winner; Fet 2d, Solar Bear 3d.

By the Associated Press.

Newmarket, England, Oct. 27.—Extending the tradition that no horse ever wins the race twice, T. Westhead's Punch today captured the ninty-ninth running of the Cesarewitch Stakes over 2¼ miles of muddy going.

A favorite in the early stages of betting, but held at 17 to 1 today, the 4-year-old son of Lancegaye-St. Judy lived up to his reputation as a lover of mud. He forged to the front in the last 50 yards and pulled away to finish a length in front of Mrs. Sidney Freeman's Fet, last year's winner. E. Robson's Solar Bear trailed by another two lengths for third money.

Sir Alfred Butt's Near Relation was among the 28 also rans as also were the two American-owned horses—Mrs. Corlette Glorney's Fox Star and A. K. Macomber's Idaho. Near relation was fifth and Idaho sixth, back of the three leaders, and Repondant, which wound up fourth.

The result of the race, run in a drenching rain, determined the distribution of some $7,000,000 in the Irish Sweepstakes. Six Americans held tickets, with $150,000,000 each, on the winner.

As in every renewal of the stakes since the war except one, the favorites failed their backers. The popular choice was Faites Vos Jeux, backed down to 6 to 1, but Lady Nuttall's gelding, as well as the heavily supported Epigram and Maranta, ran out of the money.

The visibility was so poor that little was seen of the horses until they were 4½ furlongs from home. At that point, Repondant had a clear lead with his stablemate, Fet, close up with Epigram, Punch and Empire Son.

A quarter of a mile from home, Fet, on the rail, took the lead. At the same time Jockey Sammy Wragg moved Punch into third position. Fet began to weaken while Punch stepped up the tempo. Westhead's colt caught last year's winner 50 yards from the judges and easily pulled away in the final strides, covering the distance in 4 minutes 6 seconds.

Jack Hagerty, Meehan Drill Pass Attacks

Manhattan to Arrive Tomorrow, Rooters and Band.

Laterals, forwards, and all kinds of passing attacks are expected to be seen Saturday at Griffith Stadium when the Kelly green clad gridders of Manhattan meet the Blue and Gray of Georgetown University.

This was made evident today when reports from the Manhattan camp revealed Coach Chick Meehan has been sharpening up his aerial attacks in preparation for the Hoyas—the very same thing Coach Jack Hagerty has been drilling his squad on all week.

But above all, the greatest battle is expected to be seen in the line play. Manhattan comes here with a heavy shifty line, staunch on the defense and fast on the offense. The Jaspers boast a line that has only once this season crumbled under pressure and given way for a score. The lone touchdown was made by a strong Texas A. and M. eleven.

Georgetown's powerful, heavy line even boasts a much better record. Not once this season has the Hoya line surrendered to charging backs. The Hoyas, it is well remembered are weak against passes, and it has been through this channel that most scores have been made.

Manhattan rooters and followers, eager to see their team break into the scoring column with a victory over its old rival Georgetown University will arrive in town tomorrow morning with plans already made for a big time. Special trains, buses and a huge auto caravan are expected to bring more than 500 alumni members and rooters here for the battle.

C. U. Reserves May Replace First Eleven

Dutch Bergman Displeased With Regulars After St. Louis Game.

Spirited football reserves of Catholic University loom as a distinct menace to the starting players nowadays as Coach Dutch Bergman continues preparation for C. U.'s game with West Virginia Wesleyan at Brookland a week from Saturday, November 6.

Displeased at the tackling and general play of several of his regulars in the St. Louis U. game last week, Bergman yesterday was prepared to experiment in several positions until rain confined his players to gymnasium work.

A change already planned will find Joe Bunsa either ousting or alternating with brilliant Al Calabrese at left end. Though Calabrese is one of the best prospects among the sophomores, Bunsa's superior experience stands him in good stead.

Bergman also is reported to be definitely interested in Joe Guyon's bid for a starting berth, the youthful Indian's natural ability and hustle having boosted his stock sky high of recent weeks. Carmon Pirro, reserve tackle, and Pete Osinski, second string center, are others who will be closely watched when weather permits open air practice, possibly today.

Time Out! BY CHET SMITH

We'll hafta call this game on account of darkness if these Indians don't speed up their signals.

Wheat Slumps As Overseas Orders Decline

Maximum Drop Is 2⅝ Cents a Bushel; Prices Rally at Close.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—Jolted by heavy selling ascribed in large measure to eastern sources, wheat late today plunged downward to overnight maximum losses of 2⅜ cents a bushel. The selling movement was associated with statements that out of the 200,000,000 bushels surplus of wheat in the United States, only about 10 per cent has been sold since the season started nearly four months ago.

Fractional rallies at the last overcame part of the effects of the fall of values, but not until Chicago May wheat contracts had reached within 2 cents of the season's bottom price record.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1¾@2 cents under yesterday's finish. December 95⅞@96, May 95¾@95⅞, July 90¾@90⅞; corn 2¼ off to ½ up, December 58@58⅛, May 59⅜@59¾, July 60⅝; oats ⅜@½ down, December 29⅞, and rye showing ⅝@1¾ drop, December 73⅜. Provisions results were unchanged to 10 cents lower.

New Building Held Back By Higher Costs

Expense of Construction More Than Offsets Rising Rents.

New York, Oct. 27.—Building contracts awarded in the field of private enterprise declined in September for the third consecutive month, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. While the usual seasonal trend is downward from August to September, the decrease this year, amounting to 12.7 per cent, was unusually sharp. This decrease was greater than in any of the previous 12 years when the average decline amounted to only 5.3 per cent. For the first time in 1937 contracts in September were smaller than in the corresponding month last year, with a decrease of 9.5 per cent.

The slump in building contracts in September occurred in the face of a further rise in rents to a new peak for the recovery movement. The rent index, on the basis of 1926 as 100, rose from 86.7 in August to 87.5 in September. Rents in September were 10.3 per cent higher than a year ago and 41.6 per cent higher than at the low for the depression in January, 1934. They were only 3.6 per cent below the predepression level in 1929 when the index averaged 90.8.

The curtailment of building in September indicates that the depressing effect of high construction costs has finally more than offset the stimulating influence of rising rents. The building cost index rose during September from 117.3 to a new high of 117.6. The cost index was 101.7 a year ago and 73.2 at the low for the depression in June, 1932. In 1929 the index averaged 99.5. Costs at the present time are thus well above the predepression level, while rents are below that level.

Steel Demand Drops Sharply In Past Weeks

Industry Hopes That Auto Orders Will Check Declining Activity.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 27.—The steel industry is looking to automobile manufacturers for sufficient orders to prevent a further drop in production but is resigned to the belief spotty buying will prevail over the remainder of the year, Iron Age said today in its weekly review of the industry.

"Ingot production for the country has declined this week to 51 per cent from 55½ per cent last week," the trade publication said. "Operations have dropped so sharply in some districts the present low rates would suggest a bottom has been reached. At Chicago, for example, where there had been a decline of 33 points within four weeks, a further drop of only one point was recorded this week. At Pittsburgh, the rate was lost another eight points to 42 per cent, though in the neighboring Wheeling-Weirton District a rise of two points to 76 per cent has occurred.

"Rarely, if ever, in the history of the industry has so sharp a decline in production occurred within such a short time. It is now apparent stocks in the hands of consumers and jobbers at the end of the summer were larger than was generally realized by the industry itself.

"Meanwhile, the downward adjustment of steel production has probably taken place more rapidly than decline in consumption. While steel users are living off their stocks, the time when replenishment buying on a larger scale will be necessary is still uncertain. The industry is resigned to the belief spotty buying will prevail over the remainder of the year, but looks for a fairly substantial rise in January in line with usual seasonal expectations."

Practical Television Well in the Future

Chicago, Oct. 27 (AP).—Eugene F. McDonald, jr., president of Zenith Radio Corporation, expressed the opinion today that television for public use "is just around the corner for the stock salesman only."

He told Zenith stockholders at a special meeting that television for general use is still well in the future. Commenting on the possibilities of development, he said impulses for transmitting images might well go over telephone wires rather than through the air. Stockholders approved a broadening of Zenith's charter which will permit it to extend research in television and erect an experimental transmitter on company property here.

$50,000,000 Bills Offered By Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $50,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 133-day bills; and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or the branches, up to 2 p. m. tomorrow. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Weaken After Strong Start; Trading Declines; Commodities Lower.

New York, Oct. 27.—United States bonds were a shade firmer on promise of still easier money and Federal Reserve Bank purchases, but the stock and commodity markets grew listless. On a stock turnover of not much over a million shares, the smallest since the first week of the month, share prices closed irregularly lower. December wheat dropped two cents to 95⅞ cents a bushel.

Stock prices worked higher in the first hour and then the market lost interest. Gradual recession took place until well into the last hour. The Steel dividend proved to be somewhat of a disappointment and the shares sank about 2 points in the late dealings, after opening unchanged and first rising a point. Activity in steel was the smallest in a long time. Bethlehem gave up an initial gain of more than a point, and then held firm. Inland Steel lost 2 points in spite of a good profits report.

Rails and Metals Soften.

Great Northern Railway, on which a $2 dividend was voted last night after the close of the market, the first payment in nearly six years, opened 1½ points higher and then fell off. New York Central ruled firm as did Pennsylvania, Santa Fe. Most of the rails were down fractions. Mail order shares withdrew 1 to 2 points. Farm implements were mixed. Case gave up 4 points.

The show business did not help motor stocks much. General Motors and Chrysler weakened 1 to 2 points after early moderate gains. Public utilities were fractionally irregular. Consolidated Edison continued to retreat. Reynolds Tobacco and American Tobacco softened, but Philip Morris spurted more than 5 points on a good profits statement. Metals were pulled down 1 to 2 points on the half-cent reduction in the price of copper. Western Union had a sinking spell, possibly on the outlook for duller markets for a while, which will cut off much of the recent wire business in connection with the stock market.

Steel Dividend.

No new insight into the future of business could be gained from overnight news or that which came to the markets during the trading. The resumption of dividends on United States Steel common, while cheering in a way as marking a milestone, was lost in the fog of future uncertainty. The dividend of a dollar a share, against nine months' earnings of over $8 a share, meant that the corporation prefers to pay and undistributed profit tax and hold to the remainder of its cash, for use in improvements and against contingencies, rather than to risk a depleted treasury facing a business decline. No doubt a larger dividend would have been paid had current profits been running as high as expected earlier in the year. The corporation's operating rate gives a good cross section of the heavy industries—operations are falling and new orders have yet to appear in volume.

Profits Declining.

Opening of the motor show is not in itself of great value as a business prognosticator. The public may decide to take the new models at the higher prices, but motor car purchasing always reflects business rather than forecasts it, notwithstanding the fact that much of the buying is based in hope that present incomes will be maintained or increased. United States Steel profits and those for the 200-odd industrial companies that to date have reported for third quarter make it easy to show that the fall in stock prices has gone much further than justified by actual profits; so that the surplus in the decline is credited to prophecy of some further drop in profits. Profits so far reported are running about 18 per cent above a year ago, but for the nine months the rise was 42 per cent, an indication of the effect of higher costs.

Holding Cash.

It is profits and not actual dividend declarations that influence stock prices, and above all it is the prospect of profits rather than the profits already earned that turn the scales. On the basis of nine months' profits, approximately $8.26 a share after undistributed profits tax provision, Steel common is selling at a much lower price to profits ratio than usually is seen in the stock market for an issue of that quality. The rub comes in future. With the industry running currently at only half of capacity, and U. S. Steel at less than that, and with the remainder of this year and early months of next year uncertain, the market scarcely can be blamed for conservatism, just as the Steel directors are choosing to hold to their cash, pay the undistributed profits tax, steep as it is, and let stockholders wait. In long run it is better to avoid financial difficulties or worry about new financing than to receive overhasty dividends.

Steel Administration.

Because of the rumors that Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, was slated for a diplomatic post, rumors which never have had any confirmation, many jumped to the conclusion that Mr. Taylor's resignation from the chairmanship, to take effect next April, meant his withdrawal from the affairs of the Steel Corporation. That is by no means true. After the installation of Edward R. Stettinius as chairman next spring Mr. Taylor will continue a member of the steel board and an adviser on policy. It was made clear a long time ago, before the political rumors came up, that Mr. Taylor was planning to turn over the chairmanship to another. The additional assumption that Mr. Taylor is leaving because his deal with the C. I. O. was not approved by the board also is said to be erroneous.

Exchange to Speed Ticker Quotations

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange announced today a "flash" quotation service on its tickers for periods of heavy trading and delayed recording of transactions. Adoption of the system was in line with efforts to lessen the ticker's lag in reporting trades. In the big markets of last week the ticker at one time was as much as 22 minutes behind the market and frequently it was 6 to 8 minutes late.

General Motors 3d Quarter Net 99c Per Share

Compares With $1.48 in the Previous Quarter and 75c a Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 27.—General Motors Corporation reported today earnings of $42,118,179 for the quarter ended September 30, equivalent to 99 cents a common share. This compared with $63,436,545 or $1.48 the previous quarter and $32,331,523 or 75 cents a share for the corresponding quarter of 1936.

The net earning for the first nine months of 1937 was $148,074,335, against $168,314,959 for the first nine months of 1936. Share earnings for the latest nine months were $3.46 compared with $3.92 in the like 1936 period.

In a statement accompanying the earnings report, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairmen, discussed the current business condition and said the corporation "is hopeful that the present situation will be found to be merely an adjustment of temporary character, and that the recovery movement will continue in the ascendancy and will more completely run its normal course.

North American.

The North American Co., one of the country's largest utilities, of which the Potomac Electric Power Co. and the Capital Transit Co. are units, reports that consolidated net earnings for the 12 months ended September 30, were $17,600,320, equal to $2.05 per share on the common stock. This consolidated balance for common stock represented an increase of 28.32 per cent over the corresponding figure of $13,715,756, equal to $1.60 per share, for the 12 months ended September 30, 1936. Net earnings are after all deductions, including appropriations for depreciation reserves and preferred dividends.

On September 30, the subsidiaries of the North American Co. were furnishing electric service to 1,188,364 customers. Of these, residential customers numbered 1,036,367, an increase of 22,792 during the 12 months ended on that date.

Pennsylvania Railroad.

Pennsylvania Railroad reports for September net railway operating revenue of $6,948,894, a decrease of $1,443,727 compared with September last year. Freight revenues decreased $758,953 but passenger revenues gained $382,653. For the nine months ended September 30 net railway operating income was $56,476,401, a decrease of $2,320,304 compared with the 1936 period.

Business Drop Is Accelerated During Month

New York, Oct. 27.—During September and the first half of October the downward trend in business activity became more extensives, according to the monthly review of business conditions by the National Industrial Conference Board. The only favorable developments were the increases in the estimates of crop yields and farm income and the maintenance of demand at a relatively high level for certain types of retail merchandise.

Production fell off in the building, petroleum, steel, and electric power industries. Automobile production was curtailed by somewhat less than the usual seasonal amount during September, largely because two large producers continued the production of 1937 models well into the month. On a seasonally adjusted basis, bituminous coal production advanced by about 13 per cent. On a similar basis, the index of machine tool orders rose rather sharply in September as a result of a material increase in foreign orders. Domestic orders for machine tools dropped about 8 per cent below the August level and were only 51 per cent of those reported at the peak of recovery last April.

Domestic retail trade advanced by substantially more than seasonal proportions during September. The dollar value of department store sales reached the recovery peak established in February. Department store prices, as measured by the conference board's index continued upward, but the increase was not sufficient to offset the sharp rise in value, with the result that net physical volume recovered most of the August losses. Sales in small towns and rural areas increased by almost double the usual seasonal amount. Variety and five-and-ten-cent store sales also increased more than seasonally.

Cotton Lower; December 8.13

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 27.—After cotton had sagged back to the 8-cent basis today, losses were mostly recovered. March eased from 8.10 to 8.01, closing at 8.08, with final prices 2 points higher to 5 net lower.

The market opened 4 points lower to 1 higher. Foreign interests bought but this was counterbalanced by domestic liquidation. A late morning recovery brought the market back to around the previous close but an afternoon reversal brought declines to net losses of 6 to 9 points.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was easier today under renewed liquidation and commission house selling, promoted by easiness of allied markets. Final prices were 8 points net lower. Sales 121 lots. Bleachable, spot nominal; December and January closed 7.23; March, 7.25; May, 7.30.

Gt. Northern Dividend.

New York, Oct. 27 (AP).—Directors of Great Northern Railway Co. today declared a dividend of $2 a share on the preferred stock, the first payment since $1 was paid on February 1, 1932. The dividend is payable December 20 to holders of record December 1.

Ingersoll on Penn. Board.

Philadelphia, Oct. 27 (AP).—C. Jared Ingersoll, Philadelphia, was elected a director of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. today. He succeeds the late Edgar C. Felton.

Curb Declines; Trading Light

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 27.—Curb stocks dwindled fractions to around a point today in one of the slowest sessions in nearly a month. Widest shifts were recorded in the higher priced group, while in the more active stocks fractional gains and losses were fairly evenly distributed. Many issues held level throughout the day.

Dropping a point or so were Aluminum Co. at 92, Creole Petroleum 24, Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. 75 and Gulf Oil at 41⅞. Losing fractions were American Gas & Electric 22⅛; Northern States Power "A," 11⅝; Sherwin Williams, 87½; United Wall Paper, 2⅛, and McWilliams Dredging at 11½.

Among those a little higher were Electric Bond & Share at 9⅝, American Cyanamid "B," 25¼; Pantepec Oil, 4⅞; United Gas, 5, and Wright Hargreaves at 6¾.

Volume totaled 171,000 shares, the smallest since October 4, compared with 278,000 shares yesterday.

Bob Burns Says—

My uncle had always been use'ta hirin' and firin' his help on the farm whenever he took a notion, but he came out here and found out that they've got a sort of rule that—no matter what an employe does, you have'ta give him a week's notice.

He thought the idea sounded pretty big and when he got back home he could hardly wait for his hired man to do somethin' wrong so he could try the idea out on him. Finally one day my aunt says, "You know that hired man broke the hoe handle today?" My uncle says, "He did!—Well sir, I'll give him a week's notice." My aunt says, "And furthermore he broke the door on the henhouse!" My uncle says, "Well then, that settles it—I'll give him two weeks' notice!"

C. I. O. Refuses To Dissolve as A.F.L. Suggests that organization "with all rights and privileges" enjoyed before the split.

2. That conferences be held to adjust all cases of rival unions affiliated with the two big organizations, designed to bring all the C. I. O.-chartered unions into the federation, presumably by merger with the competing federation unions.

3 That policies not agreed on shall be submitted to the next A. F. L. convention. In the meanwhile there shall be an aggressive organizing campaign on both industrial and craft lines as conditions may warrant."

4. That the C. I. O. be immediately dissolved, since the program calls for "one united, solidified labor movement in America and termination of division and discord now existing"

The 12 unions which would return at once to the A. F. of L., are those of the Automobile Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Flat Glass Workers, Iron, Steel & Tin Workers, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, United Mine Workers, Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers, Rubber Workers, Textile Workers, Fur Workers, Newspaper Guild and Ladies Garment Workers.

The first 10 which were suspended by the A. F. of L., were estimated to have a membership of 1,000,000 at the time they formed the C. I. O. The Newspaper Guild and the Ladies Garment Workers later withdrew from the federation.

Not Told of Statement.

The C. I. O. forces soon issued a statement to the dozen reporters waiting outside the conference room, rejecting the program. However, it was learned later, the A. F. of L. committee inside was not notified of the statement for a considerable time. They finally learned "to our surprise and amazement," Harrison said, "that the chairman of the C. I. O. committee had left the conference room and issued a public statement rejecting our proposal without advising the conference."

The C. I. O. statement, issued by Philip Murray, head of the 10-man committee representing the Lewis forces in the conference, declared the federation plan called for the A. F. L. chartered unions to "desert and betray the 23 new national and international unions that have, since November, 1935, affiliated with the C. I. O."

It declared the "abject surrender" called for in C. I. O. dissolution would have the effect of "millions of organized workers" now in the C. I. O. "relinquishing their membership of any kind of union, and creating the kind of situation that would render it impossible for any legitimate labor organization to ever reorganize them."

Murray Cites Success.

It closed with the assertion that "it has been clearly demonstrated by the C. I. O. that the mass production and other basic industries must be organized on industrial lines. The A. F. of L. proposal indicates that the American Federation of Labor is still determined to prevent such organization, even though it may prevent the organization of the millions of unorganized workers in such industries."

Murray, at the same time made public a statement setting forth again the C. I. O.'s "magnificent success" as proving that its policies and aims "meet the demands and requirements of the workers."

When the conference broke up at 1 p. m., Murray announced the adjournment until next Thursday, which he said the A. F. of L. threemen committee had asked on the grounds that they had other engaments and duties in the interim.

Unions Autonomous.

"These are all international, autonomous unions," he said, "each with its own constitution, its own officers and completely self-sustaining. And we said to the A. F. of L. committee, 'How can you expect to take over these autonomous, self-sustaining groups and merge them into the A. F. of L. unions?'"

The C. I. O. on Tuesday had proposed that a C. I. O. department, autonomous and retaining complete control over its industrial unions, be created within the federation in order to unite the two vast bodies.

Following the adjournment, the A. F. of L. committee went into conference with William Green, federation president, and Lewis was apprised of the developments by the C. I. O. delegates.

It was nightfall before the Harrison statement came from the A. F. L. session. The statement, relating the day's activities, said the C. I. O. group had made "extravagant and unsupported claims of membership, but on analysis it was clear to the committee of the A. F. of L. that the C. I. O. has little, if any, dues-paying membership other than the members of the organizations that originally belonged to the A. F. of L."

Doubts Need of Duality.

The statement said the A. F. of L. proposal "affords a reasonable possibility of healing the breach" in the labor movement, offering full membership to the suspended C. I. O. unions, "a means for adjustment between all the conflicting organizations" and, as well, an intensive organization campaign along both craft and industrial lines.

"Since the sponsors of the C. I. O. have been urging industrial organization as the reason for establishment of that committee," it said, "and our proposal offers that form of organization where feasible, there does not seem to be any further need for the existence of a dual labor movement in America. We therefore, proposed that this destructive force be abandoned immediately upon the consummation of an agreement providing for peace."

It declared the C. I. O. plan "provides no basis for a settlement," but "simply means continuation and enlargement of the existing confusion and division. The C. I. O. proposal would permanently establish and maintain two organizations within the American labor movement."

"We have not received any help from the representatives of the C. I. O. in composing the existing differences," it said, adding that "unless there is a change in their attitude . . . it is doubtful if any progress can be made toward peace."
